The Croquet Revival

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The young intellectuals take their croquet sets into parks and vacant lots and hold tournaments, being very scientific about each and every play.

Croquet has not been revived for everybody! Because the Victorians have been playing right along through the gay nineties and the roaring nineteen hundreds. Mrs. Baloil Puffer is complaining of her late opponent, Mrs. Cleveland Crisswell. "I don't mind Cora's winning the game," she is saying to her paid companion and yes-girl, Miss Minna Trodden, "but I will not have her telling me I was 'skunked.' It's unladylike and vulgar."

"She used to answer the doorbell in just any little thing at all, so the janitor told my maid, and one day the elevator man said to her, 'Lady, I've got some modesty even if you haven't,' and my dear, she was simply beside herself with rage and wrote a frightful letter to the renting agent, and—O, goodness! Is it my turn? What wicket am I for?" (Just two lovely guests who have been enticed against their better natures into a croquet game and are not much interested.)

Here's the family with a few chosen friends out on the side lawn with the croquet set all up and ready for a good stiff game. Sister Mildred is trying to make Esther, the Airedale pup, see reason, with no success, because Esther dearly loves to chase the croquet ball in its flight. To Mildred's left are a couple of guests who wish they were home. The cute girl to the right of the boy about to make a trick play is screaming and gurgling and telling Walter he's positively the limit, being such an old meanie and knicking her ball away down the line! The large girl on the extreme right is Aunt Nettie, who is a perfect fountain of questionable advice. "Now, Walter, listen," she's saying, "why don't you take your wicket and then hit Genevieve's ball, and take her away from the post, and then come back and knock Howard's ball away from Dorothy's!" The lawn is very bumpy, which is to be expected of all croquet grounds.

A young mother is a great trial as a partner. Can't seem to keep her mind on the ball, but is forever exclaiming, "Listen—was that the baby? Didn't you hear something?"

Harriet's ball has gone out of bounds, over in the pansy bed, and so, seeing that no one is paying much attention, Harriet is going to put it back on the croquet ground, a yard or so to the good.

The younger set, or the bright young people, as they prefer to be known, like to get all het up with gin and Scotch before starting the game. Because this seems to relieve that tension attendant on who will win and all that. (Joe and Sally have paused at the second wicket to give a rendition of the song hits from the latest show.)

The suspicious husband. "I'm not saying you moved the ball. All I said was that it seemed funny it had got where it is before you had a chance to play!"

genuine CONGOLEUM RUGS rival the most expensive floor-coverings

I used to long for a real Oriental rug but this is just as beautiful—and so much easier to care for.

The distinctive pattern shown on the floor of this attractive living room is "PERSAN"—Congoleum Rug 612.

"CONCORD" . . . early American hooked-rug effect. Rug No. 605.

"WINDSOR" . . . an ingeniously designed tile pattern that is "different." It is Congoleum Rug No. 602.

"BOUQUET" . . . a quaint and charming Colonial design. It is Rug No. 324.

"PALMETTO" . . . Rolls in a rug with an air of sparkling cleanliness sure to delight the modern housewife's heart. It is Rug No. 6

"POPPY" . . . cheerful as a flower garden. Rug No. 609.

Just because

Congoleum Rugs are so inexpensive is no reason why you shouldn't be proud to own them. Many families who can afford more costly floor-coverings have placed Congoleum Rugs all through their homes—

. . because genuine Congoleum Rugs are miles ahead of their modest price in style and in beauty of design.

. . because genuine Congoleum Rugs are so sanitary and so easy to keep immaculately clean—they bring golden hours of leisure to busy housewives.

. . because genuine Congoleum Rugs give the longest service and the biggest value for the money—economy is still a virtue.

Every rug is a masterpiece of color and design. Think of it—if you had hundreds of dollars to spend, you couldn't buy a more "expensively designed" rug.

Ask your dealer to show you the patterns reproduced here. When you see them displayed—a flood of harmonious color—it will be a case of love at first sight. And love that lasts. For every Congoleum design has that subtle "something different" which not only wins but holds your admiration.

Only in genuine Congoleum Rugs do you get such exclusive style and beauty. Only in genuine Congoleum Rugs do you get that extra wear resistance built in by the wonderful Multicote Process of manufacture.

And don't overlook these other practical advantages—cleaned in a moment with a damp mop—water-proof—sanitary, flat-lying. In every way Congoleum Rugs are the world's best buy in labor-saving floor-coverings.

Of course, there are rugs that look somewhat like genuine Congoleum and perhaps sell for a trifle less. But the style—the stunning color effects—the exclusive designs you find only in the real thing!

Look for the big Gold Seal display card in the windows of your local stores during October. It will guide you to the biggest value in labor-saving floor-coverings.

Pictorial History of Chicago

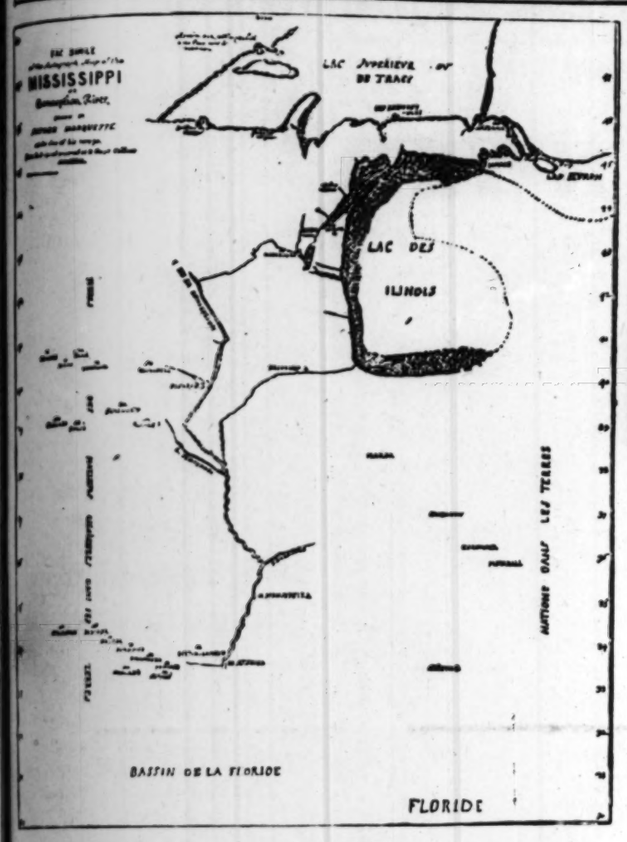
CHICAGO'S CAREER had its beginning a century and a half ago. The settlement was called Eschikagou then, and this is an old-time artist's imaginary view of how it looked in 1779.

(All illustrations except those from Chicago Historical society are from "History of Chicago," by A. T. Andreas.)



MARQUETTE'S MAP—A facsimile of Father Marquette's autographed map of the Mississippi and "Lac des Illinois," now Lake Michigan. Made at the time of his voyage, it is still preserved at St. Mary's college, in Montreal.

LOUIS JOLIET, who, with Father Marquette, first brought to the world's attention the possibilities of what some day was to become Chicagoland. He was the leader of the expedition that coursed the streams of the inland empire and crossed the portages that were destined to become celebrated.

FATHER MARQUETTE, the Jesuit priest who accompanied the fur trader, Joliet, to the country of the Illini in 1673 and who passed the winter of 1674-75 at Checagou. His was the first sojourn of a white man at this place.

(Illustration from Chicago Historical society.)

FIRST TO ARRIVE?—Many students of history maintain that, even before Joliet and Marquette visited this region, another illustrious explorer, Robert Cavelier Sieur de la Salle, passed up the Chicago river and across to the Illinois. He therefore is regarded as the first white man to see the prairie and stream forming the site of the present-day Chicago. The time was 1670.

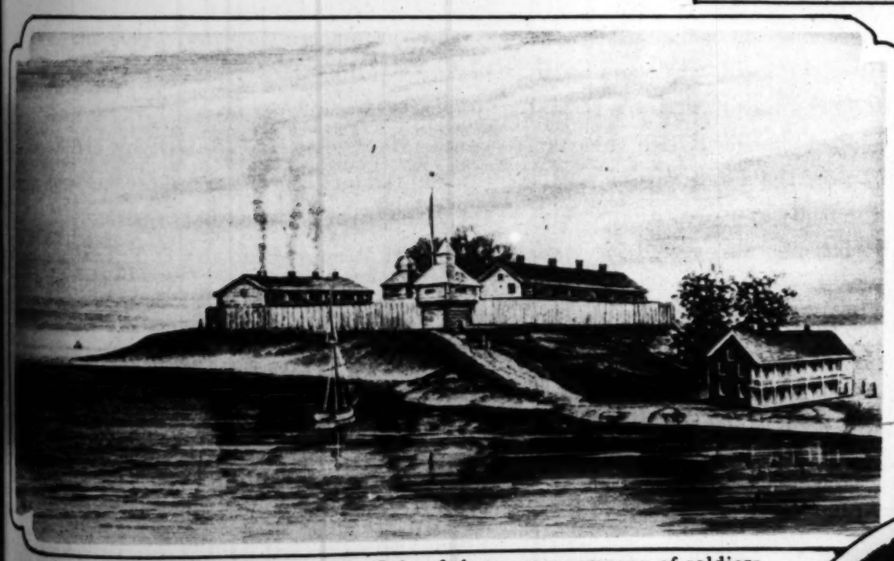
STARVED ROCK nowadays is a mecca for week-end vacationists from the central states, but in the Eighteenth century it was not so peaceful. In revenge for the assassination of their idolized leader, Pontiac, in 1769, the Pottawatomies joined other northwestern tribes in exterminating the Illinois, the tribe for which the state was named. Starved Rock was the scene of the battle that annihilated the once-powerful nation of Indians.



FORT DEARBORN IN 1803—In July of that year a company of soldiers under the command of Capt. John Whistler arrived at the mouth of the Chicago river and proceeded to build the first Fort Dearborn, named in honor of Gen. Henry Dearborn, then secretary of war. The fort stood on the right bank of the river, where the stream then turned to enter Lake Michigan, and just south of the Michigan avenue bridge of today.

THE SECOND FORT DEARBORN—Following the massacre, in which the first post was burned to the ground, a bigger and better Fort Dearborn was erected. The reconstruction was accomplished in 1816; this was the result.

BUSINESS PIONEER—Gurdon S. Hubbard reached Chicago in the fall of 1818. In 1834 he built the city's first brick building, known to scoffers of that time as "Hubbard's Folly," and he was the first meat packer. Hubbard Woods was named in his honor.

WHERE THE FIRST WHITE CHILD WAS BORN—For the first few years of its existence, Chicago consisted of only Fort Dearborn and the house and trading establishment of John Kinzie. It was here, in December, 1804, that little Miss Ellen Marion Kinzie made her appearance. The drawing was made in 1832. The cabin was situated north of the river, near the present site of Tribune Tower.

IT PAYS

—in attractive teeth . . . in protection against pyorrhea . . . in better all-round health

GUARD THE DANGER LINE

PHYSICIANS AND DENTISTS now know that diseased teeth and gums cause many serious ills. Not only pyorrhea, but rheumatism, heart trouble, nervous and kidney disorders may result. No one is so sure of health that he can neglect the teeth and gums.

Yet, thousands are really practicing neglect even while regularly brushing their teeth. They fail to protect The Danger Line . . . where Pyorrhea always begins . . . where many dental troubles so frequently occur.

Your gums thin out to a fine, delicate margin where they meet the teeth. This margin of tissue is The Danger Line. It is one of the easiest tissues of the body to injure—and easy to neglect. At this margin are tiny V-shaped crevices which encircle the base of each tooth. These tiny crevices cannot be penetrated by your tooth-brush without injury. So minute food particles constantly collect, ferment and generate dangerous acids that irritate the gums and attack the tooth structure. Then decay follows. The gums may become inflamed and bleed. And when they begin to recede, pyorrhea can quickly start. You simply cannot afford to neglect The Danger Line.

NOTICE THE DANGER LINE. At this margin of tissue are tiny V-shaped crevices. Do not injure it—for as long as it remains healthy, pyorrhea will not start. Don't risk too stiff a brush, or strong astringents or a gritty dentifrice. Its greatest enemy is acids—caused by fermenting food particles that lodge in the V-shaped crevices. Squibb's is a safe, protective dentifrice. It guards The Danger Line by neutralizing the irritating acids of decay.

SQUIBB'S MILK OF MAGNESIA is a pure, effective product that is free from any unpleasant, earthy taste. It has unsurpassed antacid and mild laxative qualities.

Fortunately it is easy to safeguard it—to protect your teeth against acids while you brush them to attractive brightness. Squibb's Dental Cream was developed specifically for this purpose. It contains more than 50% Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, universally known as a safe, effective antacid. Each time you brush your teeth with Squibb's, minute particles of Milk of Magnesia seep into every tiny crevice . . . neutralizing acids, protecting throughout the mouth.

Can you afford to use a dentifrice that does less than Squibb's? As long as The Danger Line remains intact and healthy, pyorrhea will not begin. Squibb's Dental Cream is effective and it is safe. It contains no grit, no strong astringents. Harmless if swallowed by children. It soothes tender tissue—excellent for massaging the gums. And it cleans beautifully.

A large tube of Squibb's is only 40c at any drug store. Begin using it regularly. You cannot start too soon protecting your teeth and gums at The Danger Line. It is easy to do—and every day of your life it keeps on paying.

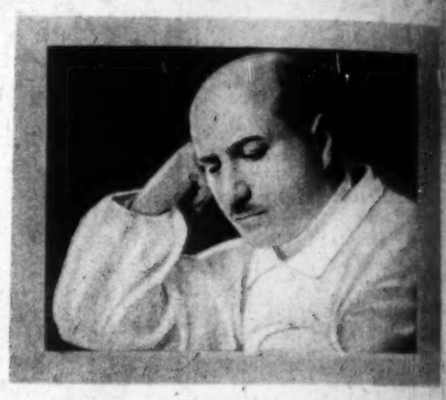
People who work indoors need this health protection

says Italy's great intestinal specialist



PROFESSOR DOCTOR PAOLO ALESSANDRINI is chief physician of all the hospitals of Rome. At the University of Rome he lectures on diseases of stomach and intestines. So crowded are his days that he rises at three in the morning to write the medical articles which have made him known to doctors everywhere. He is a Chevalier of the Italian Crown.

"TO check constipation and correct indigestion," Dr. Alessandrini says, "yeast has long been famous. Its laxative action is stimulating, not irritating. As the richest source of vitamin B it is particularly useful in run down states of health.

"Now the health value of fresh yeast has been doubled. When 'irradiated,' it is especially rich in vitamin D, the 'sunshine' vitamin, which builds hard, straight bones and sound teeth. It should be a godsend to those who work indoors."

A flood of living yeast plants is released in your digestive tract by each cake of Fleischmann's fresh Yeast. Gently stimulating, these tiny yeast plants reawaken sluggish intestines and soften the clogging food wastes. When constipation goes, appetite and digestion quicken. Fresh new energy is released. Telltale skin eruptions disappear.

And now this famous food brings you an added health protection. The new "irradiated" Fleischmann's Yeast is the richest food source of the mysterious "sunshine" vitamin. Most people, especially those of growing age (under twenty-five), need the "sunshine" vitamin daily. It builds sound, straight bones and teeth. It makes your body harder, tougher. It is essential for expectant and nursing mothers.

Has confining work indoors brought dull, headachy half-health? Has living away from the sun made you "soft"? World-famous doctors point the way to quick, natural health renewal. How easy it is—just three cakes daily of fresh yeast—Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

ON THE AIR! Fleischmann's Yeast Radio Hour. Tune in Thursday evenings with the National Broadcasting Company—47 associated coast-to-coast stations.

"At the end of the day too tired to enjoy the evening"

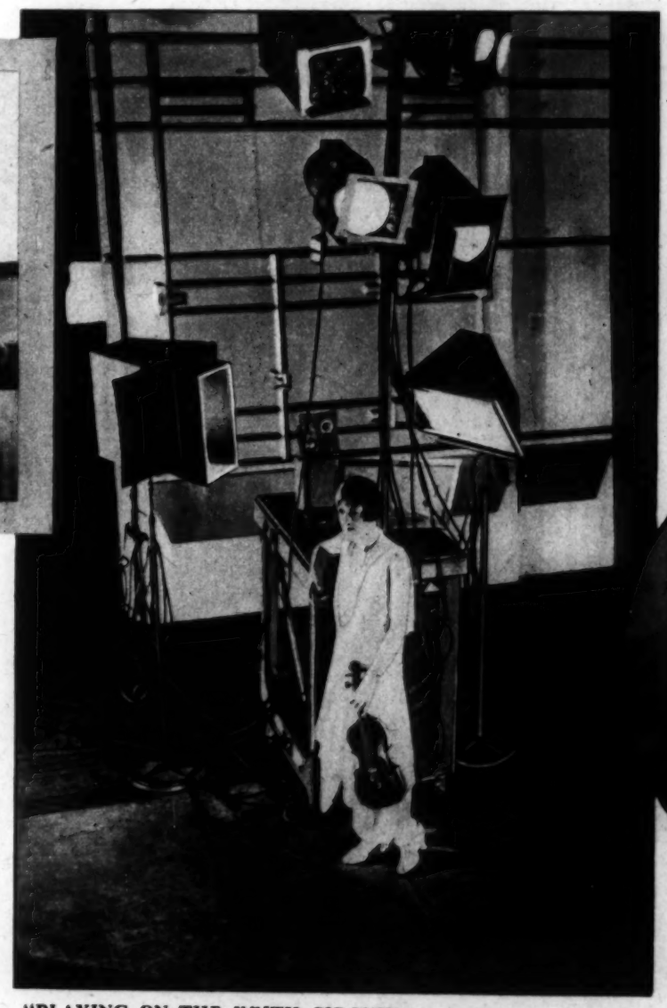
New York, N. Y.

"What the great doctors have said about yeast is certainly matched by my own experience.

"Close confinement to my desk day after day without exercise resulted, two years ago, in 'nervous' stomach and constipation. Headaches would stay with me for days.

"What three cakes a day of yeast did for me hardly seems possible. But suddenly I realized my constipation had been corrected. I could eat my meals without discomfort. I laughed at office difficulties which formerly had me stumped. I was able to enjoy the evenings with my family.

"I am still eating yeast. I find it keeps me in splendid condition."—H. J. LLOYD



"PLAYING ON THE KEITH CIRCUIT means indoor work and varying food," writes Helen Delvey of New Orleans. "For years I had indigestion and constipation. After eating Fleischmann's Yeast, my constipation disappeared. My complexion has improved a hundred per cent. My work has become a pleasure."

"Even caring for Jean had become a burden"

"Even the best baby ties a mother down," writes Mrs. W. A. Peters of Stamford, Conn. "I became nervous and irritable—was subject to indigestion and constipation. And my skin was terrible. My doctor suggested yeast. It improved my disposition and stopped all my tiresome 'miseries.'"

EAT THREE CAKES of Fleischmann's Yeast every day, before or between meals—just plain or in water, cold or as hot as you can easily drink. You can get it at grocers, restaurants, soda fountains.

A Year from now ...2 years or 5 or 10

YOU DREAM of what he will be like then ... As you dream do not forget this important fact: the kind of bones and teeth your baby is building now, will affect his appearance and his health all through life!

The most beautiful babies and the healthiest babies always have these characteristics: a well-shaped head, a full deep chest, a sturdy, well-knit framework, straight legs, well developed jaws and chin, and teeth that come in straight and evenly spaced.

These things do not come or fail to come by accident. They are built.

Whether your baby is building the right kind of bones and teeth now, at the very start, depends on whether you are supplying him with the proper materials.

Most of these materials he gets from his food—from milk and vegetables.

But there is one essential factor which is not obtainable in sufficient amount from food. It is Vitamin D.

Bottled Sunshine! Every baby needs it, physicians say, to help build strong straight bones and sound uncrowded teeth

There are two common ways to provide your baby with the Vitamin D he must have. Exposure to sunshine is one.

If your baby could get enough sunshine on his bare body every day of the year, it would provide him with enough Vitamin D.

But under modern living conditions, this is hardly possible. Weather prevents. Clouds, fog, smoke, clothing, shut out the precious health-protecting rays—the ultra-violet rays. Even ordinary window glass filters them out.

Bottled Sunshine—good cod-liver oil—is the surer safeguard, specialists say.

They further say that the kind of cod-liver oil given is very important. This is why so many physicians recommend Squibb's.

They know that Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil is guaranteed to be very rich in Vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin which helps to build good bones and teeth.

In addition it is very rich in another vitamin, Vitamin A, which promotes growth and increases resistance to many infections.

Ask your physician about Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil; he will tell you that the vitamin content of Squibb's will supply your baby with the factors he needs to build his bones and teeth properly from the start.

Le Début

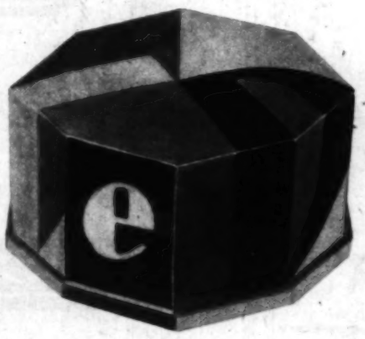
You know it means new skin loveliness—the moment you open the box!

For there in the strikingly gay paquet you see your own natural skin coloring . . . touched with a delicate glow . . . in a powder so smooth, so velvety, your fingers can scarcely resist touching it.

Poudre le Début . . . the new, modern face powder! And what a difference it makes in your skin . . . How unbelievably lovely the look of radiant vitality this faint iridescence imparts!

A far cry, indeed, from the old "mask" effect of face powder is its translucence. For it spreads so evenly . . . blends so perfectly . . . that it becomes a very part of the texture of your skin . . . while every least nuance of your own coloring is enhanced a hundred-fold.

Two years of scientific research—with newly discovered ingredients substituted for ingredients that were outmoded—made possible this radically different face powder . . . keyed to modern fashion and modern ways of living. It is a powder that adheres indefinitely . . . and without caking or streaking. It is a powder not only safe, but actually protective against the effects of burn, wind, dust and city soot.



It is a powder of exquisite fragrance . . . typically of Paris . . . the quintessence of the delightful Parfum le Début. And it is a powder which has proved itself decidedly economical to use!

You will find it at modern shops—or we will send you a generous supply in our smaller replica of the smart le Début box.

Comfortable! Stylish!

—at college or schools these fine pajamas offer real advantages on leisurely mornings and evenings or for refreshing sleep

They stay up without noticeable waistline pressure

For Youth all clothes must be stylish, and all must be comfortable. Youth sets the style of these modern times. And Youth . . . in dormitories and fraternities around the school and college campus . . . has placed its stamp of approval on Faultless Nobelt pajamas. It is interesting that students buy and wear this brand that has made the greatest pajama success the two metropolitan centers of New York and Chicago have seen since we started manufacturing fine nightwear in 1881.

Faultless offers innumerable models, tailored styles and exclusive designs (fashionable, artistic, collegiate or plain), combined with the first real comfort improvement ever made in pajamas—the famous resilient Nobelt waistband.

These pajamas have no drawstrings to get into invincible knots, to wrinkle the trousers, to hang in unsightly bunches, to pull out of their hem casing or to bind tightly and hinder circulation. In their place is a broad, flat and gently resilient band, that fastens with one lone button, and that holds the trousers up firmly and neatly but without noticeable waistline pressure—that expands and contracts easily with every movement of your body, that breathes with you, and that lets you rest and sleep with completely relaxed muscles!

They're swank! And they're comfortable! Obtainable at almost any department store or haberdashery shop. The Faultless Manufacturing Company, Baltimore, Md. Chicago Sales Office, Republic Bldg., 209 S. State Street. New York City Sales Office, 452 Fifth Ave. (at 40th Street).

"FAULTLESS" SINCE 1881 Nobelt

Night after night with rope around your waist—would it be any wonder if you were often to awake as tired and listless as when you went to bed? To use the inflexible pajama drawstring is just like wearing rope! It won't permit sound, restful sleep.

The Nobelt waistband is guaranteed to stay resilient. It can be laundered without fear. A tag is attached to every pair of Faultless pajamas insuring replacement of the entire garment if the waistband loses its resilience.

Dishes wash Faster

with these instant underwater suds

Read why, in less than a year, Super Suds became America's greatest dishwashing soap

Women are unwilling to go back to slow dissolving soaps after they have once learned the ease and speed of Super Suds.

YOU busy women—who find dishwashing takes far too much of your short day . . . here's a way to do dishes in one-third to one-half less time.

It's Super Suds. The most brilliant soap discovery of generations. Not a chip. Not a powder. But soap in the form of tiny, hollow beads; so small they can only be seen under a microscope. So tissue thin that they burst into suds the moment they touch water.

Millions of women are using this new bead form of soap to speed dishwashing—to eliminate dishwiping. On the market scarcely more than a year, Super Suds has already become America's greatest dishwashing soap!

Faster dishwashing with suds all through the water: Do you want to know why Super Suds washes dishes so much faster? Then make the simple two-minute test pictured above. See through the glass how Super-Suds bursts into instant suds . . . rich, creamy suds right down to the very bottom of the glass!

This is how Super Suds acts in your dishpan. The moment you turn on the dishwater, you get instant suds. Clear down to the bottom. Dishwater has no chance to get greasy, as with slow dissolving soaps. Silver, glasses, china, come shining clean in far less time.

No more dishwiping: Because Super Suds dissolves completely, it rinses off instantly. One hot rinse and every trace of soap film is gone. You don't need to wipe dishes. Just let them drain dry to spotless brilliancy. Let Super Suds do this just once for you. And you'll never wipe dishes again.

Whiter clothes in one less rinsing: Super Suds' instant, all-through-the-water suds get clothes clean in record time. And how easily this perfectly dissolved soap rinses out of clothes! You can get clothes shining clear and soap-free in actually one less rinse than you need with other soaps.

Do order Super Suds from your grocer today. Use it for dishes. For laundry. For wash bowl laundrying of fine silk underthings. For painted woodwork, or the new lacquered furniture. Super Suds keeps hands soft and white.

Make this amazing test!

Put a teaspoonful of Super Suds in a glass; a teaspoonful of any chip or flake in another. Now fill both glasses with water cool enough to be comfortable for hands.

Instantly, every bit of Super Suds rushes into suds all through the water. Instantly every drop of water in the glass becomes creamy with soapiness, while in the other glass, gummy chips float about, dissolving very slowly.

This is how these soaps act in your dishpan. This is why Super Suds cleans with such amazing swiftness.

New Paris Hats Must Match Ensembles

Individuality Runs Rampant in Chic Headgear, but Couturiers Insist on Clothes and Headline Harmony

By Bettina Bedwell

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS. — (Special Correspondence.) — The new Paris hats for fall and winter make it a crime to follow the habit of those dark ages before the war and choose your hat first. One of the big important reasons for this is that your winter hat, if it comes from Paris, will in all likelihood be made of the same material as your ensemble. Or if not the identical stuff, then something so closely allied that the relationship is quickly apparent. Another reason for restraining that feminine desire for a rush of new millinery to the head before fall has come is the immense variety of the smart hats that are coming out of Paris. There ain't going to be no "hat of the season" this winter. The chic of your hat depends on its being as personal to you as your hair and as tied to your costume as sunlight is tied to the sun.

Paris clothes fashions have turned womanly, feminine, siren, or what do you want to call it? Hats automatically follow this lead just like all of the other satellites of the dress and coat have done. Individuality runs rampant all over the field of fashion and the femininity of the fall hat has as many forms as the femininity of human females has. Paris is covering the chic head with the wide brimmed cape line, with the tricorne, the bonnet, the cloche, and about ten thousand kinds of draped hats and toques. The shape or shapes preferably, that you wear on your head this winter will depend on the outlines of your face and head and quite as much on the silhouette that the clothes you wear describe.

So important do the Paris couturiers consider this clothes and hat harmony that a good many of them have jumped into the hat making business. Jean Patou is quite an old hand, having done it for some seasons. Suzanne Talbot hats her clothes, and so does Lanvin. Callot Sœurs are making millinery, and Worth has directed some of his best talent to fashioning chapeaux for fashionable clients.

Having the fixed idea that a hat should be part of the ensemble, these designers are the ones who began making millinery out of the materials that go to make up ensembles. Worth likes to make his pretty draped toques out of wool and fur if they are to be worn with woolen fur trimmed coats. Talbot makes all of her sports hats out of the stitched tweed that makes her sports suits, and the other type of sports hat she shows is a little hand knitted tam o' shanter to match knickers, scarfs, gloves, and sweaters that accompany all of her sports suits. Callot Sœurs have the most adorable fur bonnet I have seen this season, designed to be worn with a fur or fur trimmed coat. It is just a close fitting baby bonnet in gray shaved lamb with a brown ribbon draped over the forehead, under the sides of the bonnet, and emerging in back in a soft bow at the nape of the neck. Patou places wide brimmed felt hats on the heads of mannequins wearing his princess velvet frocks. He is also promoting the colored velvet hat to be worn with a black frock or ensemble. Patou, like the great Parisian milliners, believes in trimming for the winter hat, and uses crystal ornaments, tassels, and pompoms of ostrich feathers and cross aigrettes.

A great many of the smartest Paris hats this winter have supple brims. These brims are used to make a draped frame for the face and head, and in many instances the brim is left long and drooping at the back, a fashion that will be less important when we get into our high collared fur coats. Brims also have a large amount of side this fall, and one or both sides are flared markedly. Agnes' double hats are getting considerable attention. They have close fitting bonnets of fabric fur and over these bonnets a brimmed hat is placed. This clever little milliner also makes heaps of bonnets in satin, velvet, and felt, and she likes to place big bows of self material at the back of the neck of such bonnets.

For sports Agnes uses the bonnet shape and accompanies the hat with a scarf, as shown in our first sketch. She will make you this millinery ensemble from the tweed to match your suit if you like. The model illustrated is made of sapphire blue and white tweed, and both scarf and hat are banded with sapphire blue tricot bands. The bonnet is draped so that it lies in folds over the ears and leaves the forehead bare beneath a slanting line. Very nice for a rounded, youthful face. Directly underneath this sports bonnet is Jean Patou's draped hat of purple dahlia panne velvet to wear with your smart afternoon ensemble of black. This hat has a close fitting rounded crown and a draped brim that is turned up in front, draped high on the left side, and very low on the right side. This droop is emphasized by a bow of velvet placed at the very lowest edge of the right brim. A piquant detail of the hat is that it exposes the left ear only and an earring is worn on that one side, while the other ear has no ornament.

Center and top of our drawing is an illustration of the new Marie Alphonsine tricorne, a shape that is making a stir in Paris. Napoleon would certainly have been a much handsomer man if he had worn one of these Marie Alphonsine tricornes, and the drooping sides of the brim are of the sort that flatter any feminine face ever invented. The composition of this hat is black felt and it is trimmed at the dip of the brim in front with curved crystal tubes.

Directly below this tricorne is another hat from Marie Alphonsine made in her favorite bright red felt. This is a divine interpretation of the bonnet, with huge loops of felt across the back cut in one piece, with the drooping back brim that is scalloped where it meets the neck. Small crossed ends of felt are encrusted at the meeting of the loops. This slightly quaint outline is one that will have the grand chic for fall and winter, and another example of the quaint bonnet is shown in our sketch at the upper right hand corner. This is a model from Suzanne Talbot, and being made to go with an ensemble of black brocaded velvet, the bonnet is of the same material. The crown is just a fitted bonnet shape, shirred around and around at the back of the head. The brim, which is shirred around the face, is made of plaited velvet that turns back at the top and drapes in soft plaited cascades at the sides. The back brim is rather deep and also plaited, and a small tailored bow of self material at the side is sufficient extraneous trimming.

A cunning new cloche from Suzy is shown in our sixth sketch. It is made of Rodier woolen in beige and gold striped pattern and the brim is gathered quite full at the sides. There is a scarf of the same material that gathers in a little ruffle around the neck.

Novelties in Furniture Intrigue Interest

By Edith Weigle.

THE pieces of furniture and accessories pictured today might be called tricky, but they are all practical, as well. Most of them have the distinction of being unusual and artistic at the same time. Take the chest of drawers, for example.

You'd never guess this was a cedar chest, but it is, and the only drawer that is a drawer is the one at the bottom. All the rest are fakes. The top of the chest lifts up, revealing a fine, deep cedar lined box in which your nicest furs or blankets may be stored away.

The wood is walnut and the lines are so good looking that any room would be improved by having in it this handsome piece of furniture. Remember when cedar chests were low slung like a dachshund and bore a strong resemblance to a coffin?

The small round table illustrated in another picture is something new. Its top is heavy brass with decorative designs outlined in black. Because of its metallic surface it makes a fine place to set down a cocktail glass (if you have a cocktail glass to set down!) and if you put a lighted cigaret on it no damage will be done. It also serves as a coffee table. The wood used in the base is solid oak.

The tea cart on wheels is not so new, yet it has some new wrinkles. The glass tray with handles, on the top, is removable, and a small drawer is provided below this for silver or small accessories. Two drop leaves increase the surface of the tea cart and little pulls on cords release them when you have finished.

The wood is the best mahogany and the workmanship on this article is especially fine. Wouldn't it make a nice wedding present for an autumn bride? Or for Christmas?

And just as a curiosity, and because it's workable, too, here are pictures of a chair that turns into a bed. Ever hear of such a thing? Neither did I. But I saw one, and of course seeing's believing. As a chair it looks perfectly normal, and it doesn't take up too much room in a small apartment. Then you push out the arms and, lo and behold, you have a bed that is quite comfortable for one person, so I'm told. It is so strong that even a very heavy man or woman can sleep on it without breaking any springs. And the balance is perfectly adjusted so that you are in no danger of tipping yourself over.

In the morning you arise, make your bed, and in the space of a jiffy it becomes a chair again. Fairy-tale chair would be a good name for it.

I saw so many tricky cigaret boxes and containers that it was hard to know which one to have photographed. The one I chose, however, is among the best looking. It is small and compact and looks exactly like one of those ritzy little leather sets of reference books that the debutante has on her Louis XVI. writing table. The books are scarlet leather. But when a button is pressed they all fall halfway out in the neatest fashion and there is a generous sized compartment for ciaarets!

I'd hate to be guilty of breaking the rules of a school for young maidens, but wouldn't this contraption be just the thing for her who must get an education, but who loves her daily fag?

The jolly little pewter elephant is not tricky. He doesn't wag his ears or his tail or his trunk, but he does ornament the ash tray which he serves as handle. And he makes one smile, besides, so he serves a fairly nice purpose in life, doesn't he?

Winter Models Alter Fashion Silhouette

With Shifting Waistline and Increased Length It's Going to Be a Hard Season for "Making Over"

By Lolita.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—Fashion has played many rôles. One thing is certain, however. This autumn she is not playing the casse-role. No, one looks at these new modes and one sighs, How make over anything in last year's wardrobe to look up to date?

Perhaps there may be a few gowns which by adroit additions and manipulations may be brought into a general conformity with autumn styling. Yet the result is bound to be dubious. For the silhouette—after many threats—has finally changed. You look at the winter's models and you realise that the entire atmosphere of fashion has been altered.

Nothing brought this out more clearly than some of the gowns worn at the Belmont park fall opening, that outdoor event which always attracts many of the most smartly dressed women in New York society. Owing to the extreme heat which accompanied this sports event, there were not the usual foreshadowings of the winter mode. Many of the patrons clung to their summer prints and chiffons. Nevertheless, the new "long limbed and short waisted" silhouette was clearly articulated.

Let us take the single example of Miss Hope Iselin. This young woman was attired in a necktie print crepe frock draped so as to present the higher waist line. As for her skirt, this demonstrated the impossibility of warming over any skirt in last year's collection. For at the side there was a wide circular inset of the frock material which gave to the one side that effect of length so important in every autumn collection.

Yes, the great Paris couturiers were not thinking of Paterfamilias when they designed the clothes for this winter. Mother and all the girls are going to make excessive demands upon this personage in order to outfit themselves in belts, short moulded bodices, skirts with subtle flares and incalculable variations. So, if his tone is not bland as a summer zephyr, if he wraps himself up in the newspaper like a fur jacket in the cedar chest the fault lies entirely with Patou, Chanel, et cetera.

We are showing today some autumn creations interpreting the more formal day time mode. Before taking up these in detail one may say that the day time mode is partial to three fabrics. One is velvet in all its various weaves, a second is Canton crêpe and a third is satin. In connection with these let us not forget that the new figured nets so conspicuous in the evening collections are developed into many stunning afternoon gowns for the ultra formal occasion. These nets may be motivated in metal or they may have the cire dots which have attained such a vogue.

There is much black and white, much beige and brown and a satisfying excursion into color evident in the showings of afternoon creations. Among the colors green shading from wistaria to hunter's and bottle green is worthy of a special chapter. Blue, too, is well represented and occurs, not only in the blue greens which are especially well liked for evening, but in navy and its near relatives. A very vivid tone something lighter than navy is, for example, observed in both afternoon and evening apparel.

A frock which affords a compromise between the elaborate and the not-so-elaborate occasion is sketched by us at the left of the large group of figures. Here is a design from that noted couturier, Nicole Groult, and it is eloquent of the manner in which the present-day designer takes some former details and weaves of them a brand new effect. For this gown, made of bright navy blue canton crêpe retains as an essention part of its styling the diagonal lines, the bows, and the uneven skirt of a former vintage. But is not the entire atmosphere changed by two facts—one the manner in which the diagonal line takes upon itself the burden of the elevated waist and the second, that circular development of the skirt permitting one long extension at the left side?

If we wish to utter any wise saws about dress this season they are almost bound to be circular saws. For many, many of the new creations are cut that way. Take even the simple little old pleat. This, too, is bound to be circular so that the precious flare at the hem is a matter of course. Thus, in one of the very latest of Worth's afternoon ensembles one finds a skirt of shiny black broadcloth laid in circular pleats which attain to a scallop at the hem. This skirt has a pronounced lengthening of the sides and back.

The Worth creation just mentioned has another claim upon the fashion Boswell's attention. It is topped by a jacket of black caracul finished with narrow sleeve bands of ermine reinforced by a collar of tuxedo revers of the same snowy ermine. The jacket or the coat of fur! In this you encounter one of the salients of the present day ensemble which is apparent both in sports and formal attire. And do not forget that the fur of today is often sensitive to its environment as a chameleon. For example, I saw recently an afternoon ensemble of the new dahlia red crêpe which was completed by a coat of mole dyed to exactly the same shade. Mole is one of the furs which they are dying a great deal. So, too, is lapin. Both these pelts are apt to come out looking as full of color as a lady coming out of a beauty parlor.

This is decidedly a fur year and, as I remarked some weeks ago, even the frocks of Canton crêpe are often set off with bands of some pelt. Touches of fur are predestined on both wraps and frocks, and the ingenuity with which such touches are administered is one of the thrills of the season. One of the newer notes is the application of bands on the upper arm of wrap or dress. All manner of finesse is shown, too, in the border, cuffs and collar. Anent the last named, it is interesting to see how widely the Tuxedo collar prevails on many of the latest creations.

Nor is the furrin' policy restricted to our garments. Already we mentioned the prevalence of the fur hat in modern fashions, but there is no help for it. We must mention it again. For these fur hats, manipulated with all the sang froid of fabric and exploiting inevitably the pliable fur, especially galyak, are an integral part of the winter costume. Indeed—and here again one strikes a somber note for Paterfamilias—hats are so changed in their general character that only the charity organizations can use last year's bonnets.

One factor which makes the millinery situation gloomy for the head of the house is the new habit of matching your hat to your costume, not only in color, but in material. Thus the smart tweed ensemble of today is accompanied by a hat of concordant tweed draped into some modish shadow of felt. Also are the satin and velvet costumes frequently set off by such harmonizing bits of millinery.

But to go back to our sketches. The second model is a charming velvet afternoon gown from Lucile Paray which indicates even more forcibly than does our Nicole Groult model the departure which the creator has made from last season. This frock is carried out in beige panne velvet and its inset belt of self material defining the natural waistline is made even more emphatic by the rows of shirring at the front of the corsage. Right here, in fact, one must note that many of these new "long limbed," short waisted gowns achieve the desired result without the aid of a literal belt. Shirring does the trick. For shirring is "in" more than ever, and here again we face the more explicit matching of hat and frock. For a number of the shirred afternoon gowns are topped by a hat also trimmed with shirring.

Again in this Lucile Paray frock do we encounter the circular skirt. In this case, however, the irregularity of the skirt hem makes the front its special beneficiary. Here it is that the season's preoccupation with length is evident. For the circular fullness is extended into two points longer than the remainder of the frock and accented by streamers of self material descending from a softly draped neck-line. This is finished with a flower in the capucine tones.

Both the brown and beige frocks of this season are as much given to color as a Turner landscape. A good indication of this fact is found in a brown velvet frock I have just seen. Made by a Paris couturier, the tobacco brown of the background was offset by a gilet and trimmings of brilliant turquoise blue. Nothing could have been more electrifying. It was like seeing a sallow woman suddenly taking to rouge and a lipstick. For let it be said, all this brown which we are adopting so passionately is rather trying to all save the Annie Lauries and Helen of Troys. This tone is redeemed from its unbecoming tendencies by the admixture of the reds, capucine tints and brilliant blues with which the Paris designer is alleviating our deep brown taste.

The tempering of brown brings us to another phase of the mode. Are we discontinuing those two-tone frocks which last spring were launched by a number of noted designers? Far from it. And if there be skeptical spirits among you, glance at our last ensemble—one designed by Suzanne Talbot. At the extreme right of the page you will see the dress of this ensemble occurring in eggshell white satin combined with black satin [Again this everlasting black and white note!].

As a preface to more detailed description of the gown, let us say that the winter is just full of tiers. Many skirts are laid out to look like the Hanging Gardens of Babylon. And again we note the tendency to make one tier present the illusion of a bustle. That is frankly the intent of Talbot in shirring to a belt of black satin the satin flounce which tops another flounce of the same material dipping in the back. Note the manner in which the bands of black on the sleeves describe a diagonal course, for that course is typical of the sleeve mode. Note also the recurrent use of shirring and the graceful adjustment of the neck-line with its black satin terminating in a bow in the back.

Like so many present-day wraps of ensemble, the coat involved in our third sketch follows the silhouette of the gown. Its distended pockets and scarf collar are salient touches.

Accessories—Left—The new lacy weave stocking for formal wear which has followed in the wake of the Spanish vogue is shown in connection with two unusual belts. The top belt is of black suede with a pearl buckle echoed by pearl buttons on diamond encrustations of white suede. Below is a model of knitted wool in black and white.

Right—The lingerie finish dominating our modes this year is met first by a gilet and cuffs of that new medium for lingerie touches, starched chiffon. This is trimmed with open-work and edged with ruchings of real lace. Below, a collar and cuffs of white georgette are set off by narrow bands of green georgette between which are spiral motifs of the white made of bias bands.

The Etiquette of Letter Writing

Stationery and Form Reveal the Culture and Taste of the Correspondent.

It is the aim of this department to serve as a practical guide in problems of everyday etiquette. Self-addressed, stamped envelope must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday Department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

By Helen Bartlett.

THE discussion in this column last week of letter writing in general brought in several requests for information about some specific points. A simple lesson in the mechanics of letter writing seems to be in order.

Every letter should include the date, the full name and address of the sender, a salutation and an appropriate closing phrase. The date of writing is always important; ordinarily it goes in the upper right hand corner but it may be put at the end of the missive. When the address is not engraved on the note paper it should be written in the upper right hand corner, just above the date.

The form of address, like the entire "tone" of any letter, depends upon the degree of intimacy between the writer and the recipient. The differences in tone for the social, impersonal and business letter are quite clearly marked, naturally. "My dear ——" is regarded as more formal than simple "Dear ——" in this country, but this unwritten rule is reversed in England.

There isn't a wide selection of closing phrases, although the conventional ones are appropriate for most letters. "Sincerely yours" is the safest choice for the ordinary letter; letters to warm friends or relatives would be embellished with phrases which indicate warmer feeling. "Cordially yours" is rarely used now; "faithfully yours" is an excellent substitute. "Respectfully yours" is not used by women.

Excepting in purely business or very intimate letters it is customary to sign the full name.

Paper Indicates Taste.

It's trite to say that letter paper is indicative of the character of the owner, but it's also true. A delicate gray paper with a finely wrought monogram would be a natural selection for a woman of charm and artistic taste. A flat sheet in a good color with a simple block letter die would be an equally natural selection for another type of woman and it would, in this broadminded age, be in just as good taste. But a flamboyant paper and monogram, on which notes are written in a strange color of ink broadcast but one thing to the world—the bad taste of the owner.

Rules about letter paper are elastic—how could they be otherwise! There are just a few points to remember outside, of course, of the cardinal reminder to be conservative about color and decoration.

For a woman's general correspondence sheets may be fairly large, and double or single. Note paper is smaller. But if you write a firm, large hand and your personality seems to require something more striking, there's nothing to prevent your getting letter paper that measures about 5¾x7 inches or thereabouts. Bear in mind that it's an age of self-expression, even unto writing paper.

For General Use.

For general use it is well to have one set of stationery with the address stamped across the top or just on the flap of the envelope in a simple style of lettering. The color of this stamping matches the delicate tints of your paper or envelope linings. If you like a monogram you can put it in the upper left hand corner. "Cut-out" monograms stamped in gold or silver in combination with one or two other colors are attractive, and in good taste. Oddities are OUT, but the stock of a good stationer will hardly put them within your reach, so be choosy about your stationer.

In addition to this set of note paper every household ought to have another set of recognized superiority, heavy and creamy white in color, for important occasions.

Stationery for Men.

For men, flat sheets of paper of good grade in colors such as cream, sand, gray or white are the best selections.

Business letterheads no longer conform to a standard size. The letterhead selection is entirely dependent on the choice of those in authority. But even business letterheads may display poor taste or good taste in engraving or spacing; an overcrowded, cluttery head, extending too far down the sheet and perhaps carrying advertising matter, makes a firm's letter paper look like a circular.

Business houses of high standing invariably have the most conservative writing paper, of good quality and taste, with a dignified head outlined in clear, simple type.

Answers to Etiquette Questions.

"Can the words, 'Reception at the bride's home at 5 o'clock,' be put in the lower left hand corner of an engraved wedding invitation, or should a separate card be used? If so, what is the wording of this card. M. M."

Use a separate card, reading thus:

Reception
Immediately following the ceremony.
Ten East Main Street.
Please reply.

This card is inserted in the envelope with the wedding invitation.

"If a student at an out of town college invites a girl down to a football game and class dance, is he expected to pay her train fare and her hotel expenses? E. K."

No. The girl pays her own expenses.

"Will you please tell me how to announce my engagement? My people are living in another state. My fiancé and his friends live here. Would ... be correct to send out cards? M. L."

You should write to your relatives and closest friends, telling them of your engagement, and should send simple announcement notices to the newspapers. Your parents, even though they live in another state, should issue this announcement. Cards are not sent. Your notice for the papers would read thus: "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of Oakland, Cal., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss ... to Mr. Thomas Johnson of Chicago."

"1. How soon must one answer an invitation to a wedding and reception? 2. Should the acknowledgment be sent to the bride's parents? 3. In declining, is it necessary to mention the wedding and reception? 4. Is it correct to mention the fact that you are sending a gift when answering the invitation? L."

1. Immediately on receiving it. 2. Yes, addressed to "Mr. and Mrs." 3. You acknowledge the invitation to the reception only. 4. Absolutely not.

"When we receive a card announcing the birth of a baby, are we expected to respond with a gift? "MARY."

No. Relationship, or intimacy with the family, or fondness for the parents are the good reasons for sending a gift. However, if the parents are sufficiently fond of you to send an announcement card, you should call and congratulate them, at least.

Activities of Women

At almost every important dog show in England women now outnumber the men exhibitors.

The house of commons in England has 13 women members—more than in any previous parliament. Seven of them have had seats before.

For the first time in history a woman is in charge of the marriage license bureau in Washington, D. C. Applications for marriage licenses are now handled by Miss Maud A. Engle of Lewinsville, Va.

Modesty in 1929 Still a Virtue - - -

Self-Assurance Is Necessary, but Young Egotists Are Their Own Worst Enemies.

HOWEVER modesty may have served in an earlier generation, we do know that it isn't one of the present world's most marketable qualities. We refer not to modesty of demeanor in the moral sense. That is one of the stocks bearing the best dividends and never fluctuating from its high value. Rather, we are talking about personal summaries of one's charms, abilities, usefulness, the assets that go into establishing a healthy confidence in self.

We know that the modest violet born to blush unseen in our immediate day simply keeps on blushing unseen. She [or he] simply is not part and parcel of our times. Self-assurance has taken its place in the affairs of heart as well as in business. But the question arises as to just what degree of self-assurance is best for success.

What our young people have is confidence in themselves, an enviable quality, indeed, if it is not overdone. And many of them have just the right degree of assurance to give them poise, ease, sureness, charm. But because children of certain parents have been fed flattery from their earliest days out of all proportion to their actual deserts, and because they have been raised on the principles of self-expression, badly directed, we have a fair sized crop of young egotists that are proving to be their own worst enemies. Girls from 17 to 20, and boys of the same age, were born just in time to reap the rewards of an older generation gone revolutionary on character training as they experienced it.

Characters Are Lopsided.

While no one doubts the value of establishing in a child's mind a healthy confidence, as in all revolutions, the extremists have left a ring around their outer circle that bodes ill for the youngsters experimented on. In cultivating supreme confidence for their children, they often have made the character distinctly lopsided so that its social value is lost. Thus we have a group that finds it difficult to conform to the standards required in easy social contact. We have instead of wholesome confidence overbearing, selfish, domineering young persons whose popularity is sorely affected. And the tragedy is that popularity is the thing they covet above everything else.

Almost daily in our work here we get first hand reflection of the evils of promoting self to the exclusion of qualities that make for lovableness. Just as a sample, there is one from a 19 year old girl who signs herself overoptimistically, "sincerely, Typical She tells us that she knows how to talk—in three different languages, in fact.

"I am," she continues, "what you would call the 'Perfect Miss America' but I am just not given the chance to use my talents. The boys snub me and the girls call me conceited. But I cannot help it if I am beautiful."

Then out of the confusion of a mind surcharged with self, she asks naively if it is that every one is jealous of her or is it her own fault? However, she doubts the latter possibility. In addition to her talking and dancing talents, the girl plays golf, tennis, swims, rides, drives her own car and she is self-admittedly the best dressed girl in her set.

"I used to be popular," she concludes, "but after I won the popularity contest and the swimming and best dancer contest—the boys just fled from me. Why?"

No Touch of Modesty.

There we have a picture of a girl with everything but the most valuable asset of all, that touch of modesty that permits one to see the rival advantages in other human beings. And to paraphrase the old Biblical query: "What doth it profit a girl to gain the whole world of sports and accomplishments if she loses the soul of human contact?"

We have contended always that the way of the beautiful girl is hard. Her training is an ego-inflating process. A beautiful girl who keeps her head on her shoulders and her heart in the right place is a gifted one or one of finely molded character. By the very nature of her gift she has to struggle harder to project her kindly side. It can be done, however, as proven by the countless numbers of lovely women with lovable natures. Theirs is the triumph of heart over ego.

At the other pole, we have the individual without self-value who puts her all into heart-demonstrations, to be treated frequently with door-mat consideration. Her need is enough confidence in self to earn respect from others.

Confidence Is Necessary.

Of the two evils, overconfidence and under, the former is preferred, since life in time will subjugate the overbearing. The underconfident one is beaten at the start. But between the extremes lies the desirable path. One not only wants but is in dire need of a strong faith in self in an age of face-value appraisals, such as the one we live in. One wants the confidence about one's person, one's clothes, one's ability, one's own personality to contribute an easy grace of manner in social contacts. One needs self-assurance and a healthy dose of it, too, to buck life. But one had better have for his or her popularity's sake some of that endearing quality for which no modern word has been coined because it can be known only by its own—Modesty.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out, and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of Calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of Calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

The Most Remarkable OFFER of the Year!

THIS WONDERFUL OFFER of a famous parfumeur's master European creation is for women who can afford the smartest aids to charm and loveliness, but who realize that thrift is often the essence of good taste—and for those who have had to deny themselves the luxury of the finest toilet accessories because until now the cost has been too great.

To us has come from Europe a wonderful new odeur called Charmé Volupte, a masterpiece of the parfumeur's art, subtle as a desert song, entrancing as a night in Paris.

A caressing enhancer of feminine charm!

Into an ensemble of toiletries this marvelous scent has been captured. The artist's illustration above gives you but a faint idea of its beauty—six flacons of lovely fragrance are grouped together containing ¾ ounce of Charmé Volupte Perfume, 2 ounces of this famous Cold Cream, 2 ounces of the Vanishing Cream, ¾ ounce of Nail Polish, ¾ ounce of Cuticle Remover and 2 ounces of Charmé Volupte Toilet Water. Imagine this ensemble of loveliness arranged in a molded jewel case of delicately tinted and filigreed glass, fit for a queen's dressing table. Hundreds of women have told us that at first sight they dared not hope for its price to be less than $12. That is what the price would be if the Charmé Volupte Toiletry Ensemble were sold in the usual way! Actually the price is $2.95 (so low that it seems incredible).

You cannot buy it in any store

So revolutionary is this value that it upsets all former ideas of prices for fine toiletries. Since it is so hard to believe please do not convince yourself until you have made this test:

Send us no money. We will mail you the Charmé Volupte Ensemble of Toiletries by parcel post on approval. When it comes pay the postman $2.95. Use one-third of the contents from any or all of the bottles. If you are not completely won by it, and if you are not entirely convinced that it is worth three times the price you paid, return the set to us within three days and we will refund the entire amount without one cent's expense to you.

This is to our knowledge the most liberal offer ever made.

To our knowledge no one else has dared to make such a sweeping guarantee, but then there is no other product quite like Charmé Volupte. Tens of thousands of women have benefited by this safe, economical method of purchasing direct from the American Importing Agents.

A new experience awaits you if you will fill in the request below and let us send you the Charmé Volupte Ensemble of Toiletries on approval.

Allure and the charm of ravishing attractiveness—they can be borne to you in flacons of beauty if you will take advantage of our offer and our guarantee by acting today. Fill your name and address in, tear out and mail. It is as simple as that. If you are not satisfied, the $2.95 that you pay the postman when the package comes will be refunded to you.

Charmé Volupte Toilet Water

Connoisseurs have proclaimed it a masterpiece of the parfumeur's art. The subtle loveliness of this toilet water is indescribable.

Charmé Volupte Perfume

An odor mystifying as moonlight . . . alluring as Circe . . . smart as the newest Paris fashion . . . sweet as the memory of a caress.

Charmé Volupte Nail Polish

Beauty comes to the hands whose charm is enhanced by the glowing loveliness that Charmé Volupte imparts to fingernails.

Charmé Volupte Cuticle Remover

How wonderful it is for nails whose outlines need smoothing . . . for it removes every bit of loose skin . . . getting the nail in perfect condition for Charmé Volupte Nail Polish.

Charmé Volupte Cold Cream

Bringing the glory of youth to your skin . . . refreshing . . . revivifying . . . A perfect cold cream, incomparable as a cleanser and softener.

Charmé Volupte Vanishing Cream

A delightful foundation for powder and make-up . . . giving your skin the smoothness and soft loveliness that is so alluring.

MISS SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.

I would build a temple on a busy street,
Stand it, like a challenge, where two highways meet;
Steel and stone like velvet lining it within
Shall enshrine deep silence in the traffic din.
Pillars slim and stately, windows wide and high,
There shall tempt the earth eyes upward to the sky.
Soft, low chairs, with cushions, colors clear and cool,
Shall hush fears, compulsions. Harmony shall rule.

Not a bell, book, candle, not a spoken prayer,
Not a song or organ here shall stir the air.

Not a single sermon, symbol, picture, sign,
Dare intrude ideas in this peace benign.
There where quiet guards him man shall come to rest.

Know release from pressures. Be he damned or blest,
There in studied stillness, sweet, profound, and sought,
One may face, with freedom, his own secret thought.

EFFICIENCY.

Some praise the moon's romantic light,
Traditionally quaint.
But when the boy friend is at hand—
How often Luna ain't.

Art puts it over nature. Yes,
Inconstant moons forswear.
Gosh, when a spotlight is turned on
The tenor's always there.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

STILL HIGHER EDUCATION.

For higher education I am straining;
One needs it, now and then, to take a trick;
I advocate, for girls, hard football training. . . .
It's well to know just how and when to kick.

What Your Birth Date Tells

By Nathalie Aldrich.

THE numerology for June includes all people born, in any year, between May 26 and June 21.

The astrologically termed Gemini people have a dual nature. One trait of character contradicts another. They wish opposite things at the same moment. They may want to travel and to stay at home. Or to study and to play. They are both happy and unhappy at once. Or in love or not in love, warm and cold, in the same breath. It is the most nervous and the most uncertain of all the signs. These are, of course, tendencies to be overcome. Each sign, each month, has its adverse characteristics, and one is born at a certain time with the opportunity of overcoming these traits. When the Gemini does so with his, he is peculiarly fine.

A Gemini or June person is affectionate, magnetic, generous, courteous, very kind, fluent of speech, proud of birth, with a general family pride; never selfish or penurious. He is especially thoughtful of the poor, and sympathetic toward the suffering. Imaginative, high-strung, very changeable in nature, the same people will be sometimes genial and full of feeling, sometimes the reverse. All Gemini people have a love of beauty in nature, and lean in their interests toward the arts and sciences, though they are good wage earners also. Reading they are fond of, and they are conversationally interesting, quick to see a point, clever of idea, versatile, energetic, witty. If religious, they are extremely so; if agnostic, it is so with fervor, though they have always a respect for the opinions and beliefs of others.

The month numerologically corresponds to the number 3 and has its qualities. Its members can do things well with their hands, and can bring their work to a beautiful completion without as a rule being able to explain beforehand, or even to know, how they will do it. Like all 3s, they should have variety and freedom of expression; for much routine kills the enthusiasm of this month and brings into play its negative side.

June-July.

People who are born any time from June 21 to June 27, inclusive, in any year have a combination astrologically of the June [Gemini] and July [Cancer] characteristics. They are self-willed, with strong opinions, but make, however, if not too greatly opposed, the best of friends. Numerologically these people possess the traits of the numbers 3 and 4.

The women are inclined to be coquets and the men are often so interested in pleasure that they will actually, if unconsciously, sacrifice their home, family, or business to its pursuit. This is the negative side of the birth, which needs only to be seen and turned into something positive, such as finding pleasure in work itself, to be of value.

These people have magnetic, brilliant temperaments and usually show to an advantage in the world.

The genius of this cusp is kindliness.

July.

People born between June 27 and July 22, in any year, have the higher gifts of feeling and sympathy.

The astrological sign for July is the Crab—one who moves sidewise. This is indicative of the paradoxical nature of its people, who have often a persistent will—an actual clutch of determination—together with intuition and purpose, and yet who will also often let go for either a slight reason or for none at all. Strong as giants and weak as infants, the Cancer born are sensitive, easily hurt, and resent compulsion, though they are easily ruled by persuasion.

The month corresponds numerologically to the number 4 and has its characteristics. These include mechanical and constructive talent, business sense, determination, economy, and the ability to take pains. The July man or woman is invincible to argument and cannot be talked out of anything unless ready to submit. Yet he or she will often reason himself out of his own good intentions. They are peculiarly fond of the idea of independence, both in word and actually, and they demand it in anything they pursue.

They possess fine intelligence and an aptitude for learning, for working out new principles with executive sense. As a rule the Cancer person has a love of home, artistic taste in house decoration, and makes an excellent mother or father, interested in anything that will advance the lives and development of children.

In the Feminine Realm

Nine women are engaged in astronomical work at Harvard university.

Young women workers in factories in Belfast, Ireland, are said to be the most beautiful in the world.

There are 40,000 beauty shops in the United States and more than 75,000 women are working in them.

Women in China are now participating in campaigns for financing various undertakings. Heretofore, such campaigns were left to men.

Dr. Maria Castellani is national president of the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs of Italy, and is an expert in social insurance and the editor of an insurance magazine.

The display of pet roosters is now a fad among ultrafashionable women on the Riviera. A gold or silver ring around the bird's neck is attached to milady's wrist with a thin chain.

Miss Edna Schroeder, aged 25, of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., who has been a stenographer for five years, is now a flying secretary for Clarence D. Chamberlin, the noted aviator.

THE THRILL OF A BUGGY RIDE

"Now she's always hungry,"

...says ILLINOIS mother!

"PATSY is absolutely the picture of health again," says Mrs. J. W. Andrews, 7835 East End Avenue, Chicago. "A few weeks ago we had to force her to eat; now she's always hungry.

"I knew what to do when she became bilious, half-sick and listless, because we've always known about California Fig Syrup. Patsy's coated tongue and bad breath cleared up with the first few spoonfuls; and in just a few days her stomach and bowels were acting perfectly. She's gaining right along now."

California Fig Syrup has the full endorsement of the medical world. A pure vegetable product, loved by children. A gentle, but thorough cleanser of a youngster's system and a gentle energizer for sluggish bowels. A stimulator for lagging appetites and digestions; a help in building sturdy limbs and robust bodies.

The name California is important. It marks the genuine product, famous for 50 years.

Answers to Beauty Queries

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat-chested or flat-footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you want a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

W. Y. G.: IN ADDITION TO shampooing the hair every two weeks it should be brushed every day for five or ten minutes to remove the dust and grime. The brushing stimulates the roots and is cleansing, and to a great extent will prevent dandruff. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on the hair.

H. Y.: HOT WATER MAY BE used on perspiring feet, but it should be followed immediately by cold, that the open pores may be closed again. Pouring cold water into the bath tub over the feet will effect this. It should be done quickly.

MRS. F. C. B.: THE REMOVAL of adenoids is not a very painful operation. Adenoids interfere with proper breathing, causing the person to breathe through her mouth. It is advisable to have them removed at once.

MISS F. H.: YES, THE DAILY cold shower is a healthful practice, providing you get into a good, warm glow following the rubdown with coarse towel. If you are blue or have gooseflesh, discontinue the shower. A cold shower should last about two minutes.

C. L.: OBSTINATE CASES of acne require the skill of an experienced physician. X-ray is the specific treatment which cures the vast majority of them. If you wish my booklet on the skin I'll send it to you on receipt of a stamped addressed envelope.

YOU AND YOUR CHILDREN

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

Youngsters Should Not Have Every Hour Scheduled; It Blocks Their Creative Activity

A "Play Booklet" by Mrs. Bevans for mothers of pre-school children will be sent free on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

IF YOU'RE poor, this warning won't apply to you. But if you are financially secure, or perhaps have great wealth, it will.

The warning is: Don't overschedule your children. Don't plan to fill every hour of every day of their lives with something to do. Don't have them always "taking something," or being exposed to "cultural influenza."

This is a danger that probably besets rich little girls more than rich little boys. "Poor little rich girl" is not just a sentimental catchword to amuse the masses. Many little rich girls are poor in the things that should make life truly rich for them. These things are numerous and deep—but we won't go into that now. The one thing I have in mind today in which they're poor is leisure. They are—most of them—simply scheduled to death.

Each Hour Is Filled.

Their days are mapped out definitely and in detail. Each hour is planned for — dancing, horseback, French, fencing, dressmakers, hairdressers, skating—all delightful or beneficial things in themselves perhaps but too many of them. However, because other girls in their set are doing these things, they must do them. Their days, too, must be crammed full of carefully ordered activities that dovetail so closely that there is no time left for leisure—no loose ends, no empty space in which they may call their souls their own. For it is only in leisure that inspiration works, that free will, or choice, or initiative to follow individual interest has its chance.

Time in which to do nothing is time in which you may decide to do something that is really an expression of yourself. Every grown person who thinks at all knows how stunting it is to be always booked up, to be always making connections, never to have leisure. Children's growth is really stunted by being forced to lead an over-scheduled life, conducted by teachers, nurses, governesses, and tutors. There are deep lying desires, instincts, talents, that lie below the surface which are smothered by the routine acquiring of accomplishments or advantages, planned for them by some one who is short sighted or who, herdlike, thinks it is the smart thing to do because other children are doing it.

Leisure Is Important.

To the more practically inclined it may sound like the romancing of the theorist to place such great value upon the importance of leisure. But many of the same conclusions which have to do with the intangible concerns of childhood have not only been reached by the lay observers of the children, but by educators and scientists. Many of the causes and effects that a student of children recognizes in every day life, have been proved by scientific experiments—along psychological or biological lines.

Prof. Hughes Mearns who is widely known for his courses, lectures, and books on creative education has made some interesting observations in connection with his work, which is among children coming from every station in life.

Children of the very poor, the middle classes, and the very rich were compared. He found creative work of any kind at its lowest ebb among the children of the very rich. This he attributes largely to the fact that the life which wealth more or less imposes on its possessors is felt even by the children, whose days are almost always too heavily scheduled. Their time is mapped out, rigidly filled.

There Are Exceptions.

Of course there are always people of wealth whose lives are simple, informal, intimate — and independent. Their children do not fall into this category. But these are the exception. The other is the rule. And it was found that this child of wealth, whose life was filled hourly with prearranged activity, was at a loss when he was left free to use his or her time. Tell her definitely what to do and how to do it and she did it—often well. But give her time to use as she wanted to use it, and she was lost. Leisure, one of the big things that money can buy—leisure to find herself—was the thing she was not allowed to have. Perhaps you know that story of the mother who said to the father of the young heir, "You know we made such a mistake this winter. Henry has a whole hour from four to five on Fridays that we forgot to plan for!"

Of course other factors figure in the quality of the boy's or girl's creative work—but this matter of crowding a child's time is considered one of the biggest ones.

Wealth Has Disadvantages.

The life background of wealth has other disadvantages for the well rounded growth of a child, just as its direct opposite—dire poverty—has. It was the middle class, containing people of moderate means and business or professional people, which was found to produce the most talented children, the best developed mentally, physically, and in character. It must always be borne in mind in making such statements that they hold of the average or the majority, not of every individual in a group.

These children of the middle classes, then, were found to live the most normal lives of any group. They were well nourished and active. They were busy, but not too busy. Their lives were intelligently conducted, but not jammed full of social or educational engagements. They had time that was literally their own. They were not turned over to this or that paid attendant — nurse, governess, maid, housekeeper—who was changed from time to time.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THE slender, straightline effect of the dress shown in pattern No. 2734, is bound to be becoming. It is just the sort of dress women will want for all day wear, and will be particularly becoming in the new light navy blue shade in wool crêpe. Navy blue faille silk crêpe is used for the pocket trimming, and for the collar and scarf tie, while a chic touch is given by having the revers made of a chartreuse green faille silk crêpe.

Jersey, sheer tweed, crêpe satin, flat silk crêpe and printed silk crêpe will also make up smartly.

The back and front of the dress are each cut in one piece, and each side of the center front plaits are inset below patch pockets. These inverted plaits give sufficient fullness when walking and lend a graceful appearance besides. A basting thread should be run in the front from the neck at the center, down to a given perforation marked on the pattern. Then the rever facing should be laid in place—right side to right side—and basted in place. Stitch each side of this center basting, making the seam three-eighths of an inch wide each side at the neck, and taper down to practically nothing, letting the two lines of stitching end in a point just below your center basting. Now cut through both materials on the basting between the stitching and turn the facing to the wrong side of the front. Baste carefully and press flat.

The inset plaits should be taken care of next, and directions that come with the pattern followed closely. After these are set in, basted down and pressed, the pockets should be made and stitched in place.

You will then be ready to baste the shoulder and underarm seams together, and after seeing that the dress fits correctly, these seams may be finished. The collar is made and basted in place on the dress. Pin it first at the center back, and then from that point, pin towards each end. After this collar section has been pinned in a wrong side seam to the dress, pin the outside collar section to the revers, pinning from the front end of the collar towards the back. Baste and stitch these seams, and press them open flat, except across the center back. Here the seam should be turned up towards the collar, and the outside collar section hemmed down over it.

The sleeves are full length and close fitting, and are untrimmed. Belt and scarf tie are sewed together in wrong seams, turned right side out, basted and pressed flat.

Pattern No. 2596 is for an attractive dress for the sub-deb who delights in wearing sophisticated styles. It is simple in design, but so smart in every detail—and so wearable. The slightly bloused bodice with the Peter Pan collar is tucked on the shoulders at the front. The two piece skirt, circular of course, is pressed into inverted plaits at the center front, supplying extra fulness for sports activities. This dress can be worn with a self fabric or suede belt, in either a contrasting color, or matching the dress.

At the neck in the center front the dress is slashed down to a given perforation, and the edges are bound and finished for closing. This opening is completely covered by a soft ribbon bow with long ends that is worn at the neck. The long, one piece sleeve is close fitting and finished at the wrists with a turned back cuff matching the collar in color. The inverted plait at the front of the skirt is stitched down part way, thus insuring a close fit over the hips.

A dress of this kind is ideal for classroom wear, as well as for general daytime occasions. Wool crêpe in navy blue, sheer tweed in tan tones, wood brown velveteen, crimson red cashmere, printed velveteen and bottle green flannel are some of the colors and materials favored by the younger generation.

If you like something unsual and very smart, you will choose pattern No. 2723 for making a dress that will do for any daytime occasion. The lines are quite out of the ordinary, and this dress will be particularly becoming to a straight, slender figure. The blouse closes with buttons at the right side, and there are inverted tucks at the front shoulders for decorative effect. The narrow, turn back collar is caught at the center front with a jeweled ornament.

The sleeves are full length, close fitting and untrimmed. The attached two piece skirt is draped—the back extending to the center front from underneath the right side of the front, and is decidedly smart. A narrow belt of the material used for the collar covers the joining of the bodice and skirt.

Crêpe satin, sheer woolen, faille crêpe, georgette crêpe, crêpe Elizabeth, flat silk crêpe, or plain sheek velvet are chic materials.

Answers to Love Queries

By Doris Blake

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Step Up.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it right for a fellow to walk behind a girl when he is taking her out? M. S."

Custom decrees that a man should walk by the lady's side.

Do the Little Things.

"Dear Miss Blake: The girl I love is fond of going out with other fellows. How can I win her?

"WORRIED."

By doing the nice little things which mean so much to every girl—flowers, candy, magazines, etc.

You Can Tell.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a boy, but I don't know if he likes me. How can I find out? ROSE."

If he is attentive and anxious to do things he knows will please, you have the right to assume he likes you.

Distance Is Barrier.

Dear Miss Blake: I love a boy to whom I was never introduced. He seems interested in me. Does he care for me? HONEY.

He may be attracted to you, but it is through personal contact that one learns to care.

Sign of Selfishness.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is jealousy a sign of true love? WORRIED."

Jealousy is a sign of selfishness. Nothing creates more obstacles in the way of real understanding.

Use Your Talents.

"Dear Miss Blake: The fellow I love went out with another girl. Please advise. BLONDE."

Use your efforts to make a better impression than the other girl.

Just Drop Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: Every time I ask the girl I care for to go out she refuses. What shall I do? TED."

The girl evidently does not care for your attentions. Discontinue them.

You Are Unfair.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping steady company with a girl, though I have not directly asked her to marry me. I do not care for her type. Please advise. F. A."

It is unfair to take up a girl's time knowing you have no intention of marrying her.

For You to Judge.

"Dear Miss Blake: The friends of the boy I love tell me he cares for me. Should I listen to them? FRIEDA."

His friends have noticed that he likes you, but it's for you to judge how fond he is of you.

Look Your Best.

"Dear Miss Blake: The boy I love doesn't show any affection toward any girl. How can I win him?

"DIMPLES."

Look your best, act your happiest when you're with him, and then trust to luck you'll be the favored one.

Discourage Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: A fellow I don't like follows me around. Please advise.

"SUGAR."

When you find you can't escape him, offer him so little encouragement he will become discouraged and desist.

Recently a widower with a young daughter, Mary, married a widow with a little girl, Rachel, aged 3.

After the marriage the man took little Rachel on his knee and tried to explain matters to her, how they would all live together; how his little girl Mary would call Rachel's mother "mamma" and she, Rachel, must now call him "papa"; how her mamma was now his wife and, accordingly, Mary and Rachel were now sisters.

Little Rachel listened attentively, and when he got through explaining sat quiet for several minutes. Then she asked, seriously: "How did you folks get things mixed up so?"

M. L. Z.

Little Jean and Jack, aged four and two, respectively, were getting acquainted with the new neighbor. Jean volunteered the information that she took a nap every afternoon at six o'clock.

Much amused, the neighbor turned to little Jack and said: "And when do you take a nap?" The little fellow tossed his head and sticking his hands in his pockets, said, "Humph! I do to bed evvy night." J. F. C.

Family Needs Clothes.

"I wonder if any of your kind readers can help me a little? I am the mother of three children and support them with what I can earn doing home work. My earnings are small and I cannot afford to buy them the clothing they need for school. The girls are 14 and 10 years old and my baby boy is 2. The girls wear size 4½ and 1 in shoes, and the baby, 7. My size is 40 and I wear 5½ shoes. If you could get us clothing for the winter it would help so much. I would be grateful for a wash tub, ironing board, curtain stretchers, and wash boiler. If I had these I could earn a little more doing up curtains."

"MRS. J. H."

With the approach of cold weather and the need for warm and suitable clothing this mother's worries have increased a hundredfold. The heavy garments your children wore last year and which are too small for them now would relieve her of a great deal of this worry and insure comfort and warmth for her family. Perhaps some one will have clothing for her, too.

Story Books for Children.

"I teach second grade in a school located in a foreign district and I am handicapped by lack of easy reading material for my children, who need it so badly. There is no public library in the community and although they can get books from a neighboring town for a small fee, the parents feel unable or unwilling to pay it. If any of your cornerites have first or second readers, or other simple reading matter, I will be happy to have them donate them to this cause.

"MRS. M. B."

The library of nearly every family with small children is sure to contain a number of story and school books their young readers have outgrown and which are probably taking up space in shelves which could be better utilized. Won't you take an inventory of yours and send to this small town school the ones you want to dispose of?

Four Year Old Wants a Bicycle.

"Has some one a bicycle for a small 4 year old boy? I have taken an orphan nephew to live with me and as I have seven children of my own I cannot buy all the things I would like to. This little fellow has his heart set on one and I hate to disappoint him.

"MRS. D."

Has your small son outgrown his bicycle? If so, wouldn't you like to pass it on to another boy, less fortunate than yours, to whom such a gift would mean a world of fun? Mrs. D.'s orphan nephew would be delighted to have it.

Kindergarten Equipment.

"We are a small community in Cook county without sufficient funds in our district to give us adequate school material at the present time. The Parent-Teacher association has made arrangements for free rent of a hall for kindergarten and we need a number of things for it which we cannot buy. We are asking friends of your column for donations of any second hand toys, dolls, a piano, phonograph, or anythingthat can be used in kindergarten work. MRS. B. J."

Here's a worthy cause, indeed, and one that should be supported at least to the extent of a few toys. Those your children have outgrown would be most gratefully received.

For Those Who Like Picture Postcards.

"I have a collection of several hundred picture postcards from various parts of the country which I no longer want. If you know of some one who would care for them, I would be glad to send them. J. B."

These would make an interesting and attractive addition to your scrapbook and I am sure the hours spent in assembling it would be thoroughly enjoyed. Write me if you want part of this collection; please do not telephone.

Wants Italian Drapes Pattern.

"I wonder if any of your readers has a pattern for Italian drapes or instructions for making them? I would like to make them myself and would appreciate any information you can get for me. MRS. G. R."

Have you been successful in making this type of drapery? If so, you can probably help this correspondent with a great deal of information or send your pattern to her. I know she'd be most grateful for it.

A Chance for Card Players.

"I have a number of packs of playing cards which I should like to give away. Perhaps the invalids of some hospital or sanitarium or the inmates of a home would like to have them.

"W. N."

For the invalid who must lie abed all day or the shut-in who finds the long hours dragging there is no better diversion than can be had with a pack of cards. If you'd like a share of these, write me; please do not telephone.

Would Like Shorthand Book.

"Has any reader a discarded Van Sant manual of shorthand? I am confined to my bed indefinitely and I'd like to study shorthand while I am here. K. P."

If you have mastered the intricacies of shorthand and no longer need the textbook which was so helpful to you, won't you pass it on to this invalid? I am sure she would accomplish a great deal with it.

Shoes and an Evening Dress.

"I have three pairs of good shoes, size 7½, and a pair of black slippers, size 7. I also have a lovely taffeta evening dress for a girl of about 16. If you know of some one who can make use of these, I'll be glad to send them. MRS. L. J."

Some young girl, in school or out, is going to be happy when she receives this stunning evening frock. If you think it will fit you and you're anxious to have a new dress, write me for it; please do not telephone.

Breakfast Nooks Aid Homemaker

In Modern Household They Are Used for Luncheon and Even Informal Dinners

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

By WillElla de Campi.

BREAKFAST rooms or nooks rate a high and favorable place in the modern home, as they are a decided convenience in the saving of steps and energy, helping the present day housekeeper to have much more spare time for the pleasant and more interesting things of life. In the old days of huge kitchens and large dining rooms, the housewife was forced to devote a great part of her day to the preparing and serving of meals. But today, with the more compact arrangements which are prevalent throughout the country, little breakfast rooms or nooks close to the kitchen are almost universally used for the serving of informal meals. Breakfasts, lunches, and even little family suppers seem to arrange themselves with the utmost ease, and afterwards the dishes may be quickly cleared and the consequent work done with the greatest facility.

In this age of color consciousness, the breakfast room may be made a place in which to enjoy a good meal easily and well prepared. It may, and usually does, present a color harmony and pleasing arrangement, too, which helps to promote a cheerful disposition and consequently a healthy and enjoyable vitality. With all of the fascinating fabrics, china and glassware, and rainbow hues of paints at the disposal of the homemaker it is indeed easy for her to make her breakfast room or alcove decorative. It is such a small room that only a little time and energy is required to make it most thoroughly enjoyable, both in matter of convenience and of color harmony.

4 Bushels of Beer Caps.

My father saved beer caps for years having at one time 4 bushels of them. A few years ago he made a foot scraper by nailing the caps, bottom side up on a piece of wood. A neighbor offered to buy it. Since then he has made and sold many, and now laughs at us for kidding him about his hobby.

Wearing Off the Nails.

We had a neighbor who was noted for his economical ways. A large building was under construction and every day after the workmen had gone home he would go and pick up the loose nails, bring them home, and dip the heads in paint to keep them from rusting he said.

Along the front of his property he built a board fence and finished the top with the boards laid flat. The children thought it great fun to walk on the top board, when he yelled at them we expected him to say "get down before you fall," but to our astonishment this is what we heard: "You children stop walking that fence, you'll wear the heads all offa' them nails."

Cutting the Ink Bill.

My pet economy was making ink for use in the office out of the discarded typewriter ribbons.

I would take an old ribbon, fill it into a discarded ink bottle and pour warm water over it until the bottle was full. After it stood a couple of days it was ready for general use and as a single ribbon would make a quart of ink, there was considerable saving so far as ink was concerned and the quality of the ink was very satisfactory. ## A Dollar for Your Dreams

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay you $1 for every dream published. Address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Death Foretold.

Years ago when I was young and studying music in Boston I met a young man. He had a beautiful singing voice and we had much in common.

In the course of time my friend became quite ardent in his attentions, but I persuaded him that it would be better to follow the course he had planned before meeting me, which was to continue his musical studies in Paris.

I left Boston for a concert tour. One day I received a rather pathetic letter from my friend. He was sick and begged me for frequent letters. Suddenly his letters ceased.

And then I had a dream. We were in Boston. Like all dreams, it wasn't clear. But they were all there—his mother and father, and on a long cot lay my tall, handsome friend. His cheeks were flushed, and thrown across him was a white robe.

The reality of that dream haunted me. The next day I wrote, inquiring as to the health of my friend. My answer came, but the handwriting was strange. His mother wrote. My friend had died the night of my dream.

She Enjoyed the Trip.

I was just seventeen and was to complete my high school course within two weeks. I dreamed that I received a letter from Mrs. D., mother's intimate friend, and that she suggested that I get permission from my parents to accompany her and her husband on a two months' trip abroad—this to be my graduation gift from them.

In the morning at the breakfast table I remarked that I had had a dream, but that I was really almost ashamed to repeat it, as it certainly would sound childish. After a little coaxing I related it, and my father said, "Well, well, little girl, I suppose I ought to sit at the window to watch for the postman." My mother told him not to tease me and I got ready to leave for school.

And now the climax! I had just reached the sidewalk when the postman came along and said, "A letter for you, Miss." Looking at it I saw it was from Mrs. D., and I quickly tore it open and devoured the contents. By the time I had reached my parents again I was all but swooning, and all I could do was to hand them my letter. It was an invitation to join them on a ten weeks' trip abroad as their guest, as my graduation gift! I enjoyed that trip! P. M. H.

Dream Leads to Bees.

My husband had put an empty beehive in a fork of an apple tree, hoping a swarm of bees might settle in it. We had forgotten about it for a few days, but the other night I dreamed a swarm of bees had really settled in it.

I told my husband the next morning of my dream and he only laughed at me, but we investigated and sure enough there were the bees.

Dream Wins $2 Prize.

Several months ago I was working on a limerick contest run by a newspaper. I was racking my brain trying to think up the cleverest "last" line for which a first prize of $25 was offered.

One night after studying on the subject until it was quite late, I dreamed that a hand of some kind was writing the line I needed to win and that it would be on a scratch pad that was then lying on my dresser. When I wakened the next morning I looked at the pad, the dream was so real, you see, but there was no line written on it. However, I remembered the line so I sent it in anyway. You can imagine my surprise, when several weeks later, I received a check for $25. My last line had won first prize.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

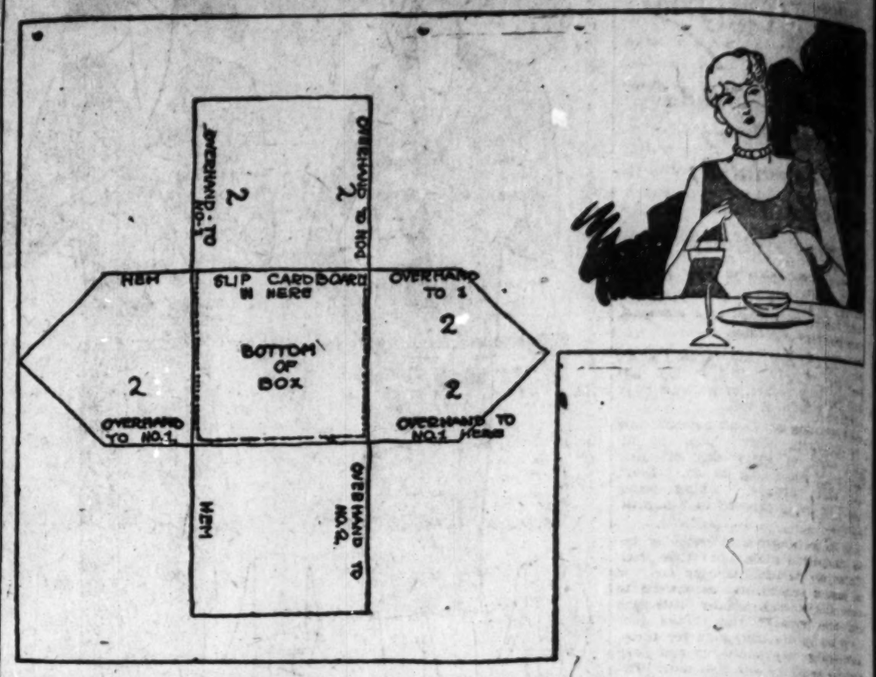
By Clotilde



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

DINNER NAPKINS that are not in constant use will keep beautifully white if laid away in dark blue linens. Of course, you can buy a square of linen and fold it over a pile of napkins—effectually covering them—but women who like every detail of their housekeeping done well will be glad to make a case or cases, I feel sure.

The pattern shown here is an excellent one and doesn't take long to make.

Two lengths of linen are cut, measuring when finished, 8 by 24 inches. If they are cut 9 by 35 inches there will be a half inch on each edge to allow for the hems. Pull a thread to cut by so the pieces will be perfectly straight.

The first thing to do after the strips are cut is to lay the hems down the long sides of both pieces and stitch. Then lay and stitch the same width hems across the ends.

You will see by looking at the diagram that the ends of one strip are finished in points. Fold so as to form points and overhand the edges together. Lay the strips having the pointed ends over the other strip, exactly as the drawing shows, and baste together on three sides. Holding the two pieces so that the strip with the square ends is uppermost, overhand or hem the two pieces together on three sides. Turn the other side up and cut a thin piece of pasteboard exactly the right size to slip into the edge that has been left open. This will be the bottom of the case, and the pasteboard will hold it firmly in place so that the napkins cannot wrinkle.

Now, with small stitches, overhand the four sides together from the bottom up for three inches. You will see that you have a regular box. Fold the square ends across one another and over these lay the pointed ends, these ends being held in place by a buttonholed loop and small button.

This case is easily laundered. Simply remove the pasteboard bottom. Shrink the linen before cutting, so that there will be no shrinking after the case is made.

PROPER care does make the hair more attractive. Lovely Hazel Forbes, of the Broadway hit, "Whoopee", proves it. She's wearing one of the Lenox Bobs, now so popular among New York girls.

Easy Way to Make Hair Grow Long, Soft, Abundant

YOU, too, can have long, soft and abundant hair which everyone admires, by using this simple method of caring for the hair; approved by leading hair-dressers; endorsed by stars of stage and screen; used by millions of busy girls and women who haven't time for complicated or laborious treatments.

Tonight when you arrange your hair; just put a little Danderine on your brush. Then as you draw the bristles through your hair—see how the scalp is soothed and toned. See how your hair becomes softer and more easily manageable; how its natural color is brought out; how it is given new brilliance and lustre.

The daily use of Danderine quickly encourages the hair to grow long, silky and abundant. It helps stop falling hair; dissolves every particle of dandruff crust; keeps the hair and scalp clean and healthy. Five million bottles sold a year on a money-back guarantee to give satisfaction and not a bottle returned! That proves Danderine's effectiveness.

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

A Falling Airplane.

My greatest thrill came one day while I was a passenger in an airplane. After being persuaded to go aloft with the men, I climbed into the open cockpit of a four seater biplane, hoping all the time I would come down alive. The boys scoffed at my fear and laughed the matter into insignificance. The plane taxied into position and when the pilot "gave her the gun," we soared into the air. We ascended about thirty-five feet when the motor gave one grand and glorious conk and we were headed earthward. A sinking sensation made me hold tightly to the seat.

I looked over the side of the cockpit. There came the earth rushing up to meet us. Ahead was a barbed wire fence which we barely cleared. We finally landed in a field of standing corn stalks. A shower of shredded corn stalks greeted us as the propeller chewed its way through them. Under the skillful hand of the pilot we landed unhurt, and as we climbed out of the cockpit the pilot nonchalantly remarked:

"Here are your tickets. The boss will refund the money." The thrill was far too great to ask for a refund of the meager price of the ride.

A Rattlesnake Scare.

My greatest thrill occurred some years ago when with my family I made a visit to the Rocky mountains of Colorado. For a treat relatives living in that region took us on a berry picking and camping trip up in the mountains where the berries were at their best. When night came on we took our blankets and pillows and bunked on the ground inside the tent, which we thought protection enough. Being exhausted and sleepy from the long trip and climbing the mountains, we were soon dead to the world. Suddenly we were awakened by the bang of a rifle and heard excited voices, but after the first shock all hands soon dropped off again. The next morning one of the men of our party, who was no stranger in that region, told us that he had kept vigil by the camp fire and had shot a huge rattle snake just in the act of crawling under the tent toward me. On the branch of a tree he had hung the huge green monster for a warning to other tourists.

Perils by Snake.

I live in the mountains of Virginia where there are poisonous snakes. One day when I went to the spring for a pail of water I was marveling at the sheer wall of stone surrounding the spring; it seemed more like the work of man than of nature, being so high and smooth. Two small trees shaded the spring and as my eyes traveled up the wall imagine my fright at seeing an immense moccasin snake hanging head downward immediately over my head. I jumped back and ran to seek my son's aid. He shot the snake which was nearly 3 feet long and 4 inches around. B. F.

Perhaps a Mirage?

One spring evening I was on my way to a country church in Oregon, walking. The moon was almost full and bright. During the day it had rained but later dried up so that the air was clear. Only ahead over a low place seemed to be a mist hanging and as I looked at it I saw a rainbow. The form and brightness of it were very clear but the colors only dimly discernible. The fairy beauty thrilled me as no work of art ever has, and I still keep the memory of that thrill though many people say they never saw anything like it and some are frank enough to say there never was any such thing.

Two Sunrises.

We had risen early, about four o'clock, preparatory to the trip to the Grand canyon. On our way from Williams, Ariz., to the canyon, we saw the sun rise in the usual manner, at the usual time. Arriving at the canyon we went down about three hundred feet. Our decent was rather rapid. We reached a spot to rest and upon turning toward the east you may imagine the thrill that comes once in a lifetime—two sun risings in one day. There came the sun over the rim, the same beautiful sunrise colors, birds waking and calling their tribute to a new day. Believe me when I say it was awe-inspiring and a real thrill.

"Now I Make Finest Skin Lotion I've Ever Used"

'It's Hollywood's new recipe

Here's the recipe for an amazing lotion you make yourself. Screen stars use it to keep the skin clear, smooth, youthfully fresh. They use it freely on face, neck, shoulders, hands and arms. One woman tells us: "I got three ounces of Orchard White from a druggist. To this I added the juice of two lemons which gave me a full quarter-pint of lotion. I anointed my hands, arms and face daily for a few days. Tan, burn and freckles vanished. Roughness disappeared. Now my face and hands are smooth and white."

Try this inexpensive Hollywood recipe for bleaching the skin. Get three ounces of Orchard White today.

Leola's Funeral Was Scarcely Over When Her Divorced Husband Came to Steal Her Bonds, "The Other Woman" Her Pearls—But a Dog, at Play, Works Havoc.

My, but she was dizzy! She couldn't get up, couldn't move.

LEOLA DERRING was dead. She had been dead for two days. She was so dead, indeed, that even now her funeral was being held in Greenwood cemetery.

The pitiful and curiously assorted cortège had left the old Harrington house, called sometimes "the Derring house," the ten years of Leola's marriage. There had been Dr. Colton, who walked more as if from the effects of alcohol than rheumatism, though it was the doctor's boast that he never tasted a drop; Mrs. Colton, clinging as usual to the doctor's arm and, as usual, too, looking apologetic and dowdy. There was Hortense Shellenberg, slim, carefully groomed, her slightly Semitic nose too whitely powdered and held too high; the Bronson "girls," gentle, shy, a faded reflection of how they looked at twenty-five. Mrs. Rutherford, she had been Daisy Marbury and Leola's best friend, hovered with Mr. Rutherford, decently solemn, in the background.

A few men, patently uncomfortable, had milled around. Leola Derring, alive, had been pleasant, hospitable. It was a bit thick, expecting them to come to a funeral, though, at that, they had no reason to suppose Leola had expected them. There was Emma, the maid, almost unconsciously putting things to rights even during the ceremony while she wiped her eyes and wondered what she was going to do for a job. There had been others, too. Old acquaintances to whom Leola had done kind things or had tried to do kind things. They were all dressed in the dowdy black folks think necessary to wear at funerals. Others whom Leola had helped—and Leola was like her parents had been, all of her people, in doing things when she could—hadn't thought it necessary to come to the funeral. After all, if you like a person you're sorry when you hear she is dead, but nothing can be done about it. What was the use of going 'way out to the Harrington house?

The mourners had sat in the "parlor" during the ceremony, ill at ease, self-conscious, trying to look as sad as the occasion called for, and they had all been glad when the Rev. Mr. Stootsby had stopped speaking and had signified to the ushers, old friends of the Harrington family, solemn, their hands in new white cotton gloves.

Poor Leola! It was too bad. Here she was, not forty yet, and dead. Still, it wasn't as if she had had anything to live for. They all felt that. What would she have done if she had lived? And to think that only two months before she had divorced Roger Derring. He never had been any good. If she had only waited, she could have been spared all of the trouble and unpleasantness of the divorce court—and Roger Derring could have married that Turner woman just the same. Well, it was rather too late thinking of that now. Her death, so sudden. A cold. Pleurisy, and she was gone. Why, most of them hadn't known until they read of her illness in the paper. The Gazette had mentioned that in the society column. Then, the item, saying she was dead.

NOW they had all gone to the cemetery. Even Emma. She wasn't coming back that night at all. Like most colored people, she had a peculiar feeling about death. She didn't like to stay in a house after a person had died. Not alone, anyhow. She'd come back tomorrow—and bring her sister with her and clean up—and take the things she wanted that were around the place. There were a lot of things. Dresses belonging to Miss Leola. And the pearls. They were awfully pretty, and Miss Leola had set a lot of store by them. And some money she knew about. O, she wouldn't go near that safe behind the desk in the library—where the papers were that Miss Leola was so careful about. Things like that it's dangerous for a darky to monkey with. Little things, money, clothes—why not? Miss Leola would have given them to her, more than likely. Who'd get them, anyhow? Miss Leola's people were all dead. Yes, she'd come back in the morning.

Emma was the last to leave the house. She saw that the windows were closed. The air had been cold, fall coming on and the day a slate gray, and there had been a wind blowing. She had had a fire in the fireplace and she looked now, to make sure that it was out. She tried the back door and slammed the front door behind her. Well, the house was safe.

She didn't think of the gas heater until she was on the way to the cemetery. She drove out in the Ford with Joe, who took care of the garden—when there was any one taking care of the garden. Well, nothing could happen—the heater had gone for hours before, and nothing had happened. It was a portable heater Miss Leola had bought last year. Emma had lit it to take the chill off, upstairs. She knew some of the women would be wanting to fix up—and look around under the pretext of wiping their eyes. Well, what if the heater did go out—or even make the house catch on fire? What if Rags pulled the tube off, the way he did before, when Miss Leola had been so annoyed? It might kill Rags. What of it? Nobody wanted him, anyhow. He hadn't had any teeth in years. And what good was he, crawling under the bed when any one came in? Well, she had locked the doors and windows. No one could get in. That was certain.

RAGS locked in the house all alone. Why not? She had fed him in the morning. He had water—and a bone he couldn't even chew. She'd feed him tomorrow. She wouldn't go back tonight, that was certain. Not in that house. Funny about dogs. She wondered what Rags knew about death. Dogs are supposed to know things like that. And he hadn't whined. She asked Joe. Joe didn't know, didn't bother. O, well, it wouldn't hurt Rags to be locked in alone. He'd been alone when Miss Leola was away.

Funny, Miss Leola being dead. Now she'd have to find another place. Miss Leola had been good to her. Better than most. Always giving her things. Why, she hadn't bought a dress in ages. If Miss Leola had only been a little more, well, up to date, stylish, it would have been better. More like Miss Shellenberg. Funny, their being friends. She visualized Leola Derring, her slender body, her white face with its too high forehead, her brown eyes. Much nicer than—than that Turner woman. Funny, Mr. Derring falling in love with a woman like that. She was sort of loose. Mrs. Turner had asked her questions, too. Once in her shop. Once on the street. She hadn't got much out of her, Emma knew that.

There! The safe swung open.

She hadn't even told Miss Leola. What was the use of worrying her? She had had enough on her mind, alone in that big house. And now Miss Leola was in her coffin on the way to the graveyard. Well, we all come to it. And we never know whether there is anything afterward, either. Funny. Shivery to think of, too. Tomorrow she'd make Martha come with her and together they'd go through things. No one would miss—or know—what Miss Leola had. No one but Miss Leola.

Rags, left alone in the house, scampered around a little. A dog who is ten years old has left his best scampering days behind him. He was a red eyed poodle, white when Leola had taken care of him, but spotted now and a brown edge to his white fur. Leola had been ill for three weeks, and a white poodle can gather a lot of dirt in that length of time. The hair on his head was matted, giving his usually pert face, with its three round black button features, which resolved into eyes and a nose when you got close enough, an inebriated look. His eyes were more bleary than usual, his expression more questioning and doleful. He worried the bone, dragged it into his mistress' bedroom. He bit one of his mistress' slippers and, because there were no humans around to stop him, jumped on the bed and fought with one of the pillows, a luxury usually denied him. Finally, hearing footsteps, familiar but not welcome, he retreated under the bed. It was warm there. The gas heater made a pleasant glow. He alternately dozed and pricked up his ears. A funny world. Not the way it used to be. Those footsteps, now! Well, a dog, if he knows anything, knows when to keep out of the way.

THEY were Roger Derring's footsteps. During the funeral services of his late wife, Roger had stood back of the big tree on the side lawn. When the folks started coming out of the house, he had gone behind the screened porch off the kitchen. That gave him a good view, and there wasn't a chance in the world of any one seeing him.

The Bronson "girls." Hugh! As stupid looking as ever. Dr. and Mrs. Colton. They had to come, of course. What an old fool the doctor was! Mrs. Rutherford. Not bad looking. How had Leola happened to go with her? The Shellenberg. Dick Apperson. The pallbearers.

Poor old Leola. Too bad, really. Not a bad old girl, in a way. After all, it had been her money he'd lived on most of the time. Too serious for him, though. He liked a gay time. She was always wanting him to read things. Too much of a dreamer. Funny, that he'd fallen for her in the first place. Even now he wondered whether it was the Harrington money altogether, or something about her white face, her big eyes, that high, pale forehead.

Dolly Turner! There was a girl. A trim figure, plump but pleasing. A round red cheek. Knew how to toss her head and laugh. Why had she always hated Leola so much? He wondered. She always felt that Leola "had something on her," used to make him promise that if Leola ever sent him any letters about her that he wouldn't read them. Said they were "forgeries." Funny. Must have been something in it, though. Still, Leola never sent him anything. Funny about Leola. He had thought she was crazy about him, and yet when he asked her to get a divorce she agreed right away. It wasn't as if there had been another man. After he left she went around with the same people, those solemn friends of hers. Some of them hadn't even cared enough about her to come to the funeral.

He watched the last mourners leave, saw Emma come out, close the door, and try it after her. Funny nigger, Emma. He'd never liked her.

He'd wait a minute to make sure. There! All gone, now. Luckily he'd kept the key. Never realized how it would come in handy. Gee, if he'd only known Leola was going to die. It would have been so much easier just to wait. Easier than this. O, well.

He looked around, out of the corners of his eyes, as he walked with apparent carelessness up the path to the front steps. Who could see him? No one ever came out here, anyhow. That was one objection he'd always had to this old place. Leola liked it, and insisted on staying. Made remarks about how the town was "growing out to it." This town never would "grow out." What an ugly old house! Ugly and hard, with its dark woodwork, walnut most of it. The period he hated most. A silly period. A mansard roof and little curlycues around the porch. Leola had done what she could inside with lamps and bookshelves. And to think that they had had a couple of chances to sell, and could have bought one of those new bungalows in Farley addition. Now he and Dolly——

He let himself in at the front door. An awkward lock. Well, he was in now. Just luck he'd kept the key. He left the door open behind him. Somehow, one always left that door open. When he had lived there it was always unlatched. He went in.

Just as he remembered it. Why not? It hadn't been many months since he'd lived here. What a gloomy place, in spite of Leola's efforts. The center hall, the "parlor," that Leola had taken such pride in rearranging, on one side, the library on the other, the curved, dark stairway.

The gray "scenic" wallpaper in the hall, put on shortly after they were married, was as yellow and stained as if it had been there for generations. He shivered as he looked into the "parlor." Too many evidences of the funeral. Undertaker's chairs. They'd call for those in the morning, he knew. Stiff folding chairs, their light yellow wood out of place in this dull room. Ashes in the fireplace, the room still warm. To think that here Leola had lain dead. Leola. For ten years they had been man and wife. She had lain in his arms, warm, yielding—yielding for Leola. At that, those first years she'd been sweet and loving enough. And now, dead. Well, we've all got to go.

He was sorry now he'd treated Leola the way he had. He knew how amazed, how puzzled she had been when he asked for his freedom. She'd been a good sport at that. Lots of women would have held on, made a scene. Leola just looked at him in that funny, odd way. The Harrington look! Her face had got a little whiter and she'd nodded—and gone ahead and got the divorce just the way he'd asked her to. He wondered if the Bronson "girls" ever told her about the affair he'd had with the waitress at the Ellison house. Funny, how they'd found out about that. How did he know the girl was their maid's cousin? Well, she'd never found out about her own friend, Hortense, nor about that pretty girl in the Banner store.

IT wasn't as if Dolly were anything like these. Not exactly, anyhow. Of course, Dolly had a past. He knew that. She'd sort of hinted for him not to believe things if he heard anything—and you don't hint that way unless there are things you are afraid will be found out and believed. Who cared? Better a girl like Dolly, with some pep to her, than some one like Leola, too good to breathe.

Not that Leola ever spoke about her goodness. It was more than that—a sort of cloak she held around her—that made her seem far away. "You think you're too good for me!" How often he'd said that—reproached her because she was a Harrington. She was gentle, too gentle, even; a gentleness that would have been humility in any one not Leola. Well, with all her superior ways, she was dead. And he and Dolly were alive. And he'd come to get, well, things he felt were coming to him. If—if he had waited they would have been his. He wasn't at all hesitant about taking them now.

He went into the library. He had a curious sense of some one being with him. Of course. He had expected that. He was glad he didn't believe in ghosts, that sort of thing. The bonds were in the little safe back of Leola's desk. Luckily he knew the combination—was about the only one who did know it. He'd get them and get out. How silly of Leola to keep them there instead of in a regular deposit box in the bank. He'd spoken about it to her so many times. Negotiable bonds, too. Still, a good thing now. He could never have got them any other way. Now he could say she gave them to him months before if anything ever came up. What could come up? No one knew what bonds she had, anyhow. Leola never talked about things.

He'd go to Chicago, establish credit, open a bank account, cash the bonds, be fixed for years. Marry Dolly? Maybe. He would see how things turned out. Dolly mightn't look so good in Chicago when he had money. Well, time enough to settle that when he had to. Dolly was all right. Jolly, full of fun. But getting married again, that was a serious business.

This dark room! He'd never liked it. Never liked any of the house. He liked pretty things around—things like Dolly had. She had lamp shades with little ruffled bright colors. This room was gloomy—the heavy doors, the wainscoting. Well built and solid. What of it?

HE looked around furtively. No one could come in, of course. There was no one who could come in. Hadn't he seen Emma drive away? Didn't he know that the undertaker's men never came back until the next day? Leola lived here all alone—and Leola was dead.

What a house! Well, he'd never have to come here again. That was certain. He was lucky getting out of the whole thing. Free. With money, too. If—of course, he could get the bonds.

Noiselessly, as if some one were listening, he pushed the desk aside. Leola's desk. Quickly he fingered the lock. What—if—knowing that he knew—Leola had altered the combination? Six—seven—three—of course. Leola was too simple, too trusting, to think of such a thing. There! The safe swung open.

Letters—a rubber band around them. He pulled out a packet of them, put them back. Pulled out another. Shoved aside bills—small bills from the local stores. Poor Leola! She never had many luxuries. He never gave her any, that was certain. Still, she had the Harrington money. Not as much as people thought, but she could have cashed a bond now and then, lived better, if she had wanted to. He was glad she hadn't now. Glad, too, that she'd been foolish and not kept the bonds in a safe deposit vault.

Letters. Why, some he'd written. He opened one of them. It was a brief note he'd sent her four years before. He'd written it when he'd been on a fishing trip. He did write good letters. Women always told him that. Some of them had suggested that he write stories. Maybe he could write if he got around to it, now that he could take time and not bother about working.

He was trembling. He looked at his hands curiously. They were shaking. Why be so nervous? Of course, he didn't want to be caught here, but he could explain that away if he had to, though he didn't want to have to explain. No one would come in.

He looked around, reached into the back of the safe with fingers he tried to keep from shaking. Steady! Yes, everything was all right!

His fingers closed over the firm package of bonds. The wide rubber band around them. Of course.

With a sigh of relief he drew out the bonds. He looked at them without taking off the rubber band. Just what he thought. The very bonds he had seen, knew about, wanted. Railway bonds—city securities—all safe, conservative, and not registered.

He'd put them in his pocket, get out. He closed the safe, all of the rubbish inside, pushed the desk back against it. No use getting any one suspicious. Why, they'd never know he'd been here at all.

What was that? Yes, there was some one—some one coming in! He listened. Some one was coming up the front walk! If the library only had front windows so he could look out! There was only the one little window toward the front and he knew you couldn't see anything from there. The other windows opened on to the garden. He could see who it was as soon as the person came inside the hall—but then the person could see him at the same time. He didn't want to be seen. Instinctively he crept over toward the library closet.

It was a small closet, high and dark. He stepped inside. He'd almost closed it, leaving it open just a little so he could breathe. As soon as the person went away——

He closed the door gently, his hand on the side. He took his hand away. Perhaps his nervousness gave the door a greater impetus than he had intended—or perhaps it was so old and heavy that, it moved almost by itself. Before he realized it he heard a click, knew that the door had closed. He was on the inside!

How dark it was! Damn it—these old houses were built too well. Why, the damned closet was sealed as tight as a grave. He couldn't breathe long in here. As soon as the footsteps went away he'd get out. He began to run his hand inside the door, feeling for the handle. Then he remembered! The closet door didn't have a handle inside! None of the closet doors in the whole damned house had handles inside! He was locked in—locked in the closet! He'd wait a minute, try to locate where the person was, bang on the door. He'd have to do that. Have to get out.

He heard, faintly enough through the sealed door, some one come in, slam the door, go up the stairs. Who could it be? It sounded like—like a woman. What did it matter who it was now? He'd wait for the steps to come down again.

He waited, listening. He couldn't hear anything. He hit the door with his fist. He was surprised at what little sound he could make. Well, he could make more noise than that when the footsteps came down, when there was some chance of being heard. Of course. They'd have to come down some time soon. If—if he could stand it that long. Or Emma would come back from the funeral. Some one would have to hear him. He couldn't die here, trapped. He wondered how long he could hold out.

He banged again. Why, he'd have to get out! He had the bonds now, more of them, even, than he had imagined there were. He felt of them reassuringly. Of course. A pleasant, thick package.

HE stood there a few minutes, almost inert. Then a sort of panic seized him. When would the footsteps come down the stairs? He began pounding on the door. He paused, pounded again. Kicked at the door. Surely you could hear those sounds, even upstairs. He waited a minute, began pounding away. Why was the damned house built so well? If it were an ordinary house, with neighbors! There were none near—excepting the person upstairs.

Those footsteps. Had they been real ones? They had sounded like a woman's. Like Dolly's. Like Leola's. What woman could be coming here? Emma couldn't have returned yet. Maybe—maybe it was Leola coming back? How silly to have thoughts like that. Leola to—to haunt him.

He didn't believe in ghosts. Why, it would be all right. He'd pound on the door. The person upstairs—some one would hear him. With a terrible fear he began to pound, in spurts, in regular rhythms. He began to perspire. He couldn't breathe easily.

He was a little dizzy now from the heat, and the closeness, and the dark, and the pounding. How much longer could he hold out? He struck again, felt again around the door, tried to think up some possible way of getting out. This damned closet! This damned house! He was silent, struck with bruised fists, kicked on the door. Pounded again, was silent.

It was Dolly Turner whom Roger had heard coming up the path. Outwardly, Dolly looked as trim and red cheeked and full of spirits as ever. She walked as always, on [illegible] were a little too small, [illegible] too high. She was feeling [illegible] cheerful.

Since Leola Derring's death [illegible] had been unable to sleep. Two nights of lying awake. Before that there had been other nights of wakefulness, but Dolly frequently had insomnia. She liked to explain that her sleeplessness was due to "nerves." She prided herself on her nerves, as if the possession made her a bit superior. In spite of the fact that she was slightly overweight she suffered from "nervous indigestion," too, and was glad she was having an ailment, it should be such a fashionable one.

Other neurotic traits she possessed she ignored or made much of. She was the sort of woman who could take an obvious defect, when it happened to her, and turn it into a virtue. "I can't sleep at night," she'd say, and immediately her hearers, if in her set, felt that being able to sleep showed crass materialism. She was just a trifle hard of hearing, too, and made much of the fact. She was always taking medicine, sleeping powders, headache tablets. Some one was always recommending some wonderful preparation which she would take faithfully, talking of it frequently, and changing to another when it proved worthless and a new product recommended.

NOW, Dolly's sleeplessness was due to Leola's death and to the fact that she was having one of her "spells." Headaches and nerves. Is infinitely above folks who had nothing the matter with them!

She had often said to Roger about Leola, "I don't see how you can stand her, with her pale face and sickly ways. How can she understand you—why, she has no more feelings than a cat. You said yourself she's asleep the minute her head touches the pillow. I'm glad I'm not that kind." Dolly always prided herself because she wasn't like other folks.

Just now she was not especially happy over her difference. Her head ached. She was nervous and worried. The two headache tablets she had just taken, especially recommended by a Mr. Blatz, who traveled out of Chicago for a shirt house and whom she met at the Palace hotel the night before, were having no apparent effect.

Out of curiosity and something more, a combination of triumph and fear, she had come to the old Harrington house to watch the funeral. From across the road she had watched the people go in, had loitered there. When the first mourners had reappeared, and before the pallbearers and the coffin had reached the hearse, she had hurried down the road on her too high heels. From a distance she had watched the small funeral procession pass. She had started to walk away, had walked a piece, waited, turned around. She'd pass the house again.

The door of the house was open. That surprised her just a little. Still, why shouldn't it be open? Maybe the undertakers were inside, or some one else. She had seen Emma in the funeral procession. O, well.

She started to go on—and then a thought came to her—came uppermost in her mind. It had been lurking in that layer between conscious and subconscious for a long time. Roger had said things, little things, months ago, that made Dolly believe Leola had some letters that belonged to her. She didn't know what they were. They might have been letters she had written to some man on the road, for she knew innumerable traveling men. They might have been letters she had received and thrown carelessly into a waste basket to be fished out by some servant girl.

She didn't know where she had first got the idea about the letters, but she felt she was right—and she didn't feel at all settled about it. Leola was the sort of woman, she felt, who, if she had any letters or anything else detrimental to Dolly, wouldn't have destroyed the evidence. Even now, some one might be pawing through Leola's things, finding them. She felt, if Leola had any letters, that they were hidden in one of her bureau drawers. That's where women always kept things—where she would have kept them.

Why not go into the house, look around? It would be easy enough to explain things—if—if she had to explain. It might embarrass her for the minute, but what of it? Dolly wasn't one to be kept back by fear of a little embarrassment. Why, she'd just walk in, pretend she had come for the funeral. The funeral was over? Then, "Excuse me, I didn't know."

Emma was the last to leave the house.

IN spite of its gloom, the house depressed Dolly. She had never been inside of it before and she was not used to houses of this size nor of this class. The big rooms, the high ceilings, the heavy woodwork seemed grand, in spite of the gloom. The old girl had money. No doubt of that. Funny, when she first met Roger she had thought he was the one who had the money. Poor old thing! Why, she wouldn't be surprised if he didn't have a cent. Maybe she had been wrong, letting him get a divorce. She'd have to marry him now. O, why should she? She wasn't tied to him, anything like that. They'd talk in this town, of course, but who cared about this town? She could get out, go to another place. No one would be the wiser. She had been married and divorced, knew that getting out of a marriage wasn't nearly as easy as getting into one.

It was sort of nice, having a man to look after things, settle the bills. But she wanted a man who could keep a car, could provide a good home for her. Roger meant well enough, devoted and all that, but she was beginning to see how lazy he was. He hadn't amounted to anything and never would. She'd look around. In the meantime, before she decided she'd keep Roger dangling. After all, a woman needs a man around. He was better than no man at all.

No one in, evidently. She peeped. Too many signs of the funeral there, into the library, into the living room. She'd go upstairs, see what she could see.

She thought the front room upstairs would be Leola's. She discovered it was a sort of upstairs sitting room. She didn't like that, though she didn't know

CARD 13

by LUTHER FORD

"You heard no shot whatever?"

Hitherto:

TONY GILMORE, scenario writer, lives a gay life in Hollywood. Among old flames are Dolly Brownrigg, now richly married, and Mrs. Ida Hunter, a movie extra. One more recent is Selma Saranoff, screen siren. With Gilmore live his young sister, Aileen, and their aunt, Mrs. Harriet Barnett. His best friend is Arthur Raneleigh, novelist. His closest neighbor is Holkar, a Hindu scholar. Gilmore quarrels with Selma and her suitor, Gerald Hartley, during a party at the Brownrigg's, but leaves that place with them. He is shot and killed after arriving with them at his home. John B. Logan, chief of detectives, and Kent, district attorney's investigator, begin inquiry into the case. Black, a plain clothes man, searches Gilmore's effects.

INSTALLMENT III.

Muddied Waters.

BLACK reported that he had found nothing but a few handkerchiefs and began to search the drawers of a chiffonier. Here he presently made a less prosaic find.

"Look!" He gingerly held aloft a suit of orchid-tinted silk pajamas edged with lace.

Kent viewed the exhibit without surprise.

"Any monogram, Sergeant?"

"No. And no laundry mark, either. I wonder if they belonged to Saranoff?"

"What is your expert opinion, Mr. Raneleigh?" asked Kent with mock gravity. "Do you think she'd be apt to wear that shade?"

"I can't say."

"And you're making no guesses, eh! Lay the pretties back where you found them, Sergeant."

They returned to the study and, under Kent's direction, Black searched the large writing desk. The lowest drawer on the right contained a file of typed correspondence, but from other drawers came to light neat bundles of letters in their envelopes, each bundle secured by an elastic band.

"Those look more promising," said Kent. "We'll have them all examined. When you get free a moment, Sergeant, phone and ask to have Emery assigned to the job. He may not be able to do it at once, but meanwhile we'll seal the rooms."

Black looked embarrassed.

"Shan't I speak to the Chief first?"

"Of course," replied Kent shortly. "Put it as my request. Logan and I understand each other. I intend asking him to assign you to the case to work with my office. Is that all right with you?"

"It sure is, Mr. Kent."

Raneleigh sensed departmental jealousy. So even these ferrets had their human traits! A deep depression settled over him as he watched them at the desk, where but a few hours since Tony himself had stood. How little had he dreamed that he, who was so secretive, would soon have no secrets! What use to plan and struggle for success! What use was life itself that could be so suddenly snuffed out! Mortals were chaff, blown hither and yon by capricious winds, and as irrationally dropped to earth and extinction.

Gloomily he walked over to the typewriter desk. Beside the machine lay Tony's unfinished letter. It was addressed to a magazine editor, who had asked for an article on the real Hollywood, and seemed of no importance now. Beside the machine also lay a flashlight. Had it been there earlier in the evening? He could not recall. Black, at the larger desk, with a self-important air was checking each package of letters with an official blue pencil. Then, as he shifted the bundles, Raneleigh caught sight of a gleaming object. It was the silver flask! Kent saw it at the same moment.

"Look here, Mr. Raneleigh," said he "Is this the flask you mentioned?"

"Yes."

"The one you thought Gilmore had with him tonight?"

"I know he had it with him, Mr. Kent. I'm as sure of it as I am that I see it now. Do you question my word?"

"O, no! Only your memory. It's easy to be mistaken in such matters. Listen for an hour to any trial and you'd have ample proof of that. Saranoff claims that Gilmore must have owned more than one gun. Isn't it just as probable that he had more than one flask?"

"But this is the flask he always carried. I know its design. Turn it over. You'll find a camel in black enamel on the other side."

Kent carefully reversed the flask by its neck. The little emblem of thirst was there.

"Odd," he said. "Sergeant, who searched the body?"

"I did. There was no flask."

RANELEIGH perceived that Black, too, doubted his memory.

"Tony had the flask," he repeated. "It was filled with brandy."

"Empty now," said the sergeant.

"It was full when he left. He offered me a drink."

"Did you take it?" asked Kent.

"No."

"Did Gilmore take a drink?"

"No. And it isn't likely that he had any of it at the Brownrigg house."

"No need, I reckon. From all I hear, that was as wet a party as Hollywood could reasonably expect."

Raneleigh was impatient with this detour.

"But since the flask is here now," he said, "Tony must have come into the house before he was shot."

"The point is worth considering." It was obvious that Kent attached no weight to it and still thought his memory at fault.

"What stumps me," said Black, sniffing ecstatically at the stopper, "is where the good liquor went."

Baffled by it all, Raneleigh walked wearily over to the fireplace and leaned against the old fashioned mantelpiece.

"I suppose we'd better examine the ashes," said Kent jocosely. "Sherlock Holmes always did, I believe."

Black, grinning, knelt by the hearth, where his grin vanished.

"There's a whisky smell, sure enough!"

"Mightn't it be brandy?" asked Raneleigh.

"It's one or the other. And here's the spot where it was spilled."

KENT stooped with a pocket magnifying glass. When he straightened he looked bored.

"I can't see that this is of great importance," he said. "We'll go upstairs."

"But doesn't it prove," pressed Raneleigh, "that Tony came in here before he was killed?"

"Not conclusively." Kent threw the insistent amateur a tolerant smile. "If he did come in, wouldn't he have taken his overcoat? In any case, it leaves us just where we were. Either Hartley or Saranoff is guilty."

They passed the policeman at the newel post and ascended a staircase that turned, halfway, at a landing and ended above in a square hall furnished in wicker and bright chintz. The second floor of the châlet was known in real estate parlance as the upper deck, and its structure did indeed resemble a deckhouse, being set back on all sides from the story below. This arrangement left space but for a bath at the rear and a large bedroom on either side.

"Miss Gilmore's room?" asked Kent as they entered the one on the left.

"Yes," said Raneleigh. "Tony let her have her own way with it."

"No Chinese nightmare for her, eh? I call this pretty."

Raneleigh remembered with what eagerness the girl had once displayed it when all was fresh and new. How she had gloried in the gray woodwork, the mauve and gray hangings, the rugs in dull rose, the painted furniture, gray again with bands of mauve and rose, and the miraculous chaise longue—her very first! The daybed was as she had sprung out of it, but the silken coverlet over the footrail was neatly folded, as were the garments she had removed the night before and laid upon a chair. Orderly, too, were the trinkets on the dresser, the frocks in the closet, the little regiment of shoes. But such an intrusion woke his resentment, and, when Black laid hands on a drawer, he voiced it.

"You can't suspect Aileen," he said. "Is it necessary to ransack her belongings?"

"No," Kent replied. "Your identification of the gun convinces me that it wasn't an inside job. We'll have a look at the other bedroom, Sergeant."

AS they came to Mrs. Barnett's bedroom across the hall Raneleigh glanced about with less compunction. Here reigned solidity instead of subtlety, Iowa rather than Versailles. No fripperies for Aunt Harriet! Her taste ran to solid mahogany, chenille rugs and stiff hangings in green and taupe. Conspicuous among the pictures were two faded engravings, "The Rock of Ages" and "Breaking Home Ties." On a nightstand, by the bed, was her worn Bible. The dressing table, like the room in general, was immaculate, but Raneleigh noted with surprise an open box of powder of a pinkish hue. Face powder! He had not thought her so corrupted by modernity. In the partly open top drawer was a heap of brown kid curlers. Who, back in the days of his youth, had worn these quaint contrivances? From the dim past he evoked the figure of the family housekeeper.

"We won't waste time here," said Kent. "Let's interview the ladies themselves."

Raneleigh hoped to soften this ordeal.

"Aileen feels her brother's death very deeply. I had a few words with her just after you came."

Kent nodded.

"It's always tough on the survivors. I'll make it as easy for her as I can. How is the aunt taking it?"

"More calmly. She is a person of great force of character, as you will see."

Of this Kent had abundant proof as soon as he entered the library, where, the room being still in comparative darkness, he requested more light.

"Must the whole place blaze with electricity?" Mrs. Barnett protested. "This poor child is prostrated. If I may not care for her in her bedroom, I should certainly be shown some consideration here. I think it's outrageous that we can't go upstairs in our own house."

"I'm sorry, madam," he said, with a glance toward the couch. "We are merely following our usual routine. Things must be kept undisturbed until the police investigation is complete. Otherwise the family, moving about, might unintentionally destroy clews."

"But my nephew was killed outdoors. What clews did you expect to find in the house?"

"We had nothing definite in mind. Yet, as it happens, we did find something of interest."

"May I ask what it was?"

"It's too slight to discuss as yet," he replied suavely. "Now, if you'll be good enough to step into the next room, I'll hear your account of this sad affair."

Aileen started up in alarm.

"Must I stay here all alone?"

"No harm can come to you, Miss Gilmore. There's a policeman in the hall."

"A policeman!" Her voice became a tremulous wail. "O, Ran, won't you stay with me?"

"Of course," he said.

She lay back with a weak "Thank you," and he dropped into a chair near her, and closed his eyes. How long had he been on his feet? It seemed a month. He tried to relax his muscles, to make his harassed mind a blank. Tomorrow would teem with problems. Tomorrow? No; today. Through a rift beneath a window shade the tardy winter dawn came stealing. He got no rest. Mrs. Barnett and the tireless investigator from the district attorney's office soon returned.

"And now, Miss Gilmore," said Kent, "do you feel able to tell me what aroused you last night?"

The girl sat up, white as death itself, and groped for Raneleigh's hand.

"I did not sleep well," she said. "I—I was so disappointed."

"Disappointed?"

"Yes. You see I wanted to go to the party. Mrs. Brownrigg invited me. But they wouldn't hear of it. I kept thinking about it. I'd have loved to talk it over with Tony when he came. But he never let me sit up for him. The only time I tried it he was cross. So I lay there a long time wondering what I'd missed." She began to weep softly.

"But you finally fell asleep?" Kent prompted.

"Yes." She dabbed at her swollen eyes.

"What wakened you?"

"Aunt called me. She said that something was wrong—that some one was ringing the bell and pounding on the door. I wasn't frightened. I thought that Tony had forgotten his keys. Then I heard voices—several voices—and I put on my dressing gown and came downstairs."

"Whom did you see first?"

"Mr. Hartley and Mr. Holkar. They were at the door. And then—then I went out and saw Tony lying there in the moonlight—so still—so still. O, I shall never forget it!"

"What did you do next?"

"I think I ran to him. Yes, I know I did. But it was all so confusing—Miss Saranoff's screams, the neighbors crowding around. Doctor Chirpman came—I remember that, for he felt my pulse. And I saw police. Everything began to spin round me. I was so faint they brought me in here. I've been here ever since."

"Did you come downstairs with Mrs. Barnett?"

Raneleigh, still holding her hand, felt her tremble.

"Yes. We came down together."

"That's all," said Kent. "You may go to your room now. We must seal your brother's suite for the present, but the rest of the house is at your disposal."

SHE cast a piteous look at Raneleigh.

"Don't let them take Tony away!"

"It may be necessary, my dear."

"Not from his home—his own home!"

"Come, Aileen," said her aunt, "you must rest."

"Yes," urged Raneleigh, "you'll need all your strength."

"I don't want you to leave," said the girl, as he rose. "Why do you?"

"I'm trying to help the police, Aileen."

"But don't they know who killed Tony?"

"It seems perfectly clear to me," said Mrs. Barnett, "that the Saranoff woman was the cause of his death. These play actresses ruined Anthony."

Raneleigh kept his thoughts to himself. As he rejoined Kent in the hall an officer opened the front door.

"The Chief sent me in for you, Mr. Kent," he announced, breathing heavily. "We've had a little excitement out here. Saranoff put up a fight when we started to shove her into the police car. It took all hands to do it. She kicked and bit and scratched like a wildcat."

"Why bring your troubles to me?" asked Kent wearily. "I'm no animal trainer."

"Because the Chief's got her going at last. He told her it was the hoosegow for her and all that goes with it. She's scared. She says she'll come clean."

"Good work!" Kent was infused with new life. "We ought to clear this up now in short order."

THE gray dawn revealed a haggard Saranoff perched in the police car that had backed into the driveway behind Gilmore's limousine. Her make up was blurred, her hair disheveled, her clothing awry. On either side of her sat a still more battle scarred officer. One had a long scratch across his indignant face. The other eyed ruefully a rent in his sleeve and a cap damaged beyond repair. Only Logan, watching the captive from the ground with the air of a dog that has treed a beast of unknown and puzzling species, appeared to have escaped unscathed from the fray.

Raneleigh, whom Selma had seldom noticed, now found himself in urgent demand.

"Ran!" she appealed shrilly. "See what they've done to me!"

"My God, what crust!" sputtered one of her victims. "See what she did to me!"

"I wish I'd bitten your ear off," she retorted. "Ran, I'm talking to you. Can't you get me out of here? These boneheads say they'll put me in the jug. I keep telling them I'll talk. They won't listen to reason. Are you going to stand by and see an old friend treated like this? Do something! It will ruin me in pictures if I'm jailed."

Kent, who had had a word with Logan, nodded to her sweating guards.

"Step down if you wish, Miss Saranoff," he said. "If you're ready to talk, we're ready to listen."

She drew her fur coat about her, not with her old arrogance, but shrinkingly as if chilled to the marrow. Her half veiled eyes were lusterless.

"Do I have to go in there again?" she asked with a furtive glance toward the house.

"No. Tell your story here and this time tell it straight. You can't fool us. We know more about this case than you think. No lies now. Give us the truth."

"O, I will!" she declared. "It—it must have been Gerald who did it. I wanted to shield him. But I can't—can I? What do you want me to say? Where must I begin? Do you want to hear about the party?"

"We know what you did at the party. You assaulted Gilmore, as a mob of witnesses will testify. It's what happened after you left that you've got to explain."

"I will. All of it. After we drove off I had a drink of whisky from Gerald's flask. It was awful stuff. I thought it would brace me. But it didn't. It made me sick. I was horribly sick. And Tony wasn't nice about it. He taunted me and, when I swore at him, he called me a drunken broad. Yes, that's what he called me! I was wild and, at the first crossing where there was a stop sign, I got into the back seat."

"Without leaving the car?"

"Yes. I just climbed over. Gerald helped me. Then I passed out."

"Totally paralyzed, eh?"

"I guess so. Gerald's liquor was rotten. He would keep buying it from that Dago bootlegger! The man told him hard luck stories about his sick family. Anyhow, he bought his poison. Gerald's soft."

"When did you come to?"

"I don't know just when it was."

"Or where?"

"O, yes. It was right here. Gerald was slapping me. In the face. And he shook me. Then I saw Tony stretched out on the ground. It's true, as I said, that I got down and listened to his heart. But I couldn't hear a single beat. And then," she continued, her strange eyes beginning to flame, "then I got in Dutch. You see, Gerald said that the shot came from behind the shrubbery. He told me not to breathe that Tony and I had quarreled on the way over and that I changed to the back seat. He told me to say that Tony and I were necking and that, when he got out, some one let him have it from the shrubbery. He said no one would believe I was asleep, but that if we both stuck to his story, everything would be jake. I was a fool to listen to him, but I was all in and couldn't think straight, and people began pouring in from all sides before I could pull myself together. So, when the cops asked questions, I gave them the story Gerald had fixed up. It was a big mistake, but I'm doing what I can to set things right. I've got my own reputation to consider, haven't I?"

"Yes. And your own neck. If you saw Hartley fire that shot, now's the time for you to say so."

"I didn't see him fire it. I was asleep."

"But you think he did it. You stated so a moment ago."

Selma hesitated.

"It's terrible to suspect him, but if Tony was killed with his own gun——" She left the inference incomplete.

"Couldn't it have been the shot that wakened you?"

"No. It was Gerald slapping me, just as I said."

"I WANT to ask one more question. Did Gilmore, after he arrived here, go into the house?"

"Go into the house?" she repeated, peering at him through half closed lids. "How should I know? I tell you I was asleep."

"I see," said Kent. "Well, Miss Saranoff, we'll permit you to enjoy more of the sleep your system seems so much to require."

"You'll let me go home?"

"Yes. There will, of course, be a police guard in plain clothes at your house."

"Why must I have a guard?"

"It will spare you annoyance by the curious."

"I'm used to publicity," said Selma.

"No doubt. The guard will also see that you don't absent-mindedly leave the state on location or something of that sort. Shall we find you a taxi? I daresay one of these officers will be delighted to speed you on your homeward way."

Raneleigh watched her depart without a backward glance. Logan began yapping commands.

"Phone the autopsy surgeon. We want that bullet. Tell him to forget his breakfast. Rush Hartley to headquarters. I'll be down after I have my ham and eggs."

"What's the charge, Chief?"

"What do you suppose? Running by a traffic signal? Hold him on suspicion of murder."

Raneleigh turned away.

"I don't care to see this," he told Kent. "Poor Hartley was always civil to me. In a way, I liked him. He's not vicious—merely weak."

"I was about to ask you to come next door with me," said the investigator. "Capt. Logan feels that I am the man to interview Holkar. I gather that he was rather baffled by our Hindu friend."

"So I noticed."

"You were present when he questioned him?"

"Yes. If you don't mind my frankness, Logan took the wrong attitude and all but jumped down his throat."

Kent smiled.

"No, I don't mind. The captain is a zealous officer, but he shares the common failing of policemen the country over. They all get the idea that they're prosecuting attorneys. Do you know Holkar well?"

"I fancy no one knows Argon Holkar well. I've met him a few times."

"Is he another Swami?"

"Hardly that, I'd say. He's a scholar, undoubtedly. And an artist, though I must admit I can make very little of his art. He paints in the modern manner—weird figures that might be desert trees, landscapes that look as if they'd been wrecked by a Florida tornado. Tony thought him a genius. The man's a mystic."

"I see. No wonder Logan was puzzled!"

He summoned Sergt. Black and, going round by the walk, they mounted the steps of a modest bungalow.

MOLKAR answered their ring. Though his thin shoulders were a trifle stooped, he overtopped them all, as with great dignity he showed them into a study crammed with books. Dark curtains shut out the rising sun. A desk lamp shed the only light. With a fluent gesture he waved them to chairs and himself sat down at the desk and, linking his tapering fingers, waited impassively for them to begin.

"A sad affair, Mr. Holkar."

The Hindu's eyes, deep and inscrutable, met Kent's.

"Death," he replied, "is progression."

"Let's hope," said the investigator. "But it's also a stiff jolt to those left behind. Particularly in a case of murder. Were you and the late Mr. Gilmore friends?"

"It was my privilege."

"You found him congenial—a lively companion?"

"He had an active brain."

"Did you meet his other friends?"

"No."

"Just the members of his family—his sister and Mrs. Barnett?"

"Yes."

"They were quiet neighbors? You saw nothing unusual?"

"They were quiet neighbors."

"What got you out of bed last night?"

"I had not retired."

"No? Kindly give me your account of everything which you personally witnessed."

Holkar pondered a moment.

"I was here in my study—reading. I was interrupted by a flash of light. This had often happened. Mr. Gilmore's driveway is not ten feet from my side windows, and as he turned in from the street his headlights would shine into the room."

Kent rose and parted the heavy folds of the curtains.

"These were not drawn as they are now?"

"No. I rarely draw them."

"What happened then?"

"I resumed my reading."

"Did you hear anything when the car stopped?"

"Yes. Voices."

"Could you catch what was said?"

"No. The windows were closed, and, as I have stated, I went on reading."

"What dragged you from your absorbing book, Mr. Holkar?"

"A woman's scream."

"Not a pistol shot?"

"No."

"You heard no shot whatever?"

"If I did," said Holkar, "I did not apprehend it."

"I don't quite follow you."

"The distinction, I think, is clear. My conscious intelligence did not note the sound. Our minds shut out many sounds of modern civilization. Perhaps I am better organized to repel such invasions of my peace than you."

"You must be. Possibly you thought the motor had backfired?"

"I did not think—consciously, that is—about the matter."

"Well, let it pass." Kent plainly had begun to appreciate Logan's difficulties. "Tell us what you did when you heard the scream."

As Holkar gently described the confusion and his own efforts to aid, Raneleigh saw in him a character of the drama as bizarre as Saranoff herself. His hair, worn long yet not freakishly extreme, was blue black and glossy as patent leather. His beard of a lighter shade was trimmed short, and did not conceal the aquiline modeling of his features. His forehead, if narrow, was high and the prominent nose had sensitive nostrils which gave some signs that, beneath his calm, he shared the emotions of common men. The full lips, too, hinted at a sensual alloy in his spirituality. But the eyes revealed nothing. They were brown pools of mystery. Such a man, master of his passions, ought, Raneleigh felt, to be an invaluable witness. Yet the Hindu's measured narrative threw no new light on the tragedy.

KENT went back to the first part of his story.

"Miss Saranoff's cry followed the shot. That we know. Now, how much time, Mr. Holkar, should you say elapsed between the moment you heard Gilmore drive in and the moment you heard her scream?"

"Three or four minutes."

"Not more? Are you sure that five minutes did not elapse? Or even ten?"

"Quite sure."

"Did you go out at once?"

"I may have listened. It would be a natural impulse."

"You don't do things in a hurry."

"No. I am never hurried."

"Miss Saranoff claims that she was asleep in the rear of the car, and that Hartley roused her and told her that Gilmore had been shot. Would he have had time to do that before you reached the scene?"

"It is possible," he said, after reflection.

"You will pardon me if I put one or two personal questions? We have to know something about our witnesses. How long have you known Gilmore?"

"In this incarnation?"

Kent's eyes batted.

"Yes. I think we'd better confine ourselves to California and the present century."

"I met him two years ago when he moved next door."

"You were already settled here?"

"Yes."

"Do you batch it?"

"Batch it? O, I see. I am not married. My servant looks after me. His name, if it is of interest, is Ghose."

"Does he speak English?"

"A little. His native tongue is Hindustani."

"I understand that you're a painter."

"Painting and writing are my recreations."

"But not, so to speak, your profession."

"I am not in business, if that is your meaning."

"How, then, do you make a living?" Holkar's nostrils quivered.

"I have investments which are enough for my simple needs."

"That's all," said Kent, with a deference. "Thank you for your patience. But patience, I suppose, is a common virtue in India."

"Yes," assented Holkar, blandly. "As common as impatience in America."

OUTSIDE the door the investigator wiped his forehead.

"That bird's a wonder. For a minute I though he was going to say 'as common as impertinence!' But he kept a chain bit on his tongue to the last. I don't envy the lawyer who'll cross examine him in court."

Raneleigh blinked in the sunlight.

"I'm about done up," he confessed. "I'm going home."

"Let me run you over," offered Logan promptly. "That's my car at the curb. Keep your eyes peeled, Sergeant. I'll be back soon."

He asked for the address as the car set out, but was silent during the short drive. He was not, however, unobservant, grossed in his thoughts that he was lected to scan the apartment house before which they drew up. Was this Raneleigh wondered, why he had come?

"Nice place," said Kent. "You must find writing more profitable than Holkar."

"Perhaps. But, like Holkar, I have other resources."

"You're in luck. I'll be seeing you again, of course."

"Shall I be needed at the inquest?"

"I daresay you'll get a subpoena."

"Today?"

"Hardly. We have the autopsy and other matters to look after. Besides, it's Sunday. Well, so long!"

As he entered the lobby a young man rose from a bench and accosted him. He wore the heaviest horn rimmed spectacles Raneleigh had ever seen on a side a movie comic.

"Mr. Raneleigh?"

"Yes."

"I'm a reporter." He tendered a card with the name of a paper in a large corner. "I'd like to talk to you about the Gilmore case."

"You'll have to excuse me."

"How can I?" returned the young man with an ingenuous smile. "You were seen at the Gilmore house and I've been assigned to interview you. If you were ever in the newspaper game you'll understand my position."

"I do, of course," said Raneleigh. "But I expect to be called as a witness and it would be improper for me to make a public statement. And, even if it were proper, I couldn't talk now. I feel Tony's death too deeply."

The reporter looked sympathetic.

"You were intimate friends?"

"Yes. I knew him long before he came to Hollywood. We grew up in the same town in Iowa."

"From all I hear, he must have been a whale of a good fellow."

"He was."

"You never dreamed he'd end his way?"

"No. It came like a thunderbolt."

"And, of course, you didn't suspect that any one at the Brownrigg party was a potential murderer?"

"No, no." He sighed wearily. "It simply must turn in. It's twenty-four hours since I left my bed. Sorry to disappoint you. I trust your editor will make allowances."

"You don't know him," said the reporter. "But it's all right."

RANELEIGH despaired of sleep, yet sleep overtook him almost at once. When he awoke it was from a vague dream that, though he had an urgent appointment, he could not find his clothes. Then, with a sinking of the heart, he returned to reality. His watch had stopped, but the sun at a western window told him that it was late in the day. He shaved, bathed and dressed, and, descending to the restaurant, induced a waitress to fetch him something besides afternoon tea. As she served him she asked if he had heard of the Gilmore murder. He made an evasive reply, and presently she brought him an extra with ample black headlines on a field of unusual green. There it was! His spirits waned as he read and vanished altogether as he encountered a paragraph on an inner page:

AUTHOR MOURNS MURDERED PAL.

The distinguished novelist, Arthur Leigh Raneleigh, one of the guests last night at the gay party which preceded Tony Gilmore's death at the hand of an assassin, was too overcome, when interviewed at his home today, to make an extended statement. He said, however, that he had been intimate with Gilmore since their happy boyhood days in Iowa, and paid a feeling tribute to his charm as man and friend. Gilmore's sudden end, he said, came like a bolt from the blue. Mr. Raneleigh, who is well known as a writer and prominent in the social life of the film colony, could offer no solution of the crime. He was visibly shaken by the tragic events of the night and, on the ground that he would undoubtedly be summoned as a witness at the inquest, declined to comment on the case.

Raneleigh wondered if he could possibly have said anything so banal.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Literature on Beauty and Loveliness of Grapes Easy to Read, Informative and Stimulating to Imagination

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with correct market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

THERE is an enormous amount of text book literature on the grape. Our own U. S. department of agriculture has many bulletins on this subject. You have to be quite in earnest if you wish to get all you may from them because they are a good deal detailed and technical. For instance, the bulletin on "Unfermented Grape Juice, How to Make it at Home" contains thirty-one pages and there are six important points enumerated at the end in a summary requiring a page of fine print.

There is another bulletin on "Canned Grape Juice" and one on the home utilization of Muscadin grapes and studies in the clarification of unfermented fruit juices, etc.

But there is another sort of literature easy to read, stimulating to the imagination, and still informative. It concerns the beauty and loveliness of the grape. Some of it is a good deal poetical. Artists in words have sometimes used such phrases as the following to describe this fruit: "Grapes that crack at a touch," the luster of which tells how such grapes swallow with sharp, sweet juices, cold as warm lips and throat.

Table Grapes.

We have to go to English grape literature to learn about the table grape, or what they call there dessert. In the finer eating of the world the word "dessert" has universally signified fruit, and the commonplace reason for using fruit for the end of the meal is that it is considered a better quencher of thirst than even water itself. Many a sort of meal really should end with a thirst quencher.

The English in their fruit hothouses have always specialized in grapes. In reading English novels and stories we may run across such a statement as this one concerning a lady who was very fashionable. It says: "She only really lost her temper if at her table and under her nose you consumed her famous black Hamburg grapes without taking their skin and all."

An Englishman who has written a book on food, trying to make it anything but a text book type and yet informative, says: "Comparatively few of the endless varieties of grapes grown for wine making are worth eating, and nearly all the grapes which produce the very finest wines are almost uneatable." He mentions some that are notable exceptions, and then affirms that "greater delicacy of flavor can be obtained in hothouse grapes than in those that are grown in the open where in even the hottest climates a straggling and untidy bunch of ripe Muscatel grapes eaten with the sun still hot on them in Spain, Italy, or Greece, are certainly delicious." This author says that even these are less delicate than a bunch of exemplary hothouse Muscats grown under glass of which every grape is perfect in form, bloom, and ripeness.

Hothouse Grapes.

On one of our own large summer visits we have seen a most beautiful hothouse room of grapes, the glass roof of which was like a wonderful stained glass window, with magnificent bunches of grapes dependent from it, equally distant one from the other, and of a beautiful precision otherwise. Yet the following statement from the author just quoted describes a carefulness that few of us know anything about. It says: "Only under hothouse conditions is it possible for the grower to give individual care to each separate bunch, to thin out the grapes when they begin to ripen, so as assure to every grape in the cluster an equal share of mellowing heat."

This author speaks of "well made" table grapes, giving them the French name which is used to separate them from the wine grapes, which is "raisin de table." Not all these table grapes are delicious because he speaks of one of the most largely cultivated as "watery and wan" to the taste. Another hothouse grape is spoken of as having "a curious affinity in taste to that of a slightly unripe, cold Jamaica banana." Of another grape unique in its class he says: "One can see through it as though it were a gooseberry, without the skin collapsing like a bladder, squashing out the juice of the grape and exuding the same into one's mouth."

Three Grape Services.

The dessert grape, the grape juice grape, the jelly grape, are the three sorts most valued in our American vineyards. Our Concord grape is in a class our dual purpose grape since it is greatly used for both grape juice and jellies and conserves. Probably it is about the poorest table grape we can imagine, because the pulp nearly always seems sour when we bite into it. Our markets have perhaps been poorest in table grapes, although there were nearly one hundred years ago in our great horticultural era gentlemen farmers" who developed or grew great numbers of varieties of grapes, some of which were for the table only. Always, or for a long time, on our American table the imported Malaga grape has been much used as a dessert. Nowadays we mainly see the home grown Malaga, and about April we have the South American Almeria grape much resembling it.

Market Varieties of Grapes.

Besides the Concord grape, which comes into the market in tons nowadays in the large baskets as well as the small, there always come to market tons of flame Tokays. The blue Isabella grape, the name for which seems to have various spellings, one of which is Cornichon, is another of the dessert grapes that we have come to know well, but these grapes at twelve or fifteen cents a pound can hardly be compared with the English dessert grapes, for which sometimes an English pound is paid for a pound at hothouses. However, we have some handsome enough to be worthy of the ribbon with which these expensive grapes are decorated.

Probably we should find more ways of using grapes from the fingers, or in the dessert fashion. One use that is made sometimes now is to serve bunches of grapes with sandwiches for luncheons and these are particularly suited to a bridge luncheon because they gratify the thirst and do not soil the fingers as candy does. Many a bridge hostess puts a little dish of candy on each table, but fastidious people rarely touch it because they do not like to get their fingers and the cards sticky.

A Frenchman has described the way the Russians market grapes in cold weather as follows: "Street hawkers passed carrying lighted baskets full of grapes with a handle in the middle showing through them."

Grape Nectar.

Fresh or uncorked grape juice probably better deserves the title of grape nectar than do any of the juices manufactured and sometimes given this name. It must be prepared just before it is used because it behaves somewhat as an apple does after it has been pared. With imagination you can drink this nectar and believe a good many beautiful things about the grape: Wash Concord grapes and drain them well, then crush and squeeze out the juice and strain it through a double cheese cloth of loose mesh, drink this without sweetening, or if you like add two or three teaspoons of sugar to a glass. Sugar does not enhance the flavor of the grape and perhaps makes the juice less medicinal. In cases where one takes a "grape cure" this is only a quicker way of getting your medicine, just as taking the squeezed out orange juice is quicker than eating the orange sections.

Using the By-Product.

There are ways of using the by-product of the grape nectar just as there are ways of using the by-product of the juice prepared for jelly. In this case cover the skins from which the juice has been pressed out, with water, cook them, strain and use for jelly or cooked grape juice. It is an interesting thing that the uncooked Concord grape juice will not jelly because the jellying element is in the skins. The quantity of by-product of one glass of grape nectar, when cooked and manipulated thus, in a small quantity, many yield a very handsome jelly.

Common Grape Juice.

A common and easy way, but not a technical way, to make grape juice is to wash the Concord grapes, remove them from the stems, just cover with water, cook till they break, strain off the juice and then pasteurize it in the container. The juice will be superior if it is filtered. There is enough solid in it so that unless it is filtered and in well sealed jars the juice will become muddy. A little sugar always helps towards its keeping and undoubtedly to invert the bottles or let them lie on their sides, as bottles of wine do in great store rooms also helps. The theory is it keeps the corks from drying up.

Filtering Grape Juice.

Strain the juice first through a double cheese cloth and then filter through a clean flannel jelly bag. Each strainer should be dipped in hot water and wrung very dry before it is used because in this way less juice is wasted. Also dipping the flannel bag in water thickens it up and makes it a better fitter.

Pasteurizing Grape Juice.

Put the grape juice into sterile bottles or jars, whether it has been merely strained or strained and filtered, pasteurize it at a temperature of 165 degrees F., maintained for one hour. A cotton plug is used in the bottles, then sterilized corks are usually put in afterwards and a little sterilizing done before they are sealed with wax, but a certain kind of cotton plug is sometimes covered with paraffin so that mold cannot thread itself through it and the juice is kept that way, but not for long.

Grape Juice in a Different Way.

Last year a number of correspondents wrote me about putting up grapes so to have the juice in the following way: Wash the grapes and put one cup of whole grapes into a one quart glass jar, add one-half cup of sugar, then fill the jar with bubbling boiling water till it runs over, and seal. This recipe was sent to me by Mrs. Julia Hansen, and a friend sent me the same recipe but did not make the following addition as Mrs. Hansen did: "It makes a delicious drink, clear as crystal. It needs to stand a few months before it is used. It is such an easy way to make juice as compared to the old, which needed more fruit and was not so clear and handy to use."

To Peel Grapes for Salad.

This work is easy just as soon as one acquires a little deftness. A few skinless grapes make a jewel-like garnish for a fruit salad, or may be used in larger quantities. Tokay and Malaga are the grapes most used for salads. Wash them first and drain, then cover with boiling water and let stand for a minute, or a little longer if a quantity are so treated. Pour off the hot water and pour on cold. Drain and peel with a small pointed fruit knife and remove seeds. The best way is to commence at the stem and peel down a strip and then others in such a way that the pulp is not once touched by the hands because the skin offers the handle. While the pulp is still slightly attached to the skin, cut it across and remove the seeds, then scrape the pulp away from the little point where it is still attached to the skin. As the Malaga grape darkens quickly, use a little lemon juice to prevent it.

Grape Jam.

Grape jams can be made from the pulp and skins left from jelly making using sugar alone or sugar, nuts, raisins, orange etc. One way to make a grape jam with whole grapes is to press the pulp out of the skins, put the skins with enough water to soften them well, cook them till tender and sieve them. At the same time heat the pulp until the seeds will separate readily from them when they are pressed through a colander with small perforations. Put the two parts together, weigh, add three-fourths to an equal weight of sugar, according to the acidity of the grapes used, and cook to jam stage. In small quantities it will take fifteen minutes usually for this to cook to jam stage, with constant stirring, but it may take only half this time.

Best Parties

Tell us about the nicest party you ever attended and we'll pay $1 for each letter printed. Address Parties, Chicago Tribune.

Igloo Party.

Last month I attended an unusual affair, which was a pleasant, novel way to entertain on a hot August afternoon.

The invitation came on a white frosted glazed paper, and we were all asked to wear white flannels or light dresses.

Our hostess used her cool basement and transformed it into a beautiful place. The lights had white diamond dusted covers, and the electric fans in each corner blew white paper streamers in all directions. There were crystal covered artificial shrubs and the whitewashed ceiling and walls made the room look the coolest place in the world.

We had an ice guessing contest, and we wrote with funny little polar bear pencils on pieces of white jagged cardboard, representing icebergs. The winner's prize was a white enameled ice cream freezer. After another game and some dances we were asked to go to another room in the basement, where an artificial igloo had been put up and the floors were strewn with sawdust. We sat down on the white cushions, and our hostess, garbed in a light Eskimo costume, came from the igloo and served us frosted cookies and iced lemonade.

After an hour of games and fun, we were served luncheon at small tables with white glazed paper covers and icicle trees for decoration. Our favors were tiny furry polar bears. The menu consisted of iced bouillon, a frozen vegetable salad, sandwiches, ice cream, cocoanut cake, iced cocoa, and white bon-bons.

We all had such a marvelous time and none of us had thought of the heat till we left for home. G. E.

A Choice of Parties.

The nicest and most unique way of entertaining that has come to my notice were the parties given in a small city where I formerly lived. The invitations stated that you might have your choice of breakfast, luncheon, or tea. They also bore an R. S. V. P. so that the hostess was able to make her plans for each affair.

This giving of the three parties on the same day was more than acceptable to those who were invited, as they could select the time best suited to them and from the standpoint of the hostess it was a good idea, too. She had her labor all in one day rather than having it prolonged over a period of two or three days. The house was in order and the same flowers did duty for the three functions and she also made a hit by doing something different. T. J. G.

What They All Say.

My most embarrassing moment was one I will never forget. I had just stepped off the train and came down from the station with many others, tired to death from a strenuous day's work, when I spied a machine turning the corner which had every appearance of being my brother in his car. I called "OO-hoo," and waved my hand at him, and, heavens, when he looked around it was a perfect stranger! I said, "I am sorry, but I thought you were my brother." He laughed and said, "O, that's all right. That's what they all say." For several days after I came down on the other side of the station, feeling too foolish to face my friends. M. C.

Anything But Pink.

A short time ago a shower had been given for me. After opening most of the packages I came to one that contained a lovely colored glass dish. The room had rather a dim light, so thinking the color was amber, I said, "O, I'm so glad its amber. I love either amber or green glass."

To my amazement the girl who had given it said, "I'm sorry I didn't know that. Perhaps I can exchange this pink one for either green or amber." B. M. K.

Homemade Rain.

A few evenings ago, I went with my husband to call on some friends. When leaving, as I stepped out of the door, I exclaimed in surprise, "O, it's raining hard!"

"Come back," said my hostess. "Don't spoil that pretty dress. I will give you my raincoat and umbrella."

All buttoned up in raincoat and with umbrella raised I started out again. I was son past the rain. It was the neighbor's sprinkler and I returned to doff raincoat and umbrella amid shrieks of laughter. J. B. Mc.

Mother Helped.

A shy young man whom my mother is fond of has never seemed to find an opportunity to further our acquaintance by inviting me out or by telephoning me.

A few days ago mother and I met him while shopping. The conversation turned to the resemblance of voices over the telephone. Mother told of a jovial incident in which she had pretended that she was me. She concluded her story with, "But, Dick, if you ever call Mary, I'll let you know who I am right away."

To my embarrassment, mother's clever ruse worked. F. V. S.

When the Oranges Slipped.

Trading exclusively with the fruit man in our building and receiving a great deal of fruit for the children [bananas ready to spoil and the like] free I rarely buy anywhere else.

However, seeing some oranges unusually cheap recently I purchased two dozen. On my way home this fruit man was standing in his shop door and just as I passed the bag of oranges slipped and rolled all over the place.

He helped me pick them up and put them in a new bag of his own but never said a word. I wonder if I will get any more free fruit? E. Y.

Jumping at Conclusions.

Sitting in a friend's office one day he suddenly turned and said, "I am going to propose to you." I slumped back in my chair and said, "This is so sudden—so unexpected," when he continued, "to go and wait in the auto until I come." I am still single. N. C.

why. The chairs were covered in faded, rather light chintz. There were white curtains at the windows. A little table with a book on it stood next to one of the chairs. The rug was worn—and yet it was an oriental—a sign of wealth and family to Dolly. And over all was the gloom of the dark woodwork.

So Leola and Roger had spent hours here together. Suddenly Roger seemed a different person. He had known this genteel gloom. How could he have been the one who had been so jolly and friendly, not above a drink in the room back of the millinery shop, always ready for a joke or a compliment? Something of Leola's personality seeped to her. She shivered.

She went out of the room, into the room just back of it. Yes, this was Leola's room, without a doubt. The high bed of dark wood had been carefully made, covered with a patchwork quilt. The gas heater was burning smugly. This was more like it. Not as gloomy as the rest of the house—yet gloomy, too. What—that—that woman had died in this very room not two days ago!

Dolly minced across the room to the old fashioned, marble topped dresser. Leola's dresser. She thought of her own, a hodgepodge of fancy toilet articles, imitation ivory, perfume bottles, cream jars. No wonder Roger liked fingering her things. Here was a plain comb and brush, a pin cushion. How awful!

There lay on the dresser a little pile of jewelry. Two rings. A thin snake of a pearl necklace. She picked up the rings, put them down. Plain, old fashioned things. She fingered the necklace.

What was that Roger had said months ago? "Funny about Leola. She doesn't care about jewelry and yet she wears a string of pearls her mother gave her and she has a fit if the catch gets loose. Not that I blame her. They're worth a lot of money, but it's funny, Leola caring for a thing like that."

"A lot of money." Of course. Pearls. Why not? No one would ever know. That nigger would come in and pick them up if she didn't take them. She might as well have them. She wouldn't tell Roger, wouldn't let him know she had been here. Certainly not. She could have them restrung, get a different clasp, or sell them. Roger would never recognize them. She might as well have something out of all this. In a way, too, it would be getting even with Leola, pale and solemn, who seemed to think so much of herself.

SHE'D better hurry now. Better get out. She was glad no one was around. She'd search. See what she could find.

She closed the door. No use letting any one see if she had a dresser drawer open. If she heard any one she could close it before they came in.

How stuffy the room was! No use opening the window nor putting out the heater. That nigger would probably be in as soon as the funeral was over. Better leave everything as she found it.

She opened the dresser drawers, poking her fingers under the little piles of garments. Wouldn't you know Leola wore things like that! Not silk, even. Plain white things with a little embroidery on the edges. No wonder Roger liked the things she wore, pretty colored crêpe trimmed with lots of lace. A woman has to dress nicely to keep a man interested. There were no letters.

She felt queer. Was that a noise downstairs? She listened. Certainly not. Her imagination. Just because she couldn't hear awfully well she was always imagining things. Her friends always teased her about it. She'd better get out. She could look in that desk downstairs on her way. Maybe Leola never had any letters at all. Maybe Roger——

She was dizzy. It was this close room—or because she hadn't had any sleep—or the headache tablets. Maybe she shouldn't have taken two tablets.

She sat down in a little chair near a marble topped table. What a funny table! What a funny room! Imagine her being here—in Leola Derring's room—and Leola's necklace in her purse. Funny.

She'd better go. My, but she was dizzy! She couldn't get up, couldn't move. Well, maybe if she sat still for a minute with her eyes closed. Just a minute—a minute.

She'd get out before Emma came back. What a gloomy place! To think that Roger——

Well, she'd fooled Roger—fooled Leola, too. She was alive—had Leola's necklace. When she left here, went to Chicago—she closed her eyes, nodded.

Rags came out from under the bed; smiled at the strange lady asleep in his mistress' chair. Odd things happening. All the noise and the people—and then the footsteps he knew and didn't like, and now this stranger not making any noise at all. He could run around. No one to stop him.

He jumped on the bed, worried a pillow. He jumped off, worried a slipper. This was fun. The slipper came in contact with the hose of the gas heater. He'd been scolded once for teasing that. There was no one around to scold him now. With his teethless jaws he began working at it. In only a few minutes he was able to pull the hose off the connection, just as he had done before. He didn't even hear the little sound the flame made as it went out. He was sleepy and old. He pulled the hose under the bed so he could chew on it better.

To Be a Lady

Did she love the fine young man she had promised to marry—the man of wealth and social place? Did the man of lowly birth, who had battled to success despite the handicap of war wounds, love her? . . . Shirley Seifert tells the romance of a self-made woman in an intriguing short story

Next Sunday

CARD 13 By Luther Ford

"bolt from the blue." He would, he felt, as soon have perpetrated a split infinitive. And he was regarded as prominent in the social life of the film colony! He had thought himself a mere observer on the sidelines. But, for the hour at least, he shared the fierce white light and was an object of some interest to thousands who had probably never heard of him or his books. He hoped, grimly, that the reporter had failed to appease his city editor. Yet it was only when, on foot, he approached the Gilmore house that he fully grasped what a stir the crime had caused. The block was congested with automobiles. The sidewalks were thronged with a curious mob, eager to spice a dull holiday with a morbid thrill. He had to explain his way through a line of police to reach the entrance.

KING admitted him with a faint shadow of his habitual smile and showed him into the living room, which wore its usual aspect. Tony was gone. From where he waited Raneleigh could see the door of the study. Narrow strips of paper had been pasted from door to jamb and across the keyhole. After a long interval Mrs. Barnett came down. Her hair and dress were again meticulously neat, but her eyes looked drawn and her face was colorless.

"I'm afraid you've had little rest," he said.

"No, Arthur. I've had my hands full with Aileen."

"She still takes it hard?"

"Yes. I think she's near a nervous breakdown. She carried on in a way that frightened me when she found that Anthony's remains had been removed to an undertaking establishment."

"Couldn't you make her see that, under the circumstances, you had no choice?"

"No. I might as well have talked to the wind. She repeated over and over that this was his home, that here he should have been left."

"Poor girl! It's only natural that she should feel that way. I understand her point of view."

"So do I understand her point of view," said Mrs. Barnett with a look which seemed meant to put him in his place. "It would be mine if things were other than they are. All my people were buried from their homes." She cited instances with details that left no ground for doubt that in her family funerals had always been conducted with marked success.

Raneleigh seized an opening to inquire how he could serve her.

"What can anybody do?" she demanded. "We're not allowed to have minds of our own. The police think for us. All day they've been running in and out and tracking dirt over the rugs. They have refused to let me enter Anthony's rooms. And look at that door—plastered with seals!"

"It's most unpleasant," he sympathized. "But they're simply doing their duty, trying to find some clew to Tony's murderer."

"Unpleasant! It's abominable. Why should I, his own kith and kin, be shut out while strangers take possession? Yet they let you go in last night, Arthur. I saw them."

"Mr. Kent thought I might be of some help."

"Doesn't he think I can help? Doesn't he think I want to see justice done?"

"Surely. But I feel that he wishes to spare you all he can. These annoyances will soon end and you and Aileen will get back to normal life."

"Not in this atmosphere. I want to take her out of it."

"Why not go to a hotel for a few days?" he suggested. "You'd escape those prying fools there in the street."

"No hotel for me. It would be a waste of money."

Raneleigh came to the real reason for his call.

"I'd like to see Aileen," he said.

"I'm keeping her in bed."

"May I go up? She seemed to want me near her last night. Perhaps I can be of some comfort."

Mrs. Barnett stiffened.

"You surprise me, Arthur. You surely don't expect me to permit you to see my niece in bed!"

How a Family Doctor made Millions of Friends

FIFTEEN years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became one of the best-known members of his profession. A single prescription made him famous. And for forty years it has continued to make friends.

As fast as people could tell others about the marvelous way this prescription corrects constipation and relieves the disagreeable symptoms caused by sluggish bowels, demand for it spread until Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it filled in big quantities; bottled and distributed through drug stores.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people would never think of using anything else when they're headachy, bilious, feverish, or weak; when breath is bad, tongue is coated or they're suffering from nausea, gas, headaches or lack of appetite.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as you buy it today is made exactly in accordance with the original formula from laxative herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant-tasting; its action is thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice.

Last Month Offered Lots of Good Ones

Critic Chooses Half Dozen of the Finest.

SEPTEMBER'S SIX BEST PHOTOPLAYS.

THE DANCE OF LIFE.
ALIBI.
THE DRAKE CASE.
STREET GIRL.
ILLUSION.
THE COCK-EYED WORLD.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD morning!

From now on there's something to look forward to. Halloween this month; Thanksgiving next month; Christmas in December, and in January—BILLS! February, St. Valentine's day; March, St. Patrick's; April, the "to move or not to move?" problem to be confronted; May, move or house clean. June—but I'm not going to do my work so far ahead!

Wonder what pictures you liked best last month? The six listed? Possibly not. Possibly you didn't get to see them downtown? The following résumé will probably interest you if you wait to take your movies at your neighborhood theater, as so many do.

"THE DANCE OF LIFE" pleased me immensely. It features Nancy Carroll and Hal Skelly, and this is what we printed about it in our column: "... To begin with, the film is entertaining throughout. It has no lapses. Next, it presents human beings who behave as human beings so situated would be apt to behave—and they remain in character to the end. ... It's full of stuff that you'll love! It has laughter and tears and songs and patter, and the biggest burlesque ladies you ever saw, and gorgeous revue scenes in color. There's not a role that isn't handled deftly. ... 'The Dance of Life' boasts expert photography and is splendidly synchronized. Get your tickets, ladies and gentlemen. You can't go wrong."

"ALIBI," held up by censors and police for so long for so many reasons—some of them good ones, so far as I could see—is a mystery thriller adapted from the stage play, "Nightstick." Comment in this column was: "... no children's bedtime story and never has pretended that it was ... one swell melodrama ... robs crooks of their halos ... its coppers are smart, valorous, and worthy men ... hands out punches and surprises till you're dizzy with excitement. Along with its breath-taking situations, it delivers some big laughs, and there are several song hits for the humming-minded ... alive with sound effects ... holds your interest tight locked from opening to closing scenes. ..."

"THE DRAKE CASE" I found "an intriguing picture ... cunningly presented and taut with suspense. ... The histronic honors go to the late Gladys Brockwell. She is the dominant figure and her acting is memorable. ... Next to her you will be most impressed by Forrest Stanley, whose portrayal of a keen, suave, sarcastic district attorney is a fine piece of work ... Robert Frazier is a very real person as lawyer for the defense. ... Synchronization throughout is admirable. You'll like 'The Drake Case' for the very good reason that it will compel you to."

"STREET GIRL" is a bit of a romance with a blending of new and old world flavor. "... This tuneful all-talker is refreshing entertainment. It offers Betty Compson in a colorful role. ... The film is excellently staged, photographed, and directed."

"ILLUSION," featuring Nancy Carroll and Charles "Buddy" Rogers, was awfully nice, I thought. THOUGH, seddi, "I don't always know what you folks are going to like and sometimes I'm not so good at guessing, either." But I did think you'd care for "Illusion" BECAUSE Nancy Carroll and "Buddy" Rogers are teamed in it. BECAUSE Regis Toomey, that appealing chap with the corrugated forehead who plays the detective in "Alibi," is also very much there. BECAUSE the supporting cast is a clever one. BECAUSE the story is interesting. BECAUSE direction, synchronization, dialogue and photograph are excellent. [For other because see picture.] ... "Illusion" has polish and snap. The cast is personable as well as smart. ...

"THE COCK-EYED WORLD," very rough, very funny, very well done, is, as you know, I suppose, the sequel to "What Price Glory," produced by Fox, who fathered the last mentioned film, written by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson, creators of Flagg and Quirt, who are played in this film as they were in its predecessor by Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe. The picture got four stars because considered extraordinary from the viewpoint of story, production and acting.

While I think the productions we've just been discussing were the best of the month, there were others that deserve honorable mention. "Lucky Star," for one. Then there were "The Girl from Havana," "Fast Life," "In the Headlines," "Side Street," "Her Private Life," and "Speedway," all of them two and three star films. October opens bright with promise of good things. We shall see what we shall see!

Bits aBOUTem.

REGINA OWEN, a good actress, much liked in the silent films, enters the talkies in "The Children," adapted to the screen by Paramount from the novel by Edith Wharton.

AL JOLSON, apparently tired of lemonade stories, will bring Otis Skinner's great stage success, "Kismet," to Edward Knoblock, to the talking screen. Mr. Skinner made a movie of it once—and that is one of the things Mr. Skinner doesn't care to talk about.

MAE MURRAY has started work at the Tiffany-Stahl studios on her first talking and singing picture, "Peacock Alley."

See you tomorrow.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF MR. DOZIER - - - By Robert Benchley

Illustrations by John T. McCutcheon

Strange Case of a Host Who Really Hosted

AS a general thing Mr. Peters preferred to spend his week-ends at home in Dyke, O. He could come down to breakfast on Sunday morning in his bathrobe if he wanted to, he could leave the Sunday papers strewn about the living room until it looked like a military encampment seen from the air, and after dinner he could doze off in his chair without feeling that he had to make conversation. It made it rather dull for Mrs. Peters, but they had been married so long that she was used to it.

But during the summer the Peterses had met some people named Dozier who had a big place upstate and had become involved in one of those vacation promises to "get together again in the fall." In fact, they had actually signed up for a definite week-end, train-time and all. "It won't do you any harm to get out of Dyke for a few days," Mrs. Peters said. And, for some reason, Mr. Peters resented this remark.

The upstate home of the Doziers was what is known as "a mighty pretty place." A great deal of grass and trees and too many silk puffs on the guest beds. The Peterses arrived there late Friday night and went right to bed. "So far," said Mr. Peters, "we might just as well have stayed at home ... 'Better, in fact," he added, "because I don't know how to open these French windows."

But Mr. Peters was to find out that a great many things were done at Blue Beeches that weren't done in Dyke. Mr. Dozier was one of those hosts who make a business of hosting. His guests were going to have a good time if be killed them in the process. It was his feeling that every hour of the day ought to be taken up with some form of merry-making, and unfortunately most of Mr. Dozier's merry-making involved the use of the arms and legs. It didn't seem to make much difference what you were doing, so long as it was action. He had tennis courts, squash courts, badminton courts, a swimming pool and great long stretches of woodland road for that horrible recreation known as "hiking." A week-end at Mr. Dozier's and you discovered eight or ten new muscles in your body, all of them sore.

Bright and early Saturday morning Mr. Peters was awakened by Mr. Dozier pounding at the door with a couple of bathing suits, all beaming for a swim before breakfast.

"Come on there, Peters," he called. "Get the roses back into those cheeks. Here's your suit."

"I've got my suit right here," said Mr. Peters, reaching for his gray tweed which he had hung on a chair the night before and trying to get into it (without underclothes, in his hurry) before his host should catch him.

"Come, come," boomed Mr. Dozier, "none of that! You'll feel like a new man."

And off he dragged Mr. Peters to the pool, the latter protesting that a new man was the last thing he wanted to feel like. The sun was not very high and a light mist hung over the pool, but that made no difference to Mr. Dozier and it was evident that it was not to be allowed to make any difference to Mr. Peters. In they went and around they splashed, Mr. Peters slipping miserably on the tiled edge and very nearly ending his week-end right there—which would have been o. k. with him.

"There," said Mr. Dozier, as they pattered wetly along the walk to the house, "don't you feel better?"

"No," said Mr. Peters, thereby putting an end to that.

Even breakfast failed to warm Mr. Peters and, following a third cup of coffee, he sneaked away into the library while the others were looking at the view from the porch and there settled himself with the morning paper which he had found lying on the table. This might not be such a bad dump, after all. A good comfortable chair and a nice, unrumpled morning paper will work wonders in making a house attractive.

But suddenly he heard his host coming down the hall in full cry. There was something in his voice that threatened exercise. Mr. Peters crouched very low in his chair and tried to cover his head with the newspaper.

Mr. Dozier strode into the room. "Walter," he called out, "where are you? Every one's going to play tennis."

Under his covering Mr. Peters winced. He hadn't played tennis for fifteen years.

"O, there you are! What, asleep already? Come on out of that! Every one's going to play tennis!"

"O, no they're not," replied Mr. Peters. "Not every one."

"O, yes, they are," insisted the good fellow. "And you're going to get right into these togs and play doubles with the girls and me!" (The girls were Dozier's daughters, aged nineteen and sixteen, respectively, and very active for their age.)

Mr. Peters muttered something about a bad heart, a weak knee, poor eyesight and lack of practice. Mr. Dozier didn't hear him. As if by magic (very obnoxious magic, it is true) the unwilling guest was arrayed in white sneakers and a pair of white flannels and found himself out on the court in the blazing morning sun with a racquet held inexpertly in his hand. Mrs. Peters looked on aghast from the sidelines.

The game was not a thrilling one and the young Miss Dozier, who had Mr. Peters for a partner, was more or less handicapped. But it was enough of a game to wilt Mr. Peters and he emerged from two love sets a complete and steaming wreck. Mrs. Peters, observing his purple face, was worried, fearing not only a stroke of apoplexy but a sudden access or rage. For Mr. Peters' rages were serious matters. In his day he had killed a great many people who had done much less than this to him.

"There's nothing like a couple of sets of tennis for bucking you up," remarked Mr. Dozier as they found themselves floating about in the pool for the second time that day.

"You're right there," agreed Mr. Peters. "There's nothing like it, thank God!" And he wondered if he pretended to drown whether or not he could escape the rest of the day's activities which he saw looming up ahead of him. Still, the line between pretending to drown and actually drowning might be so fine as to be very uncomfortable. So he decided to wait and see what happened.

It happened almost immediately after Mr. Peters had tied his second shoe. Mr. Dozier announced that the next thing on the program before lunch was a trip to the barn to look over the live stock. In vain Mr. Peters protested that he really didn't know enough about live stock to make it worth while showing him, but Mr. Dozier was adamant. This live stock was different. Mr. Peters would never regret it. It was something every one should see. In fact, it was something every one had to see if he was a guest of Blue Beeches.

So Mr. Peters tottered across the estate to the barns, where he stood first on one foot and then on the other in front of stalls while his host slapped the flanks of six or eight horses and said: "Move over, Daisy, and let the gentlemen see how pretty you are," or patted a line of cows and explained what wonderful animals they were in terms of quarts per day. All that Mr. Peters could say was, "I see," and "My, my!" which he said with diminishing frequency as the tour continued, finally lapsing into a sullen silence and a furtive search for a chair on which to sit for half a minute.

Luncheon was a positive relief because of its slight demand on Mr. Peters' muscles, although it was enlivened throughout by anecdotes from Mr. Dozier, all dealing with some feature of the estate which Mr. Peters had already come to hate. He still thought longingly of that easy chair in the library with the unread morning newspaper, but this comfort was to be denied him, for Mr. Dozier had a plan.

"After a big meal like that you don't want to lie around the house," he told Mr. Peters quite inaccurately. "What you need is a nice, brisk walk up the road a bit."

"What I need is a nice, brisk walk up to bed," said Mr. Peters.

"O, now, come on!" taunted Mr. Dozier. "You aren't going to give in to middle age like that, are you? I'll give you a sweater and a pipe full of good tobacco, and you'll take ten years off."

"Off which end?" asked Mr. Peters bitterly as he felt himself being swept into this forced march by the dominating ardor of his host.

"You'll find out," said Mr. Dozier gayly, and, wrapping a sweater about Mr. Peters' unresisting shoulders, he dragged him out by the front door.

"Do be careful, Walter," said Mrs. Peters. But she was not thinking of her husband's welfare so much as Mr. Dozier's.

Down the tree lined road they strode, Mr. Peters acquiring a strange vitality under the influence of something which he was mulling over in his mind. He almost led the way in his new found energy. Mr. Dozier was a fast walker, but he found his powers pushed to the utmost to keep up with his guest. In fact, it was not long before he was breathing heavily and taking occasional quick steps in order to stay abreast.

They had gone perhaps a mile at this rate without talking, when Mr. Dozier said:

"What about turning back? Are you getting tired?"

"I'm not tired," said Mr. Peters grimly. And with this he quickened his pace slightly. Mr. Dozier's pride kept him from saying more. His lack of wind also forced him into silence. Mr. Peters' endurance was nothing short of phenomenal.

Two miles and two and a half miles passed. They were now on a path which ran through a deep wood and were walking single file.

"I don't — think — this — road — goes — much farther," panted Mr. Dozier.

"O, yes it does," said Mr. Peters. "And it will take ten years off your life," he added ominously.

And, lapsing into silence again, they disappeared into the forest.

Mr. Peters returned alone to Blue Beeches. He said that Mr. Dozier had disappeared suddenly and that he had been unable to find him. "He probably will be back in a few minutes," he said quietly, while Mrs. Peters looked nervously out of the window and began to think of going upstairs to pack.

But Mr. Dozier didn't come back in a few minutes. A search of the woods the next day was unavailing, and the mystery of the master of Blue Beeches was never cleared up. In fact, Mrs. Peters was the only person who had any theories on his disappearance and she never said anything about them.

"There is nothing like a little exercise to set you up," said Mr. Peters on the way back to Dyke.

This and That Thing About the Theater

And This Means About the Actors, Too.

By Frederick Donaghey.

MISS GRACE GEORGE, returning from a visit to London undertaken to assemble a cast for St.-John G. Ervine's "The Last of Mrs. Fraser," will have the good actor named A. E. Matthews with her for the rôle acted in the British capital by Henry Ainley. This is the rôle for which Miss George had engaged the late Leslie Faber. ... As has been told in this column, in the ads, and by other means of communication, Miss George is to give the American premiere of the comedy November 11 in Chicago as the second offering in the season of five new plays arranged by the new Dramatic League. ... Mr. Matthews was here last season in "Interference," and in 1923 in "Spring Cleaning." Another Chicago appearance of his was in a one-act piece in the Palace.

"The Channel Road" is the title of the play written by George S. Kaufman, of the New-York Times, and Alexander Woollcott, who has served as reporter of plays for that newspaper, the New-York Sun, and the New-York World; he made way on the last-named newspaper for the Mr. Ervine mentioned in the preceding paragraph. Miss Anne Forrest has the principal rôle in "The Channel Road." ... Another play of Mr. Kaufman's written in collaboration with a celebrity of the Press is "June Moon," based by him and Ring Lardner on the latter's "Some Like Them Cold." It is in the week's list of novelties in New-York.

Cecil Lean, something of a Chicago idol in the days when the little La Salle was under the direction of Mortimer H. Singer, and Miss Cleo Mayfield [Mrs. Lean] are to head the cast of "Grease-Paint," which is a song-and-dance piece by George Rosener, the actor, and Jay Gorney, who writes music. Mr. and Mrs. Leon were last in Chicago in a bad song-and-dance version of the good farce named "Brewster's Millions."

Mr. Ziegfeld is so hopeless regarding "Show-Girl" that he has thrown it away; he cut short its New-York run last night; and he says he will not attempt to send it on tour. He expresses the belief that George Gershwin might have saved the piece by writing a tune or two fit for whistling, dancing, or even plain humming.

Miss Katherine Krug [Mrs. Ashton Stevens] and Miss Joan Madison are to alternate as Juliet in the Goodman Theater revival this week of "Romeo and Juliet." B. Iden Payne will be Mercutio, Harry Mervis the Romeo, Whitford Kane the Friar, and Miss Dorothy Raymond the nurse. A bulletin says the revival will be made "with modern settings designed as in the Elizabethan theater"; and that, doubtless, means something or other.

Raymond Hitchcock's doctors say the actor should be able to resume performing within the next five weeks; and plans are accordingly being made to restore him to the title-role of the piece named "Your Uncle Dudley," wherein he acted two or three times late in May in the Illinois.

Joan Lowell's play named "The Star of Bengal" seems to be too pallid to warrant the belief that it will last beyond mid-October. The author of "The Cradle of the Deep," herself, has the principal rôle in the piece, in the writing of which she had the seasoned aid of Thompson Buchanan, her husband.

"Episode" is the name of an impending play by John D. Haggart; and "Escapade" is the name of a new play by Lawrence Eyre which has been tried out and found lacking in something or other regarded as necessary to box-office success.

Miss Frances Starr, last in Chicago in the revival of "Diplomacy" made by Mr. Tyler, is to have the principal rôle in "It Never Happens Twice," by Adelaide Matthews.

Lenore Ulric is said to be about through with her contract to make what are now tonily called "audible films," and ready to start rehearsals in "The Sandy Hooker," wherein she will not have Mr. Belasco to look after her welfare.

Frederick Lonsdale's comedy named "A Canary Sometimes Sings" has, like his "On Approval," but four characters. London is to see the piece this week; and it will be given it this land of ours in case it be a hit overseas.

Marc Connelly, who was George S. Kaufman's collaborator in the writing of "Dulcy," "To the Ladies!" "Merton of the Movies," and "The Deep-Tangled Wildwood," has written something named "Green Pastures"; and those who have read it say it is good.

Miss Adele Rowland is performing in the varieties once more. Time was when she was one of the most popular soubrettes in the song-and-

Talkies Offer Problems to the Small Town

Second Run Houses Find 'Em Pretty Costly.

By Tom Pettey.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 5.—[Special.]—The talking pictures have the movie men in the smaller cities of the south talking to themselves. The chatterbox films are affecting these exhibitors somewhat like a live wire affects an ungloved electrician.

They have picked up something they did not want to grasp in the first place, and now they cannot drop it. Everywhere in the south that I have gone the talkie is either waking the theater men up or financially killing them.

This is interesting, in the opinion of your reporter, who does not usually stray so far from Broadway, because the ultimate fate of young Mr. Talkie depends on these very fellows and the folks who go to their theaters in the towns and small cities of the country.

It's a Problem.

Right now it is a tossup as to whether the second run exhibitors should be playing talkies for the admission price they can levy, or should be playing silent pictures to smaller audiences. Only the profit and loss ledger at the end of the year can advance the correct answer.

I have talked to picture house men in several cities down here, some of them running large theaters, others small. The following interview concerns the plight of the second run picture house that has been forced to go talkie. It comes from a man who has been in the motion picture business since it began.

"I didn't want to put in talking equipment, at all," said Harry Lucas when questioned about talkies in a small city. "I had to go talkie to keep my customers, but I do not have to run talkies every day. I do not know why, unless it is that people do not care to see more than one or two talking films each week. I do know that I could not run my theater

American Opera Company Here for Two Weeks' Stay

By Edward Moore.

FRESH from a summer of rehearsed strivings after what makes operatic performances interesting, the American Opera company is coming to the Majestic theater tomorrow night for a two weeks' stay. Early as the season is, you will be safe in putting it down as one of the most agreeable events the year will bring.

You will not hear the greatest voices in the world, nor will the company's new conductor, Isaac Van Grove, wield a baton over the most enormous orchestra. That fact should be faced and put out of the way at the start. What you will find will be a group of distinctively talented, good looking, well mannered young people, with the freshness of youth in their voices and the elasticity of youth in their bearing, all with a supreme regard for the job of putting opera in its most persuasive light and all, from Director Rosing to the most recent chorister, with a supreme disregard of operatic conventions.

For conventions sooner or later and usually sooner harden into a rigid substitute for thought and effort, and Mr. Rosing believes that no substitute for thought and effort has yet been invented. Miss Cecile Sherman confessed just before she went on the stage in Milwaukee last Monday night—I was one of the Chicago delegation that went up there—each time they put on "Mme. Butterfly" it seems like a totally new performance, including an appalling feeling of panic that assails her just before her entrance cue.

Viewed from a New Angle.

Mr. Rosing's plan in taking up a work for the repertoire is to forget everything he has known and heard about it before and study it all over again, just as if it were a new work fresh from the composer's pen. With a highly sensitive imagination and a completely efficient technical knowledge of the stage, he then reconstructs it in staging, costuming, coloring, and acting. And Mr. Rosing's idea of operatic acting is a long way from the idea of sawing the air with vigorous paws. It consists in interpreting the action of the moment through bodily rhythm, always conforming to the rhythm of the music, which sounds easy, seems to be rather difficult, and is most delightful to see when it is done as well as this crowd does it.

Incidentally they sing in English and when they do it my at times tottering faith in English as an expressive, beautiful, and singable language is completely restored. Also, those of us lacking in an expert's knowledge of French, German, and Italian are able to know what it is all about.

Chicago Contributes to Roster.

Chicago has had a bit to do with the company as it stands. Of Chicagoans native, resident, or by musical training, the count is one conductor, Isaac Van Grove; one composer, Clarence Loomis, and four singers, Marion McAfee and Eunice Steen, sopranos, and Marie Matyas and Helen Golden, though in the interests of strict accuracy it is necessary to set down Evanston as the residence of the last named.

The publicity herald also tells of the only sister act in grand opera, the case of Natalie and Bettina Hall, soprano and mezzo-soprano, each a star in her own field, and each a source of pleasure to both the aural and optic nerves.

Natalie, only 23 years old, has been singing leading rôles in grand opera for several seasons. Bettina is just beginning her second season with the company; she spent the summer as a member of "The Little Show," a current New York attraction. Before joining the American Opera company they were featured members of the Winthrop Ames Gilbert & Sullivan troupe.

Each will sing leading rôles during the Chicago season. Natalie will be heard on the opening night, Monday, as Marguerite in "Faust" and again on Wednesday night as Yolanda in "Yolanda of Cyprus," the new opera in English by Mr. Loomis, which will be given its world premiere on that night. Bettina is famous principally for her "Carmen." She will sing that rôle Friday night, Oct. 11, Thursday night, Oct. 17, and Saturday night, Oct. 19. "Faust," with Natalie Hall in the lead, will be sung also on Tuesday, Oct. 15, and "Yolanda of Cyprus" will be repeated Saturday [illegible] Oct. 12, Monday, Oct. 14, and Saturday matinée, Oct. 19.

"Madame Butterfly" Tuesday.

Of other works during the first week there will be "Mme. Butterfly"

John Barrymore Retraces Steps; Plays Comedy

In Mid-Victorian Setting He's a Scream.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 5.—[Special Correspondence.]—The incurable enfant terrible of the Barrymore clan, John Barrymore, is going back to his first love, comedy, in his new picture tentatively titled "The Man."

Looking younger and handsomer than ever before with a deep tan complexion, Barrymore is having the time of his life playing his rôle in the mid-Victorian talkie at Warner Brothers' Surrounded by all the horrors of mid-Victorian interior decoration and ladies upholstered with false hair and plush gowns, John plays a slightly blotto lord who arrives at the wrong house for a dinner party and sticks it out when the host thinks him a hired guest from an agency.

Jack Barrymore made his first success on the stage in a series of un-Barrymore-like comedies and it was only after he had achieved an enormous popularity in these that he became an orthodox Barrymore and took "Hamlet" and serious dramas. A thirst for comedy was rather evident in all his serious films and there are those who have always felt that Barrymore made most of his movies with his tongue in his cheek and his eye on the bank roll.

Every One Is Happy.

A spirit of good fellowship permeates the company working with Barrymore, as is usually the case. Jack always gets the best talent possible for his production and has a great friendship and cordiality for old friends and other stage folk. One of his most adoring feminine fans is a little old lady called Tiny Jones, widow of Hughie Mack. Tiny is working in this production with Jack and proudly exhibited the contents of an envelope John had slipped into her hands that day. It was a long awaited autographed photo inscribed: "To Tiny

Gotham Finds Relief from Plethora of Murder Plays

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It was the day before Easter or thereabouts that Henry Delauney, a producer of popular plays in London, was talking with Compton Schloss, an author of good plays that would not sell.

Delauney was trying to get Schloss to do a play for him, but they could not agree on the kind of play it should be.

Delauney wanted something popular, something with a lot of the usual hokum and blah, not to mention a dash of pishtosh.

Schloss being an artist, preferred to do something imaginative and fine, something woven from the pattern of life.

Delauney insisted patterns of life were drab and dull. That was why the great middle class invariably selected sentimental romances and musical comedies. They wanted to be lifted out of themselves. They wanted to meet princes and knights in shining armor. They had enough of doctors and tradesmen.

Delauney didn't believe in Santa Claus. But he did believe in Cinderella. And to prove that his patrons were as he said they were—common, unimaginative folk whose wits were dull because their lives were drab—he called in from the outer office Mr. and Mrs. Barcaldine, who were waiting to rent him their summer home. Let them decide.

Comedy Invades Murder Market.

This is the prologue to a quiet, wholesome, entertaining little comedy that moved into this murder market last week. It is called "Many Waters" and is one of those quaintly old-fashioned affairs that begins with a quotation—this one from the wisdom of Solomon and the Old Testament—

"Many waters cannot quench love; Neither can the floods drown it."

Mr. and Mrs. Barcaldine [Ernest Truex returned from London after three years and Marda Vanne] are, as Mr. Delauney intimated, stodgy and unimaginative. Married twenty-six years, they have had their share of domestic ups and downs, but are reasonably content. They still have a roof over their heads. They still can pay the butcher. Life? Romance? Adventure? Well, the Barcaldines wouldn't know much about such things.

Plays? O, yes. They often go to plays. What sort? O, usually something lively or exciting. What, at the moment, would be their choice: A soul-searching tragedy, a domestic triangle drama or a musical piece, "The Cinderella Princess"?

Well, they think perhaps they would enjoy "The Cinderella Princess" most. "And that," says Mr. Delauney, triumphantly, after the Barcaldines have left, "is your theater public!"

At this point "Many Waters" flashed back twenty-six years to the day that Mr. Barcaldine met Mabel Wingrove under a tree during a rainstorm at Earl's court. They became acquainted there and two weeks later, on a foggy morning, were married at the registrar's, with a couple of charwomen for witnesses.

Fine Relief from Raw Meat Diet.

After that they had their triumphs and their defeats; succeeded in business and failed; made a home; reared a daughter and saw her through a love tragedy that resulted in her death in child birth; adopted her illegitimate offspring and plodded on—to come finally to this day on which they are trying to rent the cottage they can ill afford to help them through the next winter.

No, Mr. Barcaldine is repeating, nothing much has occurred in their own lives. And they do like life and gayety in the theater. It sorts of lifts them away from the commonplaces of everyday.

"Many Waters" is rather fine fare for a crowd that has been fed raw meat these last several months. I am not sure many will care for it. But some will, and gain a joyous satisfaction in the experience.

Mr. Truex is somewhat more serious than he has been in his home theater before. His performance as the little fellow who stands four square to such winds of adversity as blow, straightening his shoulders to meet the gusts, leaning more than he realizes on the stanch little Mrs. Barcaldine, who is always close, close by, is a fine bit of character etching.

Miss Vanne is equally helpful to the play. She is a South African by birth and she has studied for the theater in both America and England. This is her first important part here. I

Chicago Symphony Has a Record of 39 Brilliant Years

By Frederick Stock.

THE Chicago Symphony orchestra occupies a unique position among kindred organizations throughout the world, by being the only one which has had only two conductors since the days of its inception, thirty-nine years ago. Theodore Thomas came to Chicago in 1891, at the invitation of some of our leading citizens, a group of prominent men who thought that the time was ripe for Chicago to have its own symphony orchestra. Thomas was called upon to organize what then became known as the Chicago orchestra, a band of about eighty-five of the most accomplished orchestral players to be found anywhere.

It seems only natural that the first years of the young organization should have been beset by many difficulties, as it did not yet enjoy the support of a large majority of music lovers. Thanks to the generosity, public spirit and far sightedness of its guarantors, the orchestra weathered the storms of those early days. Thomas, confident in Chicago as a music loving city, knew that the day would arrive when his orchestra would no longer be a costly luxury, but a cultural necessity. He built for the future and he built well. And when, on Jan. 5, 1905, he laid down the baton he had wielded with such superlative skill and high artistic resolve, he must have felt that his work would be carried on and that the permanency of the organization he had founded would be assured.

Thomas had lived to see the orchestra housed in its own building. Two weeks before he departed he had dedicated Orchestra hall, which stands today as a monument not only to Thomas, but to the fine spirit of some nine thousand subscribers to the building fund. The high artistic standard set by Thomas, his great executive ability and the power of his strong but genial personality made the problem of a successor a matter of grave concern to the directorate. Thomas' unfailing foresight and judgment had provided the man who was to continue his work.

Stock Succeeds Thomas.

It fell to the happy lot of the writer of these lines to have been closely associated with Thomas for ten years. Five years of assistant conductorship had given him sufficient elementary training to enable him to step into Thomas' place when he left this world. Enjoying from the beginning the confidence of public and press, greatly helped by the encouraging attitude of the board of directors, the management, and the orchestra, he succeeded in doing what was expected of him.

Twenty-five years have passed since then, the orchestra has attained its goal, for it stands today as one of the most vital forces in the cultural life of our community. Pacemaker along the lines of musical progress, it has been the greatest stimulant to the musical growth of our city. The Civic opera, the newly organized American opera, smaller orchestral organizations, the North Shore Festival association, choral groups, and chamber music societies, all these bear witness to the tremendous advance musical development and appreciation have made in our city.

There can be no question but the children's concerts of the orchestra, now going into their eleventh year, will have an added impetus due to the plan of coöperation between the public school board and the orchestra. This plan, arrangements for which were made with Supt. William J. Bogan and Musical Director Dr. J. Lewis Browne, involves a four year course in music appreciation in the Chicago public schools.

Civic Orchestra Trains Youth.

The Civic orchestra, which for the last ten years has meant so much in the field of training young aspirants for orchestra positions enters the new season with evidence of greater interest than ever. To date over sixty of its former students are members of prominent symphonic organizations of the country, some of them already occupying positions as principals.

The thirty-ninth season of the orchestra promises to be one of unusual interest. Of novelties there will be few, for those of any consequence are few. Some of the best will probably originate from the pens of American composers. The impending contest of the Victor Talking Machine company for a $25,000 prize will undoubtedly yield quite a few American compositions of exceptional merit.

In Europe the writing of symphonic music has reached an impasse, as most of the European composers are busying themselves with works of lighter caliber.

It is most gratifying to testify to the constantly growing interest in Europe in the compositions of our foremost American writers. John Alden Carpenter's "Skyscraper" ballet had a great success in Munich and Dresden, where it was hailed as typically American in manner and matter. His songs as well as many other works are widely known in all parts of musical Europe. Leo Sowerby's works are also becoming favorably known, and the works of many other contemporary American composers are beginning to figure prominently on the programs of the European musical centers.

And so we find the growth and advance of music in America reflected in the activities of our own composers. Much has already been achieved to place America in the foreground of musical nations throughout the world. Much more will be done in the future to make her position more prominent in the realm of art and culture. The writer of these lines feels gratified that the last twenty-five years in the history of the Chicago symphony orchestra are worthy of recognition, not only in a chronological sense, but also in the contribution to the fame of our city as a cultural environment.

Plays and Such of Ten Years Ago at Chicago Theaters

SUBJOINED are news of and comments on plays and shows printed in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of October 5, 1919—the date most nearly corresponding to today. The excerpts are verbatim, and not re-writes or summarizations.

The Orpheum Circuit, which is the chosen path of vaudeville, has engaged to tread its patrician orbit Mr. Jack Osterman, who boasts, as well he may, that he is the son of Kathryn Osterman Rosenthal and J. J. Rosenthal, manager of the Woods Theater. Mr. Osterman sings the lively songs of the day; and he tells stories so much better than stories are usually told in the varieties that he will have a place of honor at the Palace and the Majestic when the season is older. Mr. Osterman represents the youth which is blithely edging out the Jack Norworths and the Harry Foxes of vaudeville.

Mr. Jack Osterman, despite the modest touting involved in the foregoing paragraph of 1919, survives, and is a familiar figure in the big revues, in the varieties, and in the movie-prologues. Mr. Norworth and Mr. Fox still drop in at intervals.

Miss Billie Burke, in her retreat to the spoken drama, will be helped by Tom Powers in a principal rôle. The play will be Somerset Maugham's "Caesar's Wife." It is acted in London by Fay Compton, Aubrey Smith, Eva Moore, and George Relph.

"Caesar's Wife" didn't endure for Miss Burke. Mr. Powers is among the actors he will be here in the Theater Guild's cast of "Strange Interlude." That is, he will be unless the city authorities become Boston-minded.

Approbation was given in Baltimore last week to "Apple-Blossoms," the operetta in the music of which Fritz Kreisler is a collaborator with Victor Jacobi. A correspondent reports the score as being of "entrancing beauty." "Apple-Blossoms" is sung and danced by John Charles Thomas, late of the Chicago cast of "Mayfair"; Wilda Bennett, Florence Shirley, Percival Knight, Roy Atwell, Elsa Parker, Harrison Brockbank, Juanita Fletcher, and Fred and Adèle Astaire, recently of the Passing Show.

"Apple-Blossoms" was the subject of what actors call "great notices"; but it didn't hold up as popular entertainment. It is now all but forgotten. . . . Mr. Thomas, after trying opera in Europe and recitals in this country, is lieutenanting in the two-a-day. Percival Knight, an amusing splinter of an Englishman, is dead. Miss Bennett's name occasionally finds print. Miss Shirley, who was so amusing in "Along Came Ruth" and "Oh, Lady! Lady!!" is either retired or else in the list of players who don't come to Chicago. As to the Astaires, it was told recently in THE TRIBUNE that Mr. Ziegfeld has hired them for $7,000 a week to appear in something of his.

Twenty Years Ago

GOING back through the files to twenty years ago, or to the corresponding Sunday of 1909, the interests of theater-goers were catered to in THE TRIBUNE of October 3 by the paragraphs that follow.

Rex Beach's Alaskan romance, "The Barrier," dramatized by Eugene Presbrey, will be presented for the first time on any stage at McVicker's Theater this evening. The hero is a Kentucky army captain; the heroine, a half-breed Indian girl. The players will include Theodore Roberts, the star; W. S. Hart, Alphonse Ethier, Richard Thornton, Miss Abigail Marshall, and Miss Rosalind Ziegler.

The play was not a go. Mr. Presbrey wrote numerous pieces; and one of them was a success, thanks to the popularity of the late William H. Crane: 'twas called "A Virginia Romance." . . . Of the actors, both Theodore Roberts, who is dead, and Mr. Hart became celebrities in the film.

Miss Louise Gunning will make her first appearance as a star in Chicago tonight at the Garrick Theater in a musical comedy called "Marcelle," with words by Frank Pixley and music by Gustav Luders. The company includes Henry Coote, Charles and Nellie King, Miss Norma Brown, Miss Florence Rother, and Harold T. Morey.

Miss Gunning was a nice singer out of the varieties, where she had made a specialty of singing the tunes of long ago; but she hadn't the equipment for starhood. "Marcelle," as a piece and as a show, was merely so-so. Charles and Nellie King were brother and sister: he is now in sound-films. And Mr. Coote, who in those days sang romantic rôles in operetta and the like, is now the supervisor of box-office in all the Chicago theaters belonging to the Messrs. Shubert.

The first performance at the Globe Theater under the new policy will be given this afternoon, when Eugene Walter's play, "The Wolf," will be presented at popular prices. Miss Mary Servoss will appear as Hilda McTavish, and Richard Gordon as Jules Beaubien.

The Globe was the old cyclorama building at the southwest corner of Seventh and Wabash. Its sole advantage as a theater was that the L trains, curving just in the rear of it, kept one from hearing the actors. As to "The Wolf," it was a semi-success by Walter. Miss Servoss is in activity; and it may be remembered that she was Portia when David Warfield was Shylock.

At the Great Northern, Bert Williams, the Negro comedian, will appear for the first time in Chicago in his new musical comedy, entitled "Mr. Lode of Koal." According to the announcement, the scene of the play is Oriental and the theme mythical. Mr. Williams falls asleep in the first act, dreams in the second, and wakens in the third.

Mr. Ziegfeld in 1909 hadn't yet taken the West-Indian droll into the Follies; nor even then there were play-reporters who insisted that Williams would have been hailed as another Coquelin if he were white. The writer of these memoranda didn't regard him as among the gifted performers.

IN THE DRAMATIC LEAGUE'S FIRST

ROBERT HASLAM J. FISCHER WHITE

THEY'RE from London, brought hither by the Dramatic League of Chicago as members of the cast of Robins Millar's "Thunder in the Air," which will be the first in the League's season of five new plays in the Princess Theater. Mr. Haslam is the "juvenile" of the cast. He is one of the younger English leading-men, and is as yet unknown in Chicago. Mr. White has long held a high position in the London theaters. He has the principal "character-part," as an actor would term it, in this imported play, which is dated for a week from tomorrow night.

This Thing and That of the Stage

By Frederick Donaghey.

dance pieces; and some of us have a keen and joyful memory of how good an actress she was when she acted in the Majestic in J. M. Patterson's little play named "By-Products," which was for that occasion called "The Sell-Out."

Miss Mary Millburn, Miss Charlotte Woodruff, and Miss Lina Abarbanell are to be in "The Silver Swan," an operetta tried out last season in Boston, where it did not do so well at the box-office.

Thurston, the well-known hanky-panky man, is the author of a play named "The Demon"; and his hope for its success resides in the circumstance that he has written it round and about some of his illusory devices.

"P. S.: He Got the Job" is the smarty-smarty title of a play dealing "in the modern manner" with Joseph, the wife of Pharaoh, and others met with in reading the Old Testament. 'Tis told that difficulty has been experienced in casting the rôle of Joseph, who is shown in scenes from his days of bondage until he takes charge of the food-supply of Egypt. . . . This is by Bertram Bloch, who has written others: one named "Fireproof," for which Osgood Perkins, now in "The Front Page," is desired; and the other is called "The Princess Who Wouldn't Say Die," which Maurice Browne says he will give in London with Miss Rosalinde Fuller, who used to sing folk-ditties with her two sisters in the Little Theater here.

Miss Gladys Baxter and Solly Ward, here last season in "Music in May," and Miss Helen Gilliland, here a year ago in "The Red Robe," are to be in a New-York revival of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus," one of the loveliest of all the operettas yet written. . . . The Messrs. Shubert, who are to make the revival, once gave a version of the piece in New-York under the title of "The Merry Countess," with Miss José Collins as the star.

Princess Matchabelli, who once said she would sue Morris Gest for hundreds and billions of dollars because he gave the rôle of the Madonna in "The Miracle" to Lady Diana Manners, is to have the rôle in a revival of the play.

Winthrop Ames, whose retirement from the business of producing plays was announced the other day in THE TRIBUNE, will have no difficulty in disposing of his contract to manage George Arliss, if he care to dispose of it; for other managers are said to be bidding for the document. Mr. Arliss, when last heard of, was Hollywooding.

Guy Ribertson, here last season in "White Lilacs," is to be taken from "The Street-Singer," current in New-York, and put into "Nina Rosa," a new operetta by Sigmund Romberg; and his rôle in the former piece will be turned over to John Price Jones. . . . And Miss Odette Myrtil, who also was here in "White Lilacs," is this week's headliner in the Palace.

Frank Craven, 'tis told, will have the principal comic part in a special Chicago cast being assembled for "Sweet Adeline," a current success in New-York. Mr. Craven was rather happy in at least one song-and-dance piece—"Going Up!" a make-over of a farce named "The Aviator." . . . Miss Mary Charles, Miss Blanche Ring, and Miss Dorothy Mackaye also are mentioned for the new cast of "Sweet Adeline."

Miss Barrymore does not give Sunday performances in her Chicago engagement; and neither does the Theater Guild. The Dramatic League of Chicago indicates that some, if not all, its plays will be performed Sunday at box-office prices: that is, Sunday is not in the subscribers' schedule for the season.

Joseph Santley, who has been doing something or other in Hollywood, says he is again to undertake the duties and the perils of a play-producer, and that he will in the course of the new season stage (a) "Portrait of a Spy," based by Martin Brown on E. Temple Thurston's like-named novel, now selling well in the book-stalls; (b) "Bon Voyage!" by Ring Lardner and Mr. Santley, with music by Vincent Youmans; (c) a piece, as yet untitled, wherein he and Miss Ivy Sawyer [Mrs. Santley] will perform.

Miss Pauline Lord will resume the principal rôle in "Strange Interlude" with the Theater Guild's second cast for O'Neill's play. The rôle will be acted in Chicago by Miss Judith Anderson.

Lou Tellegen, who persists, is announced for the title-rôle of "Cortez," something about the Spanish conquistador by Leroy Clemons and Ralph Murphy.

Miss Alison Skipworth, who is a good actress when fitted, is to be with Lynne Overman in the farce named "Button! Button!"

A piece known for a time in print as "Murder in the Subway" is now called "Subway Express"; and it is said that the change was made at the request of the corporation which runs the vast subway system of Greater New-York.

Ben-Ami, now with Miss Eva Le Gallienne, is to have the principal rôle in a revival by her of Tolstoy's "The Living Corpse," or "Redemption," as it was called last Winter when Moissi acted it in Chicago in German. Nearly all the actors have expressed a desire to have what they call a crack at the rôle ever since, about eight years ago, John Barrymore performed in it in New-York.

COMING UP

BERT LAHR

He's the principal laugh-maker in "Hold Everything!" due tomorrow night in the Grand Opera-House. The piece had a New-York run—ending September 28—of just five days less than a year. . . . This will mark Mr. Lahr's first Chicago appearance in what is sometimes termed "a regular show." He was for years in the varieties with his wife, and later in some of the burlesque-shows.

New Things in the New-York Theaters

EIGHT novelties and listed this week for the theaters of Manhattan Island; and a revival of some interest concerns "Mlle. Modiste," the natty song-play by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, neither of whom is alive for this dusting-off of a piece they wrote for Miss Fritzi Scheff as long ago as 1905. Miss Scheff will have the title-rôle in the revival. . . . The eight new plays are:

"Kari and Anna," a play from the German of Leonard Frank, with Miss Alice Brady and Otto Kruger heading the cast assembled by the Theater Guild.

"Mlle. Bouret," by Claude Anet, who has made his own version in English: to be put on by Miss Eva Le Gallienne.

"Her Friend the King," by A. E. Thomas and Harrison Rhodes from a like-named novel by the latter. William Faversham heads the cast.

"The House of Fear," by Will Spence, with Miss Effie Shannon.

"Jenny," by Margaret Ayer [Mrs. Cecil] Barnes and Edward Sheldon, with Miss Jane Cowl and Guy Standing.

"June Moon," by Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman, based on the former's tale called "Some Like Them Cold."

"First Mortgage," by Louis Weitzenkorn.

"Ladies Don't Lie," by Paul Frank, with Charles Richman and Miss Spring Byington.

By Burns Mantle.

am hoping if New York does not buy "Many Waters" that some one will send it west to you folk. You are pretty sure to like it a lot. Monckton Hoffe, prominent as an English melodramatist, is the author.

Bright Spots in White's "Scandals."

The new George White "Scandals" runs to flesh, as usual, and is as elaborately staged as usual. In wit, it seems to me it is a little better than usual, and as an entertainment it is pretty sure to strike those who are fond of modern revues as being perfectly swell.

The better burlesque bits include one that I laughed through immoderately. "The Man of the Hour" it is called. It presents Willie Howard Rodrigues Alvarez [El Presidente] just this minute elected president of Mexico.

Outside the palace the eager populace is noisy in its impatience to greet its new executive. Inside the palace the electricians are stringing wires to the microphone that the world may hear El Presidente's first speech.

The windows are thrown open. There are huzzas and hisses and hurrahs. El Presidente speaks, being received with cheers, vegetables and bullets on the shin. He speaks again and the fruits of the country are showered upon him. Now a bullet clips his ear. And now he is pretty generously perforated.

The announcer grabs the microphone. "Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience," he broadcasts, "you have just listened to the speech of acceptance of Rodrigues Alvarez, the late president of Mexico."

There are the usual blackouts illustrating speakeasy anecdotes. A certain timeliness of wit saves some of them. There is the one, for example, in which the usual careless wife is surprised by the usual unexpected husband, who finds Master Howard trying to hide under the covers of her couch.

"Who are you?" demands the husband, throwing down the covers.

"Believe it or not," answers Willie, "I'm a stowaway!"

The Abbott dancers of Chicago, a group of precision steppers who add tap-dancing on the toes to their other accomplishments, are one of the major exhibits this year, and there is much handsome scenery. Also a stage full of nudes lolling on a sun-soaked beach acquiring their sun-tan.

Still Another Murder Play.

The novelty of the week is a melodrama called "Subway Express," in which the action for the three divisions of the play is confined to a single subway car.

There is a fight as the train is leaving Times Square, a man is shot through the heart, and the police inspector gets on at 72d street to start his "and where were yous?"

The medical inspector joins the group at 96th street and complicates matters by announcing that the dead man did not die from the bullet but from an electric shock.

The examination is continued at the yards at 242d street and finally the car is run back over the route to Times Square and 14th street and the murder reënacted. This time the unsuspected passenger is uncovered. He was a subway employé, was given $10,000 to do the killing, and had made contact with the third rail by means too intricate to describe.

"Subway Express" has a lot of colorful incident familiar to subway passengers, and the illusion of a speeding train is excellent. Everything is there but the noise and the smells. It is one of the neatest and most ingeniously contrived of our recent murders. Edward Ellis, Edward Pawley, and Dorothy Peterson are prominently cast in it, Ellis as the inspctor, Dorothy as the wife of the dead man, and Pawley as Dorothy's lover.

Satirical Comedy Speedily Dies.

Item: "Sweet Land of Liberty," a satirical comedy proving that under prohibition crime flourishes and even the squarer of lawbreakers are not given a fair chance, has proved a quick failure. Philip Dunning of "Broadway" and "Night Hostess" wrote and staged it.

Item: "See Naples and Die," by Elmer Rice, who wrote "Street Scene" and won last year's Pulitzer prize with it, is Elmer's attempt to prove that he can write wise-cracking dialogue as well as any of them. The play had an unpromising start this week. The dialogue is so overburdened with smartness the plot, which isn't bad, never works through. Claudette Colbert and Roger Prior struggled with it.

Item: "Scotland Yard" is a melodrama of the old school, telling of the greatest adventure of Dakin Bacarolle, the greatest thief in all England. Picked up on a battlefield in France with his face practically shot away, a French surgeon reconstructs Dakin's features after a photograph found in his pocket. It is the photograph of Sir John Usher, who was chairman of the board of the Bank of England. Thus the greatest thief in England finds himself inside the greatest bank in the world—but also in love with the wife of the man he is impersonating. The bank is robbed of a million sterling—but they get it back. Dakin Bacarolle goes away to reform, taking a woman's love with him. Not so much, this one. Paul Cavanagh, another good actor from England, plays Dakin. Phoebe Foster is the fascinated wife.

Item: Beatrice Lillie, giving ten days to vaudeville before sailing Friday for England, started with a laugh.

"This is the first time I've been in vaudeville," she confessed, shyly; "me—as always 'ad me own 'orses!"

Just to Say Something.

The much-ridiculed soliloquy is often a perfectly natural thing. The ridiculing of it is nonsensical. As most plays go, a soliloquy is ipso facto just half as bad as a dialogue.—George Jean Nathan in Judge.

COMES BACK TO US AS A STAR

MISS EUGENIE LEONTOVITCH

SHE'S due tonight in the Cort in the principal rôle of "Fires of Spring," a new play by Robert McLaughlin, known in Chicago for his piece named "The Eternal Magdalen," acted in 1916 in the Grand Opera-House by Miss Julia Arthur. Miss Leontovitch was here back in 1923 in a show called the Revue Russe; but she is recalled not at all for that, while she is pleasantly remembered for her performing last Spring in the Garrick in "And, So, to Bed."

Insufficient.

At the moment, novelty is taking a lot of the great movie-audience to the talkies; and curiosity is taking some of the theater-audience—but not much, and not for long. They go. They see. But they are not conquered—yet. The perfection of the new technique will, of course, develop this thing into a powerful substitute for the legitimate theater: a substitute, not a rival. In places where the theater, itself, cannot be maintained, the talkies will thrive. This will naturally make a demand for the services of the great legitimate stars. But the greatness of these actors will derive directly from the theater, itself, and depend upon their achievement in the theater, itself. I cannot see the talkies developing great actors of their own, apart from the legitimate theaters, as the movies have done.—Crosby Gaige in the Theater Magazine.

Who Else Wants to Learn Ballroom (Social) or Stage Dancing Under on Tuesday night, "The Marriage of Figaro," a gayly stylized production, Thursday night, "Carmen" Friday night, "Martha" Saturday afternoon, and, as has just been told, a repetition of "Yolanda of Cyprus" Saturday night. There will be no performance on Sunday. A summary of operas and casts will be found in another column. Mr. Van Grove will be conductor throughout the week.

Turning back to the matter of English texts for a moment, a number of skilled persons have had a hand in making them. It has been told before how the texts as they are finally sung are the result of the trial and error method. The writer does the best he can at his desk, then the words are tested in rehearsal, and if they do not sing well, they are worked over until they do. Wherefore the texts are not referred to as translations, but as adaptations or versions, all in the interest of accuracy of speech.

The adaptation of "Faust" was made by Robert A. Simon, of "Mme. Butterfly" by R. H. Elkins. "Yolanda of Cyprus" is not an adaptation, but a composed book by Cale Young Rice. "The Marriage of Figaro" was done by Charles Lamb Kenny with a subsequent editing by Eugene Goossens. "Carmen" was adapted by Helena Mullins and Robert A. Simon, and "Martha" by Nathalia MacFarren. All are guaranteed good English for both singer and hearer.

Civic Opera Roster.

Having taken time and thought to making the list reasonably complete, the Civic Opera company sends out its roster of artists for the coming season; not, however, the répertoire, which is still awaiting finishing touches. As was the case last year, America leads the list with seventeen native-born principals. Italy is second with twelve singers and two conductors.

There are four native-born Belgian singers and one Belgian conductor in third place. The British Empire comes next with three native-born singers and one conductor. Germany presents two singers and one conductor. Spain and Poland each supply two singers and Russia one singer and one conductor. There are also one Austrian, one Frenchman, one Hungarian, and one Mexican. Of the foreign-born artists, eleven are naturalized Americans.

This announcement of the company indicates that the policy of the Civic Opera of giving American artists preference, whenever they are equally well equipped for their work, is being continued. Of the fourteen sopranos in the company seven are American. They are Hilda Burke, Helen Freund, Florence Macbeth, Edith Mason, Alice Mock, Hallie Stiles, and Thelma Votipka. Three of seven contraltos—Constance Eberhart, Coe Glade, and Cyrena Van Gordon—likewise are Americans. Of the eleven tenors Charles Hackett, Forrest Lamont and Charles Marshall represent the United States. Three of eight baritones—Richard Bonelli, Barre Hill, and Robert Ringling, are native-born. Chase Baromeo is the sole representative for America among the bassos.

Many Countries Represented.

Italy is represented by Claudia Muzio among the sopranos, Ada Paggi among the contraltos, Giuseppe Cavadore, Lodovico Oliviero, and Tito Schipa among the tenors, Cesare Formichi, Giacomo Rimini, Eugenio Sandrini, and Vanni-Marcoux among the baritones, Virgilio Lazzari, Antonio Nicolich, and Vittorio Trevisan among the bassos, and the musical director, Giorgio Polacco, and Roberto Moranzoni among the conductors. Of these Virgilio Lazzari, Lodovico Oliviero, Giorgio Polacco, Giacomo Rimini, and Vittorio Trevisan are naturalized Americans and Vanni-Marcoux is a naturalized Frenchman.

From Belgium come Alice d'Hermanoy, soprano; Maria Claessens, contralto; Rene Maison, tenor; Desire Defrere, baritone, and Charles Lauwers, conductor. Of these, d'Hermanoy, Claessens, Defrere, and Lauwers are naturalized Americans.

The British Empire is represented by Mary Garden, soprano, from Scotland [naturalized American], Eva Turner, soprano, from England, Irene Pavloska, mezzo-soprano, from Canada [American citizen], and Frank St. Leger, conductor, from Australia [naturalized American].

The German contingent includes Frida Leider, soprano, Maria Olszewska, contralto, and Egon Pollak, conductor.

The two Spanish artists are Marcherita Salvi, soprano, and Antonio Cortis, tenor. The two of Polish birth, Rosa Raisa, soprano, and Alexander Kipnis, basso. Madame Raisa is a naturalized American. Austria is represented by Carl Bitterl, basso; France by Edouard Cotreuil, basso; Hungary by Theodore Strack, tenor, and Mexico by Jose Mojica, tenor. From Russia come Theodore Ritch, tenor, and Emil Cooper, conductor.

The Complete List.

Fourteen sopranos—Hilda Burke, American; Helen Freund, American; Mary Garden, Scotch [naturalized American]; Alice d'Hermanoy, Belgian [naturalized American]; Frida Leider, German; Florence Macbeth, American; Edith Mason, American; Alice Mock, American; Claudia Muzio, Italian; Rosa Raisa, Polish [naturalized American]; Margherita Salvi, Spanish; Hallie Stiles [new], American; Eva Turner, English; Thelma Votipka [new], American.

Seven contraltos and mezzo-sopranos—Maria Claessens, Belgian [naturalized American]; Constance Eberhart, American; Coe Glade, American; Maria Olszewska, German, Ada Paggi, Italian; Irene Pavloska, Canadian [American citizen]; Cyrena Van Gordon, American.

Eleven tenors—Giuseppe Cavadore, Italian; Antonio Cortis, Spanish; Charles Hackett, American; Forrest Lamont, American; Rene Maison, Belgian; Charles Marshall, American; Jose Mojica, Mexican; Lodovico Oliviero, Italian [naturalized American]; Theodore Ritch, Russian; Tito Schipa, Italian; Theodore Strack [new], Hungarian.

Eight baritones—Richard Bonelli, American; Desire Defrere, Belgian [naturalized American]; Cesare Formichi, Italian; Barre Hill, American; Giacomo Rimini, Italian [naturalized American]; Robert Ringling, American; Eugenio Sandrini, Italian; Vanni-Marcoux, Italian [naturalized Frenchman].

Seven bassos—Carl Bitterl, Austrian [naturalized American]; Chase Baromeo, American; Edouard Cotreuil, French; Alexander Kipnis, Polish; Virgilio Lazzari, Italian [naturalized American]; Antonio Nicolich, Italian; Vittorio Trevisan, Italian [naturalized American].

Six conductors—Giorgio Polacco, musical director, Italian [naturalized American]; Emil Cooper, Russian; Roberto Moranzoni, Italian; Egon Pollak, German; Charles Lauwers, Belgian [naturalized American]; Frank St. Leger, Australian [naturalized American].

Civic Opera Week.

Beginning tomorrow, metropolitan Chicago will celebrate civic opera week. The mayor of Chicago and the mayors and presidents of the towns and villages which make up the metropolitan area have, through proclamations, requested that serious thought be turned during this week toward the benefits enjoyed by Chicago through the Chicago Civic Opera company.

Nearly 400 volunteer workers have pledged their entire time from Oct. 7 to 12 in making civic opera week a success. The purpose of the week is to bring more forcibly than ever before to the citizens of the mertopolitan area the benefits of grand opera and to complete a "sell-out" of the five main subscription performances for the 1929-'30 season.

To that end, all seats which remained unsold at the close of the week's business on Friday, Oct. 4, were assigned to the various Civic Opera clubs in proportion to their membership, and, during the week, every club has pledged itself to dispose of its quota of subscription tickets.

In addition to the campaign for the sale of subscription tickets, there will be programs, lectures and short talks explaining the artistic efforts of and results achieved by the Chicago Civic Opera company.

Tune in on the Graybar Hour

Tune in on "Joe and Vi," Cartoonist Briggs' famous comic strip figures. Graybar Hour, every Saturday night . . Columbia Broadcasting System.

The time, the place, and the GRAYBAR SUPER-HETERODYNE RADIO

WHEN the time and the place and the people are "just right" . . . then all that's needed to make the party a success is the right radio!

Which describes quite accurately the new Graybar Super-heterodyne. It's as fine a radio as there is . . . bar none!

There's a "sparkle" to this radio that you don't often hear (due of course to that most sensitive of all circuits... the Graybar Super-heterodyne). There's a grace and a smartness about its lines that you don't often see. There's a "different" air about its tapestry covering that is altogether captivating.

It's a radio your guests will rave about!

Of course, you'd expect something unusual in the Graybar Super-heterodyne... since Graybar has had such unusual experience in developing a complete line of radio, and in maintaining its reputation as oldest electrical distributor in the world and as outfitter to almost all of the leading broadcasting stations in this country.

The Super-heterodyne Cabinet Model No. 600, shown above, is an excellent buy (less radiotrons) at . . . $225 . . . a price, by the way, which includes a splendid electro-dynamic speaker. The cabinet is noteworthy for its charming simplicity . . . (a quality which enables it to harmonize with any type of furniture).

You could not possibly make a better choice.

Nowhere in all radio tube-dom are there better tubes than RCA Radiotrons, Graybar believes. That's why Graybar distributes them.

Industry looks to Graybar, too

To most people, developing and distributing a complete line of radio and appliances for the home would seem a "man-size job."

And so it is! But it's only part of Graybar's job.

Supplying everything electrical for industry as well as for the home... some 60,000 different items in all... this, in brief, is Graybar's total job, and has been for 60 years.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of usual mesh. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel,

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Tears of Joy.

Dear Mae: Your views on current pictures until today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE have coincided after a fashion with mine. However, Mae, they no longer do since your review of "Say It with Songs."

I saw it yesterday and thought it was splendid. Moreover, you have a disgusting sense of humor if you consider the jail scenes ridiculous. They were heartrending, and picture for the public what the convicts endure. You are certainly unfit to judge musical compositions since you deplore the use of "Why Can't You?" and other similar hits in said production.

O, Mae, you are extremely hard hearted if a few tears were not wring from your cold, unfeeling heart during the picture!

DISGUSTED MOVIE FAN.

Editor's Note: Well, I almost shed a tear of joy when it was all over.

Notes of Music and Musicians

With the first concert of the Woman's Symphony orchestra next Wednesday night at the Eighth Street theater, Ebba Sundstrom of Chicago will appear as the new conductor. She was assistant conductor last season under Ethel Leginska, who has retired from the post but will return as guest conductor and soloist in one of the concerts.

Lucie Westen's song recital at the Studebaker this afternoon will be her first Chicago appearance in two years, during which time she has been singing in opera in Dresden, Munich, and Chemitz. She is a former member of the Chicago Civic and German Light Opera companies. Recital appearances will be made here and in her native city, Milwaukee, during her visit, after which she will return to Europe.

The joint song recital by Fanny Cole Sample and John Dwight Sample at the Auditorium this afternoon is for the benefit of the Cenacle, a retreat center for women at 513 Fullerton parkway. The chapel guild of the Cenacle is sponsoring the event. The program will consist of operatic arias and duets from popular classic productions.

Max Bendix, recently appointed conductor of the official band of the 1933 World's fair, will conduct a series of popular priced band concerts with semi-classical programs on Sunday afternoons. He announces that they will begin early in November. His purpose, he says, is to fill in the large gap that exists between symphony orchestras and opera on one side and jazz on the other. He was conductor at the Chicago World's fair of 1893, the Louisiana Purchase exposition of 1904, and the San Francisco Panama-Pacific exposition of 1915. His present headquarters are in the world's fair suite of the Burnham building.

John Barrymore Retraces Steps; Plays Comedy

In Mid-Victorian Setting He's a Scream.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

Jones, from her boy friend, John Barrymore."

And what set the little old lady completely aflutter was that Barrymore brought over the visiting statesman, Sir Winston Churchill, and presented him to Tiny with a flourish. Tiny is a Welsh woman and had confided her desire to John when she heard the prominent Englishman was coming to see him.

One scene Barrymore made during my visit to his set was a hiccoughing incident that was so funny it was hard to keep the electricians from guffawing and spoiling the microphone effect. John and another guest at the party hiccough in harmony almost to the tune of a theme song.

Two Brilliant Openings.

The opening of the downtown Warner Brothers theater was celebrated this week with the première of "Gold Diggers of Broadway." In the audience Lillian Tashman created a sensation with her black gown cut below the waist in a "V" showing her sun tan rather extensively and her crystal flower necklace, which hung down her back. Lillian's hair parted from her forehead to her neck over the top of her head and was gathered in a cluster over each ear in tiny flat ringlets exposing the ear and two long pendant earrings. A cascade of mammoth orchids was the only color worn with the black gown.

"The Cock-Eyed World" had its local opening at the Chinese theater to a brilliant audience. Some other producers felt that Fox violated a gentleman's agreement in the matter of dialogue, as distinctly vulgar things were said without employing the words forbidden by Mr. Will Hays for use before the microphone.

Following the picture showing Raoul Walsh, who directed it, gave a large party in honor of Winfield Sheehan's birthday. Walsh introduced the chief guests thus:

"Winfield Sheehan started out as a reporter. Then he became a cop. And one day while chasing a burglar he naturally drifted into the motion picture industry. Burglars, meet Winfield Sheehan, Fox executive."

The party turned out like the old woman who lived in a shoe. There were a couple hundred people more than could be taken care of and Walsh made apologies to those who had to eat standing up. The grandest and wildest affair Hollywood has seen in many a day wound up well after dawn, with groups of guests shooting craps, as many well regulated Hollywood orgies end.

Call hour on the Walsh set was for one in the afternoon the day after the opening instead of 8 a. m., as usual.

News of Films and Players.

One of Dialogue Writer Jimmy Starr's recent wisecracks: "Maybe the reason Charlie Chaplin doesn't make a talkie is because Charlie is too funny for words."

The twenty-two room Hilltop mansion the late Fred Thomson bought, landscaped and furnished at something over $1,000,000, was sold by his widow, the scenarist Frances Marion, for $540,000. L. S. Barnes, a California oil millionaire, bought the place. The Thomson estate was known as "Misty Mountain," and contained fourteen acres.

Now a real estate man is suing for $25,000 commission on the deal. Thus do the greatnesses of the movie great pass into a petty aftermath.

Ralph Ince, who has been producer, supervisor, author and director of motion pictures, has now bobbed up in the new capacity of talkie actor. He is one of the gentlemen who make bulls, bears, lambs and chickens sway at his word in "Wall Street," with Allen Pringle, at Columbia studio. Ince just finished another talkie, "Hurricane," in the capacity of director.

NO GRAY HAIR

Just Like Finding $4.25!

If your hair is faded, streaked or gray, and if you want your money's worth—don't pay $5 or more for a fancy name on a fancy bottle or for a trick treatment.

For here . . . at last . . . is an amazing formula that quickly and safely restores the hair to its natural color-ing. . . . And it costs only 75c!

You can mix it yourself. Just blend Sage Tea and Sulphur in the correct proportions. Better, your druggist has it prepared and ready to use. Ask him for Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur. Pay him 75c!

You Take No Risk

We know there is nothing quite so effective as Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur. It brings the result you desire. If you are not more than satisfied, send the empty carton to the makers and your money will be refunded. Get Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur from your druggist.

¶ Remember how you howled at the Marx Brothers in "The Cocoanuts"? Remember the chills and thrills of "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu" and "The Greene Murder Case"? The hair-raising drama of that great spectacle, "The Four Feathers"? That glamorous, glorious romance of the stage, "The Dance of Life"? They were all Paramount Pictures and only a few at that—the New Show World of entertainment at its most thrilling best. ¶ Now look ahead and see what great things are coming! Harold Lloyd talking in "Welcome Danger"; "The Two Black Crows", Moran & Mack, in a great talking, singing, dancing spectacle, "Why Bring That Up?"; "The Virginian"—"The Covered Wagon" of the New Show World; Ziegfeld's great girl-and-music extravaganza, "Glorifying the American Girl," with Mary Eaton and Dan Healy and such stars as Eddie Cantor, Rudy Vallee, Helen Morgan appearing in the revue scenes—to name a few. ¶ The talking-singing screen opened a great New Show World, and Paramount, with 17 years of supremacy back of it, and with the greatest resources and man-power in the industry, developed its possibilities to the fullest extent. With the cream of screen and stage stars. With the greatest music composers. With the leading directors and showmen. With the most advanced sound studios in Hollywood, and also in New York, center of the dramatic and musical world. ¶ Small wonder the greatest shows of the New Show World are Paramount Pictures! And they're yours to see and enjoy right around the corner from wherever you are. Your Theatre Manager will tell you when. ¶ "If it's a Paramount Picture it's the best show in town!"

Talkies Offer Problems to the Small Town

Second Run Houses Find 'Em Costly.

By Tom Pettey.

profitably if I had to buy talking pictures for every run. I know, too, that I could not attract theatergoers if I did not have a 'talking picture shown here' over my entrance.

"I'll show you where the small exhibitor gets it in the neck. Before the speakies came along, we used to get second run films of the silent kind for $25, $30, and $50. Now the talkies of the same or inferior class cost us from $100 up. We used to charge 20 cents for admission. We have gone up to 25 cents. That is as high as we can go and keep filling the theater. There is no percentage in that for us.

Small Houses Suffer.

"Besides, it takes longer to run a talking picture. People will remain in the house to catch a bit of dialogue they missed on the first run. Every seat for every run counts when you are paying more than $100 for a picture. The comparatively high price of the talking films added to the expense the small exhibitor has to pay for equipping his theater for sound, changing the interior to better the acoustics, and other expenses has not added anything to the happiness or profits of the small house men.

"One of the peculiar things the second run house has to contend with is that it is the day of the week more than the picture that helps to pay the rent. Last Saturday we broke all house records with a $20 silent picture. It was not an exceptionally good film and had no unusual appeal that I could see. The first part of the week I showed an expensive talking picture and played to small audiences for two days. Down here the people do not look up a picture before going to the theater. They just drop in when the mood strikes them.

"I do not know what the outcome will be, but I am confident the talkie—even for the small, second run theaters—has come to stay, and if a theater is to keep its lights on it must go talkie."

Every Little Thing Counts.

Down here in the Bible belt of the south, where the motion picture censors are equipped with spy glasses, a "picture show" has to be located in the right part of town or it will play to empty seats. In Charlotte a theater that once ranked with the best, situated half a block from the main drag, is now standing with cobwebs over its tarnished gold front, all because its competitors moved to another street.

Every little damn has a meaning all its own in this community. Such infractions of polite taste are not permitted in the picture houses of this town nor other near-by southern cities. Pictures of sex life that come under the head of "Educational" are barred by the ministerial association unless the association itself sponsors their showing. There are no picture houses open on Sunday. Pictures in which drinking is a part of the scenery are looked upon with great disfavor by the very folks who do a bit of polite mint juleping or "corn" mixing when they entertain in their homes. They explain this by saying the children are in bed, fast asleep, when they entertain at home, but are wide awake when the drinking is done in the theaters.

My Best Joke

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Not the Whole Truth.

The child came to his mother in tears.

"O, mama," he confessed, "I broke a tile in the hearth and you'll punish me."

"Never mind, dear," the mother consoled. "But how did you come to do it?"

"I was pounding it with daddy's watch." M. L.

A Chicago Joke.

Teacher: "Willie you may define the word 'optimist'."

Willie: "An optimist is a Chicago gangster who buys a life time fountain pen." F. P.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

Best Movies

If you will tell us what movie, in your opinion, rates above all the others you've seen, and why this particular movie is deserving of praise, we'll pay $1 for your letter if we print it. Address Best Movies, Chicago Tribune.

Likes Fanny to Speak for Herself.

I thoroughly enjoyed the inimitable Fanny Brice in her talkie, "My Man." It was full of pathos and humor and most interesting from start to finish. It is a genuine treat to see and hear our beloved Fanny, who speaks for herself and needs no introduction.

W. F. D.

Historical Romance Scores.

The picture which stands out most vividly in my mind is Mary Pickford in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." The story itself was full of fun and based on history. Mary Pickford was her beautiful self put at best by gorgeous costumes and long, wavy hair. She was perfectly suited to the part and played it in a never to be forgotten way. I wish that picture would be repeated. E. B.

New York Bright with Weddings and Gay Parties

Winter Leave Taking Has Not Yet Begun.

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—[Special.]—Emily Thayer is back in town, but even her most intimate friends aren't at all sure that her Paris trip resulted in a divorce from Sigourney Thayer. Emily, most naturally, is the eccentric and almost famous Emily O'Neil Davies, who married Bill Vanderbilt and left him for the delights of Paris only to marry Sig Thayer upon securing her divorce from young W. H. Vanderbilt, due to a common interest in things theatrical and Bohemian.

At any rate, she is back, much sooner than any of us expected, and causing no end of comment at every first night, since even her unusually coiffed hair is only one of Emily's departures from the accepted style of things. She has been dashing about town all week, beaming at all and sundry, and acting the attentive acolyte to Elizabeth Marbury, who came in from Maine early in the week to prepare, one gathers, for the impending arrival of Elsie De Wolfe and her husband, Sir Charles Mendl.

Gertrude Lawrence Feted.

Town is lots of fun these days—and they are rather cool ones, too—for at last we are having the damp and somber days more natural to autumn. Every one is back, preparing either to stay—in case one has a daughter to be launched—or to depart for Europe or the south.

At the dignified Empire this last week, society gathered in force to welcome Gertrude Lawrence back to the stage, and it was, to say the least, an unusual gathering. Nowadays, the average opening night is far from a social success. There are few stars and fewer theaters that have any attraction for the notables. The old Empire is one, though I am certain it will soon fall to the building wreckers, since it is quite far downtown, almost the furthest south of the Broadway theaters. Here Ethel Barrymore used to hold forth, and dear old Henry Miller. And society still turns out when the occasion offers.

Gertrude Lawrence is one of the few actresses society likes. Much may be due to the fact that Gertrude is generally expected to become Mrs. Bertrand L. Taylor Jr. at some time or the other, though the romance between the two, which was generally suspected a year or so ago, seems to have died down.

At any rate, Bertrand gave a whooping party for Miss Lawrence to celebrate her return to the New York stage, and all the Palm Beach and "Chaino" set turned out to so honor her. The Thomas Robertsons were there, the Lucius Ordways, the Nelson Sloters, and the Condé Nasts.

Condé Nast Gives Party.

Incidentally, one of Condé's famous parties is scheduled for this evening. Prior to his marriage, Condé's mixed parties were the last word in New York gatherings. If ever there was anything like a salon in town, Condé's produced it. Every society notable, every charming young actress and aspiring author rallied 'round the festive board, and somewhere in the offing the beaming countenance of Frank Croninshield shone.

The party this evening will be one of the first since Condé's marriage, and from what I hear will be no different from the others. All the charming young people have been invited and are dashing about town to see who has been left out. So far I gather that every one will be present and we shall have the some familiar pleasure of braving a crush, where lion ignore of braving a crush, where lion seek a quiet corner with other lambs. But it is sure to be a success. Condé's parties always are.

Out-of-Town Wedding.

The most important wedding of the early autumn is not to be a town affair after all. When the engagement of Eleanor Langley, daughter of William Clarke Langley, and James H. Van Alen, son of Mrs. James Van Alen and great-grandson of the late Mrs. William Astor, was announced at Newport every one saw a huge wedding in town, with attendant policemen to keep the crowds back and society out in autumn finery.

However, both families decided that the wedding should not be too large an affair and as a result the afternoon of the 11th will see Eleanor become Mrs. Van Alen at the Church of the Advent at Westbury, L. I., with the reception following at the Langley estate there. The Rev. Dr. Richard Pope will perform the ceremony and Eleanor's only attendant will be her cousin, Laura Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Robinson.

Jimmie Van Alen, one of the Newport poloists, will have his brother, Bill, as best man, but as yet the ushers have not been chosen—a wise matter, since there will be only a few of them, and to be chosen one of Jimmie's ushers will be an accolade.

October Weddings.

There are, naturally, a score of other weddings to brighten October. On the 9th, Gertrude S. Watson, daughter of George D. Watson, will MISS BARBARA KING, MISS JEAN STEVENS, and MISS DOROTHY RANNEY.

When Chicago Was Young

Letters from Martha Freeman to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

By Herma Clark.

Dear Friend Julia:

We had a gay New Year yesterday, keeping open house, as did practically every family of our circle.

The front door opened and closed constantly, as the throngs of young men and elders, too, entered and departed. I think every one tried to show us special courtesy, since this is our first New Year's day here.

Father feels somewhat troubled by the conviviality of the holiday and says he doen't want another like it, for the younger men, particularly, partook too freely of the flowing bowl, and one or two were not improving spectacles after they had made a dozen calls. The Kentucky eggnog is far too cheering, they say. Kentuckians are notably hospitable, and their homes are the ones where every one likes to call, but alas! where it is easy to imbibe too much. Our Kentucky friends, who are among our most beloved here, say this themselves, and some of the ladies are talking of discontinuing the custom of New Year's calls.

By the way, here is a clipping from the Daily Democratic Press, about choosing a husband. I send it in case you may be needing to select from among your suitors.

"Never marry for wealth.

"Never marry a fop. One who carries a silver cane, and whose hands are loaded with rings will never make a good husband.

"Never marry a niggard.

"Never marry a stranger, or one whose character is not fully known or tested. Some females jump right into the fire with their eyes wide open."

The latter injunction is needed in a new city like this, for one finds many who have left their native cities for their health, as father says. So a girl needs to beware.

This has been an unusually cold winter, with deep snow. President Hitchcock of Amherst gave a talk at Metropolitan hall, our fine new hall, and the cold was so intense and the hall so poorly heated, the eminent geologist had to appear in his overcoat and leggings. He stayed at the Blairs' and, we met him at a small reception there.

I must close and go to bed, for I am sleepy, after the gayety of yesterday.

Lovingly your friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN.

Gayest Season in Years Just Around Corner

Opera Opening Calls Out Many Notables.

WHILE the new season has not yet reached that hectic stage where one engagement overlaps another, society's calendar for the coming week is pleasantly jotted with just enough diversions to keep every one busy and interested. The American Opera opening tomorrow night at the Majestic theater will be preceded by a number of dinner parties, among them one to be given by Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick for Gov. and Mrs. Emmerson, who are to be her guests at the opera.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris are also to give a dinner tomorrow at the Lake Shore Drive hotel for a group of opera devotees, including Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mr. and Mrs. Henery Field, Mrs. Francis Johnson, and Arthur Aldis. Among other boxholders for the opening are Mr. and Mrs. Laurance Armour, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. George Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Rawson.

The distinguished Indian potentate, the Maharajah of Kapurthala, who is to arrive in the city on Tuesday morning to visit Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, will be Mrs. Walter Borden's guest at dinner and at the performance of "Madame Butterfly" on Tuesday evening. The list of opera boxholders for the rest of the week includes Mr. and Mrs. Sewell Avery, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard A. Eckhart, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Howard, Mr. and Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Eames MacVeagh, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann, and Mr. and Mrs. George D. McLaughlin.

Wedding in University Chapel.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Walgreen, daughtef of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen, to Justin Dart, son of the Guy J. Darts of Hinsdale, will be solemnized on Wednesday evening at the University of Chicago chapel. The ceremony will be followed by a large reception at the South Shore Country club.

On the same evening the annual ball of the Evanston Smith College club will be held at the Evanston Country club. Miss Elizabeth and Miss Margaret Lee, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John H. S. Lee, are co-chairmen of the affair, the proceeds of which will go to the club's scholarship fund. Mrs. Kellogg Sherwood Platt is president of the organization, and among those who are assisting her in arrangements for the party are Miss Mart Barry, Mrs. Frederick Wolff and Mrs. Ross Byron.

Miss Wood's Debut.

On Saturday afternoon Miss Frances Ellington Wood, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood of Highland Park, is to make her bow to society at a reception to be given by her parents at their residence. Her attendants will include Miss Phoebe Logan, Miss Janet Kirk, Miss Anne Small, Miss Veronese Beatty, Miss Narcissa Swift, Miss Rosemary Lytton, Miss Barbara Poole, Miss Carol and Miss Emeline Bush and Miss Christobel Wheeler.

Mrs. Wood will be assisted by her elder daughter, Mrs. Edwin E. Tullis (Anne Wood).

Ex-Chicagoans Take Firm Root in Gotham

By Mme. X.

AS pleasant a mode of approach to a great metropolis as any this scribe has tried is the night boat from Cape Cod up the sound to lower New York. It is far better than the complicated railway journey via Boston or Providence, with the change to a late night train to Gotham, which means to the average passenger a restless few hours in a lower berth, with soot in the hair and a sense of fatigue at the journey's end.

On the boat one has a comfortable cabin to oneself, and is lulled by the soothing murmur of the waters outside. On waking, there is the matchless spectacle of that trip down the East river, round the city's southernmost tip and up to the docks at the Hudson river's lower end. Off Battery park to the southwest the Statue of Liberty stands on guard, torch lifted, an impressive figure in the morning mists, while nearby many boats, large and small, are swiftly plying their foaming routes up or down that great waterway. Truly it is an amazing panorama of one of the world's greatest cities that unrolls before the spectator. Those towers and "setbacks," those mighty monuments to the world's financial center, as seen with the rising sun behind them, are unforgettable.

Arriving early on a Sunday morning, that drive through lower New York's famous thoroughfares was a delicious experience. To gaze at Wall street and its adjacent thoroughfares all silent, unoccupied, mysteriously sweet, with the newborn sun just peeping slyly over their roofs, was like seeing J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, Barney Baruch, Thomas Lamont and all the rest of our great financiers in their downy couches fast asleep. For the nonce one lowly traveler owned lower New York and saw it in its moment of powerless unconsciousness. It gave quite an exquisite thrill.

New York Taxis.

Having commented a fortnight ago on Boston's street customs, manners and taxis, I venture to touch for an instant on those of New York. If any one feels that time is fleeting and that the hours and minutes go skipping by, I commend him or her to try to get anywhere in New York in a hurry. Time and again the passenger on wheels is held up at quiet corners waiting for the turn of the lights, with not a vehicle in sight going the opposite way.

In New York the north and south thoroughfares cost you two minutes and sometimes more, and two minutes is two centuries if there be nothing but those distant signals to stop you. Chicago's one minute halts are a blessing to the average traveler going from one place to another by motor or street car. New York's shortest stops are a minute and more, which is long, but endurable.

The one thing in New York that seems to a short pursed Chicagoan of moderate and accessible price are the public vehicles, taxis and street cars. The former are so cheap that I found myself taking one at every turn just to save money. If you can get a taxi for 15 cents instead of the 25 cents charged by Chicago cars, you've saved 10 cents. If you take lots of taxis every day you save almost enough to pay for your hotel accommodation.

New York taxis go up 5 cents at a jump. Chicago ones 10 cents a jump, and the jumps seem shorter than in New York. I felt there as if I rode miles for 35 cents. The result of this low cab tariff is the prevailing habit of New Yorkers to step into one of these public conveyances at every turn of the way, while in Chicago empty ones go slowly up and down our streets and avenues looking longingly for fares. Of course, it is all to the good for most of us Chicagoites that taxis are so expensive, for it makes for more walking, always promoting the health. Of all exercise there is none so good for one as a vigorous promenade. So here's hoping that Chicago taxis continue their high prices, though here's also hoping that the X. family can go to New York again soon just to ride miles and miles for 35 cents.

Popular Residence Districts.

New York is like us in one way—every one there of any kind of social aims and of even moderate means strives to live in one locality. If any one lives west of 5th avenue he or she doesn't mention it, or, if it is necessary to do so, explains why almost apologetically. Park avenue and adjacent streets are the popular residence districts, though some of the city's smartest folk live on the banks of the East river, near Sutton place, or else at what is called Turtle bay, also near the river. But Riverside drive, New York's most beautiful residential highway, is not chic, though many thousand people live there.

This question of locality did not prevent Miss Anne Morgan from deciding to put up her stunning and extraordinary American Woman's association club building at 373 West 57th street. This was the most interesting thing I saw in New York last week. It is the headquarters of this body of 5,000 American business women (the "Awas," they are called). The structure is the achievement of one mind, Miss Morgan's, with the aid of business men, architects, engineers and their ilk. To it she devoted years of her busy life. To it she brought the many talents she inherited from her father, the late J. Pierpont Morgan, the greatest financier of modern times, ranking with the most famous of all ages.

A Beautiful Building.

It is twenty-seven stories nigh. Its setback roofs of various heights provide five alluring open air roof gardens, charmingly equipped with chairs, tables and umbrellas. Indoors is accommodation for 1,350 women, each room with a bath, and each room a delight to the eye, furnished in charming taste, with deliciously comfortable beds, easy chairs, gay chintzes, writing desks and commodious closets.

There are any number of reception rooms, all delightfully furnished. There are five dining rooms where the tables looked as attractive as any in a private house. The library, a large and stately room, is paneled in oak and is one of the most beautiful rooms I have ever seen. Every chair (and how comfortable they all looked) has a good looking reading lamp standing behind it. There is an excellent collection of books at the disposition of members. A spacious and handsome ballroom holding, seated, a thousand guests is one attraction. It is lovely in coloring and most elegant in air.

One of the most enchanting things in this great structure is the large central open air court on the main floor. Surrounded on three sides by the soaring red brick façade of the club, it is open to the south whence come, on fine days, floods of sunshine. It has a fountain in the middle surrounded by thick shrubbery and a magnificent square of blossoming plants that is changed each month. When I was there a parade of gorgeous golden coxcombs was growing in a mighty thicket around the central plaza. Pretty tables and comfortable chairs are set about under big, colorful umbrellas. It is an alluring place in which to sit and receive friends or have tea served on a fine day.

Efficiently Managed.

The whole place is run so as to give the greatest amount of comfort to residents. No hotel is more businesslike or more competently managed. Miss Morgan is president of the club and has her office in the building, a pleasant room which is the center of the enterprise. There she receives reports, gives directions and keeps her hand on the helm of what is a unique and valuable institution. A big brain designed it and it looks as if a big heart were its mainspring.

There is a fine and well equipped gymnasium and, in the basement, one of the most alluring swimming pools I ever saw. Instead of planting it in a white tiled setting, suggestive of the standard bathroom, the pale green tank is set in the spacious depths of a red tiled cavern, red of that charming hue of old English country houses, a little faded or mellowed by time.

In the furnishing and adornment of this great modern palace Miss Morgan called to her aid her friend, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt. This noted social leader directed the work, as well as designed it, and is responsible for its elegance, its correct and charming taste, its look of gayety and friendliness. The occupants of such a place cannot help developing a new standard of what is desirable in surroundings, and must take pride in living in such a competently beautiful setting.

Miss Morgan herself returned to New York last week after a summer spent in Europe. Her first call was at the "Awa" clubhouse, where she was welcomed with enthusiasm and found plenty to do in catching up with its summer doings.

Requirements for Membership.

To qualify for active membership in the club one has to be 30 years of age or over actively engaged in business or a profession within fifty miles of New York. For the junior membership the candidate is required to be between the ages of 16 and 30 years, also actively in a profession or business. Out of town membership includes the same requirements as to business or profession of women fifty miles or more outside of New York. Besides these there is an associate, and also an honorary membership, one distinguished woman from each state and one from the District of Columbia, being eligible for the last named.

Nor is it a nunnery, a home guarded from social contacts where the women are supposed to be sequestered from the opposite sex. Residents may receive and entertain guests up to midnight, and for this purpose there are both dining rooms and reception rooms, where one would be proud to receive the most fastidious acquaintance. If a member have a sitting room she may also receive her men friends there up to midnight.

No wonder that it is always filled and that its members have to engage rooms long ahead. Miss Morgan may well look with pride upon her remarkable achievement.

Looking Up Ex-Chicagoans.

Looking up ex-Chicagoans, old friends living in Gotham nowadays, I found that Abram Poole, one of New York's well known artists, was about to visit his sister, Mrs. Leverett Thompson, at her Lake Forest residence. He and Mrs. Poole were out in the wide open spaces of the west early last summer with a gay party of New York friends.

Another well known Chicagoan with whom I chatted was Julian Mason, managing editor of the New York Evening Post. He is becoming an entrenched Gothamite, but still remembers the town of his birth. Mrs. Mason has been a visitor to Chicago several times these last few months, brought here by the serious illness of her brother, Mr. Grey, who has been a patient at St. Luke's hospital for some time.

Through Mr. Mason I heard of what looks like a remarkable fusion of three great newspapers. It seems that at Foxcroft, that famous educational institution in Virginia where the horse is a feature in the curriculum, Miss Barbara Mason, daughter of the above mentioned managing editor of New York's chief evening sheet; Miss Sarah Sirisbane, daughter of Arthur Brisbane, the Hearst papers' most conspicuous contributor, and Miss Josephine Patterson, daughter of Capt. J. M. Patterson, grandson of Joseph Medill, are to room together.

Doesn't this suggest one more of those amazing amalgamations which are fast turning our leading industries into one vast and efficient machine? At any rate, there these three exceedingly bonnie and charming maidens are brought together by chance for those final years of schooling which end in social debuts and young ladyhood.

Having a spare half hour between appointments in New York's downtown district, the writer betook herself by taxi to Battery park and once more visited that fascinating aquarium that sits on the island's tip end. It's a great place. The sea lions were croaking hoarsely to the multitude, probably emulating Jenny Lind, to whose memory a bronze portrait tablet was set in the aquarium's wall in 1920 to commemorate the century since she sang on that very spot. What a changed world she would see could she return!

An aquarium is a fascinating spot to everybody, young or old, rich or poor, wise or foolish. The superintendent told me that over two million people a year visited the place. They were there in crowds, though it was a Monday morning. They hung over big open tanks where turtles slumbered, pelicans and gulls mused; alligators looked cynically at what world they saw. The multitude also stood long in front of the wall tanks where the water fizzled up and the sun sizzled down on the strange, deep sea finny creatures floating lazily and aimlessly about. I met there for the first time the toadfish, as ugly a creature as the Lord ever made. I also saw there that X-word fish, the gar, as well as a whole lot of that most used of all X-word puzzle three letters, the slithery, slimy eel. He was there by the inch, by the foot, by the yard. Personally, I wouldn't want so much as a centimeter of him.

The visit showed me how popular such an institution is. I inquired as to salt water supply there, having been told here that south sea fish needed south sea water, while those from the arctic required water from the polar seas. "Not at all," said the man in charge. "Ours have only such sea water as we get right here."

This lays the bogie of those long trains bearing briny water from every sea coast which has been prophesied as being necessary for the welfare of the denizens that will occupy the Shedd aquarium.

We Demand Vocations.

Another former Chicagoan whom I saw in New York was Mrs. Eleanor Hall Winterbotham, who at one time was one of the most popular of Chicago's hostesses. She seemed in fine health and spirits. The recent marriage of her lovely daughter, Miss Louise Winterbotham, to young Schiefflin of Morristown and New York had left her somewhat breathless.

She has, like so many other women of keen wits and long acquaintance with social life, gone into a business, more as an occupation than because of financial stress. The one thing that the modern American woman cannot stand is to have no occupation. Departed into the limbo of vanished custom is the idle female who sits at home and curls her hair and polishes her nails, waiting for something to happen. A career, or at least a stimulating occupation that shows results from week to week, is the sine qua non of my sex today. It is developing a race of amazons that will make their sisters of Atlantis seem like pikers.

Apropos of marriages, I was interested in the manner in which a well known divorced couple solved the difficulties of sending out invitations to their daughter's wedding. It was a new form to me. These went out in this way:

"Mr. John Smith and
invite you to the wedding of their daughter,"

and so on. Mr. Smith had married another. If Mrs. Smith had also married would the invitations have read, "Mr. Smith and Mrs. Robinson invite you to the marriage of their daughter"? It might look odd to people not especially well enough acquainted with the situation to know that Mrs. Smith had married again. We're working out these complicated situations of modern life as best we may.

Two Important Dinners.

Returning to Chicago at what, in newspaper parlance, is known as "the zero hour"—namely: the moment when the Sunday paper goes to press—the writer has no time to take stock of local news further than to note two events of superimportance, the first being the two important dinners given last week for our distinguished fellow citizen and congresswoman, Mrs. Medill McCormick, and the other the immediate début of the American Opera company under important social auspices.

On Monday evening Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Lamont gave a dinner for Mrs. McCormick at their Lake Forest mansion, a handsome abode on the outskirts of that village. The following night Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann, also of Lake Forest, likewise entertained at dinner in her honor at their charming mansion near the lake. While these occasions were of a purely social nature, they gave Mrs. McCormick an opportunity to see the reaction of her friends to her recent announcement of her candidacy for the Republican nomination for senator.

She is probably the most conspicuous woman in our national legislature. She was born and bred in the political life of this country. Through her late father, the distinguished Mark Hanna, and her late husband, the equally distinguished Medill McCormick, she has had an acquaintance with the workings of political parties and of the underlying currents that guide our ship of state which stands her in good stead today and makes her peculiarly eligible for any national office for which she presents herself, aside from her own innate abilities.

She is without question better fitted by tradition, training and inherent talents for such an important position than any other woman in public life today. She is a brilliant speaker, a good debater, an excellent mixer, an indefatigable worker. She understands the point of view of the man in the street, the woman in a job. Society with a large S means little or nothing to her. She has never sought it; in fact, she has rhunned it as much as a woman can who has lots of devoted friends.

It was this close attention to her chosen calling that gained for her during the elections of last November the largest vote that was polled by any candidate in Illinois. This vote did not come from the plutocrats [between you and me they're a little afraid of her], nor from the fashionable society leaders; it came from the great mass of downstate voters, fine men and women, who know her as a fellow being who understands their problems, be they of farm or village. If to her downstate vote can be added that of her fellow citizens in this great burg of ours, Mark Hanna's daughter and Medill McCormick's widow will be the Republican senatorial nominee at the next election.

Opera in English.

The other notable event which greeted this columnist on arrival was the enthusiasm of the promoters of the American Opera company. I can see my friends, Samuel Insull and Louis Eckstein, wondering how it was done, how all that money was so easily and swiftly raised, wondering wherein their two very grand operas, the Chicago Civic and Ravinia grand opera had failed to secure their much needed funds. Some of the zealous support given this quite new and problematic musical enterprise would have been like manna in the wilderness to them.

Let no one ever twit Chicago with being a howling wilderness of materialism. Show me any other great city that has three grand opera companies. Not New York, not Paris, not Berlin, not Munich, not Rome. Never are the throbbing rhythms of Verdi, Gounod, Puccini absent from our Chicago ears. We may not sing the second verse of "The Star Spangled Banner," but we can hum "Carmen" through from beginning to end. We may not be particularly up on modern philosophy, but we know a tenor from a baritone, a soprano from a contralto. If the bass drum sounds too loud, we wince, or if the first violin squeaks we shiver.

The American Opera company makes its debut for its fortnight's season tomorrow at the Majestic theater. It had a successful four days in Milwaukee last week. To be on hand the opening night there a gay party of its principal promoters went up to Milwaukee by special train last Monday. They dined on the train and were on hand when the curtain went up on Puccini's "Madame Butterfly."

Among those present were the Benjamin Affecks, the Walter A. Strongs, the Herbert Hydes, the Morris Rosenfelds, the Howard Taylors, the Misdames Waller Borden, Harry Atwood, Ethel R. Dunham, Ira Nelson Morris, Charles S. Clark, Miss Frieda Felix, the Messrs. Charles S. Petersen, Howard Gillett, Eames MacVeagh, Guy Hardy, Arthur Perrow, Arthur Bissell, and Dr. O. C. Foreman.

I think the American Opera company is a fine enterprise. Opera in English may make a great hit with the multitude. It may, in time, become the custom in this country, but I hope with all my heart that its advent just at this moment of the year will not militate against the brilliancy and the splendid reception which the Chicago public owes the Civic Opera company when it opens here in its imposing home a few weeks hence. Those who have seen the Civic Opera house say that it is beautiful and sumptuous, a splendid setting for one of Chicago's most distinguished and important institutions.

League of Women Voters Plans Convention

Place, Evanston, and Time Is Set for November

New Officers Will Be Elected.

By Roberta Nangle.

THE Illinois League of Women Voters, a wide awake organization, seldom lacking in current dramatic interest, offers for the coming season a program which should appeal to all women desirous of enlightenment on state and national politics. Plans are being made now for the state convention, to be held on Nov. 19, 20, and 21, at the Orrington hotel in Evanston. Cook county has not been hostess to the state leagues for two seasons, last year's convention having been held in Moline and that of 1927 in Peoria.

New officers will be elected at this assembly, and Mrs. J. Hewitt Rosenstell (Bertha Bidwell) of Freeport, who has been president for the last two years, will give the reins of leadership to her successor. Mrs. Rosenstell has lately been appointed director of the fourth region of the national league, a position formerly held by Mrs. William G. Hibbard of Winnetka.

Rebecca West said some time ago in an article in Harper's magazine that "in an otherwise politically arid country the League of Women Voters now blossoms from coast to coast." It will be proven at the convention that the league has continued to blossom, for today Illinois alone boasts of some sixty organizations, twenty-four of which are in Cook county and thirty-six outside. Five of these are student leagues.

Works for Unity.

To unify the work of the twenty-four Cook county leagues, a Cook county organization was formed with Mrs. Walter L. Benson of Winnetka as president. The principal function of this overhead organization will be to knit together for greater effectiveness the work of the scattered leagues on matters for county action. All of the local leagues are to hold citizenship schools this year on the subject of local government in the county. The Cook county league has become affiliated with the Chicago Government Planning association, which is headed by Prof. A. R. Hatton of Northwestern university.

The downtown forum of the league in Chicago, which its president, Mrs. W. A. Roberts, calls "the loud speaker of the league," has always held meetings on the second Saturday of each month. The opening session will be held next Saturday, with Prof. Leonard White of the University of Chicago speaking on "Reorganization of Federal Government." The annual all day conference on Latin America will be held on Nov. 9, with speakers including Prof. H. W. Dodd of Princeton, former electoral adviser in Nicaragua; Prof. Chester Lloyd Jones of Wisconsin, formerly commercial attaché at Havana and Paris, and Prof. Jesse F. Reeves of the University of Michigan.

School of Foreign Affairs.

In addition to these meetings the forum has sponsored a week end school of foreign affairs, with all day meetings the last Saturday of each month. The work of the tenth assembly of the League of Nations will be the subject of the October meeting. Mrs. William G. Hibbard, chairman of the department of international cooperation, and Miss Julia Stebbins, secretary of the Cook County league, will be among the speakers.

As an opening gun in the coming primaries the league printed in the September issue of the Illinois Voter the voting record of the members of the fifty-sixth general assembly on some eighteen important measures. The other numbers during the year will carry information on the issues as they develop during the campaign, culminating in a searchlight on those running for office in the form of candidates' records to be printed in the April number.

Among the league's other publications is the 1929 edition of the Illinois Voters' handbook, which recently came off the press. This is the seventh edition and, so far as is known, no other text reflects so promptly the changes made by the Illinois general assembly. Its 142 pages summarize the setup of the government agencies in Illinois and make it a ready reference book.

League Supports Two Bills.

Active work will be done this year by leagues throughout the country in support of several measures coming before congress this fall or winter. Among them are the Jones-Cooper bill, successor to the Sheppard-Towner act, which concerns the continuance of federal aid for maternity and infancy work, and the lame duck amendment, introduced by Senator Norris and indorsed by the league as a means of promptly putting into effect the will of the country as revealed by an election.

Taking precedence over other state measures this year will be the educational work preliminary to the referendum for women to serve on juries, which will come to a vote in November, 1930. The league will do its utmost to promote discussion throughout the state on this question. Radio talks on the league's legislative program and on current public questions are presented over W-G-N on Mondays and Wednesdays at 2:30 o'clock.

CLUB ETHICS - - - - - By Maude Swalm Evans

"YOUR program for the year looks pretty flim to me," the secretary told the program chairman when the two met for the first time after vacation. "How do you like working all summer while the rest of us are playing?"

"I didn't mind it. I had to stay in town most of the time, anyway, and I'd just as soon be busy—and I was, as the members of my committee were never all here at one time. But, let me tell you, I never had any idea of the things that can bob up to bother and beset a program chairman."

"She has to be a diplomat," declared the secretary, "for it's just as necessary at times to keep things off the programs as to put things on."

"Such as advertising schemes and undesirable propaganda and self-aggrandizement," enumerated the program chairman; "and it makes it so much harder to handle when some club official or prominent member not on the committee insists on having a hand in the making of the program."

"That's where the diplomacy comes in, and a white lie or two, maybe, if necessary to keep harmonious relations," observed the secretary.

"And you have to guess at what the club wants, and to have variety and balance and to keep within your allowance, and then hope that each day's program will go off as advertised."

"And if something happens over which you have no control and changes your program at the last minute, some of the dear girls will ask 'What's the matter with our program chairman, anyway?' I've been there, so I know," rejoined the secretary.

"If only every member could have the expereince!" wished the program chairman. "Doing things yourself is bound to give an understanding and an appreciation of the other fellow's difficulties."

Question.

"What proportion of the members should be behind a club in a big undertaking? L. P."

Reply.

All, if posible. Anyway, a big majority, and every member doing what she can do best.

Reitzel Shows Western Landscapes

He Is One of Three Artists at City's Galleries

Andrene Paints Children Sympathetically.

On the edge of the world
Where the hills are higher,
The air is clearer,
The clouds are freer—
There would I be.
There would I be
With easel and horse,
A soaring eagle
To shape my course—
Over the world
And out of the world—
On the very edge
Where the stars in flight
Shrink and flutter into the night
And the rising sun
Is a fresh romance
And I am a knight,
And my brush, a lance.
There would I be—
With God, a lake, a cloud, and a tree.
E. J.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

MARQUES E. REITZEL, who is professor of art at Rockford college, is one of three artists to open the new season at the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan boulevard. The exhibition is made up of western landscapes by Mr. Reitzel; modern paintings, in the French blurred fashion of a decade ago, by Camille Andrene; and landscapes of the southwest by Gerald Cassidy.

Marques Reitzel has exhibited in Chicago before. He has won prizes and favorable notice in a number of exhibitions, exhibitions at the Chicago Art institute and in other galleries. His work is a personal matter. He paints in a strictly independent way, going straight for the meat of his subject with a brush as incapable of subtleties as a butcher's cleaver and yet as able to strike a glorious free blow as is also that unromantic tool on occasions. Mr. Reitzel sees the world without shadows. He sees it in block form, in masses. Each feature of a landscape has its own definite outline, its own definite circumferences. He is just gradually permitting sky liberties. In his present exhibit he shows two canvases where the sky is as tenderly veiled with clouds that missily break away, as any conservative critic could reasonably demand.

Reitzel Breaks with Past.

In fact in his current show he breaks with several of the more severe tenets of his creed. He no longer plays blocks with his pictures. They build themselves without his conscious help. He is giving his color freer rein and is letting the several parts of his picture overlap. Reitzel has always been remarkable for the cheerful quality of his color. His paintings possess enormous enthusiasm and swing. They take you quivering into a realm of adventure with keen relish in the wind and a biting edge to the sun. He has not lost that. His color is still resilient and penetrating and vital.

His sense of composition has developed during the last year, also his consideration of values. A cloud that a year ago was like a marble slab across the sky, this year is really a cloud, an intangible, delicate, shimmery mixture of moisture and color that a wind can vanquish, without being a hurricane. His sense of color and the feeling that permeates his color, has done the painter good service in his approach to the west. His paintings carry the message of adventure and romance, caught from those high tops and green pines and blue waters, to his audience.

The background of the large canvas, the only one not strictly of the west, the canvas in which a farmer youth leads two horses to drink, is extremely beautiful and extremely satisfying. The figure of the boy is less satisfying. In fact in it may be seen the wooden virtues from which Mr. Reitzel's talent is receding. The neck and head of the unfortunate lad are as set as though trapped in plaster of Paris. His body is more mobile. The horses are outlined with extreme definiteness but they are impossible, as horses. Behind the figures the artist has permitted himself to be free and the result is a curious contrast with the qualities of the background overshadowing the clearer strokes of the foreground.

The group of paintings are on the whole unusually fine. They are keen, quick, virile, youthful and wholesome. You cannot be deaf to their appeal, nor blind to their beauty. Mr. Reitzel is to be congratulated on a substantial advance in his art.

Andrene Best in Figure Studies.

In the farther gallery the beautiful landscapes of the southwest by Gerald Cassidy are across from the slightly artificial and muddied paintings by Camille Andrene. There is so much to be said about the Cassidy paintings, I will reserve them till another Sunday; the pictures by Camille Andrene can be reviewed at shorter length. They are in the French fashion of some years ago. The trees in the landscapes are a fusing of soft and brighter greens, rounded clumps of branches here and there making a stand as a single tree. The landscapes look as one might imagine a picture would look washed with green and allowed to stay in the rain for an hour or more. The French, some of them, did this type of painting some years ago.

Miss Andrene is more fortunate in her figure studies. She shows one striking realization of a little girl, bored to death with the fact of her portrait and mad to be off at her play, that is remarkable in its delineation of character. You feel the child's untrained spirit, her rebellion, through the pigment. You know she is a saucy child, bold, impudent, quick, but withal honest and sweet and sound as any young thing caught in the wild.

Two other studies of children are sympathetic. The study of a nude figure is more in the manner of a school problem and a falling back to the French tradition. All in all, Miss Andrene could do with a cold wind sweeping her studio. That distressing sense of futility and repetition which now holds her work in leash might yield to a flood of sunshine and wind and cold water. To get life and light into her canvases any amount of atmosphere should be sacrificed. Drawn blinds, incense, low voices, pose—a mass of artificial restraint—should be thrown overboard and a keen sense of truth and commonplace replace them, and then we should probably see paintings which would surprise us, for undoubtedly Miss Andrene has a delicacy of touch and a fond use of color which could carry her far.

These exhibitions will run to Oct. 26.

Notes of Art and Artists.

The Arts club is again open, but no date has been set for the first exhibition nor news of it advanced.

The Hoosier Salon Patrons association announces the formal opening of the fall exhibition season at the Hoosier Art gallery, 211 West Wacker drive, on Thursday, Oct. 10, at 2:30 o'clock, with a memorial exhibition of the works of the late Theodore C. Steele.

John David Broin has been entrusted with the commission for the sculpture to adorn the Joslyn Memorial building in Omaha. The building is being built by the Society of Liberal Arts of Omaha, Neb., and will house the Art institute and symphony orchestra of Omaha. The building is the gift of Mrs. Sarah H. Joslyn in memory of her husband. John McDonald and Alan McDonald of Omaha are the architects, and John David Brein, the Chicago artist, is the sculptor. The building is to be of Georgia pink marble, and will cost three million dollars. Mr. Brein is calling his sculptural embellishments "Episodes of Western Legends and Hero Tales in the Making." The various panels and parts will deal with the adventurous growth of the west.

The department of museum instruction of the Art institute is offering a new series of lectures in the history and appreciation of art, as well as sketch classes for non-professionals. The lectures take the form of weekly classes, and may be entered at any time without entrance requirements. They are intended for the layman, to help him cultivate his ability to see and appreciate beauty. Thereby his enjoyment of art will also be increased. The lectures have just started, and are given by Miss Helen Mackenzie, Miss Dorothy Mullen, Miss Mildred Chamberlain, Mrs. Stevens, and Miss Helen Parker.

For further information about the classes application may be made to Miss Helen Parker at the Art institute.

In the J. W. Young galleries there is current a delicious exhibit of pictures by Jessie Willcox Smith. There are twenty-seven paintings shown. They deal in the most delightful fashion with the everyday life of little children. Probably there is no one who does not know the Jessie Willcox Smith illustrations for children, and pictures for and of children as done in the many reproductions that are seen wherever children may be found. These new paintings are equally fascinating. The exhibition will continue through Oct. 12.

In the Marshall Field art gallery there is current an extremely fascinating exhibition. The exhibit is of carved figures in wood, colored, by Carl Hallsthammar. Hallsthammer has shown his clever pieces of carving at the Art institute and at the Swedish club and in numberless exhibits and he never ceases to be a most welcome exhibitor. His figures are full of human qualities. They are sad and they are gay; pathetic and roisterous. Humor predominates. Several of his carvings are owned by the children's museum in the Art institute. They are priceless. Hallsthammar began carving at the age of seven and his unique talent has been increasing ever since. He came to America three years ago from his birthplace in Wasteras, Sweden, near Stockholm. No one who enjoys a clever and good thing can afford to miss his exhibit.

"JOHN HUNTER," by Sir Henry Raeburn, R. A. This is one of the magnificent Eighteenth Century English portraits to be found in the exhibition which opened last Tuesday in the Anderson galleries. The exhibit is rich with rare and valuable paintings. It affords a most unusual opportunity for acquaintance with the best work of such men as Raeburn, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Copley, Beachey, Thomas Hudson and Richard Wilson. The exhibition will continue some weeks.

Rusty Buckles Match Bermuda Sunburn

HAMILTON, Bermuda.—(AP)—Everything made of metal rusts in Bermuda owing to the salt air.

One recent visitor found her silver shoe buckles turned to a charming bronze shade when she took them from her clothes closet. Her buckles, however, matched the sunburn on her arms and she was pleased with the combination.

Sunday Evening Club Today Begins Twenty-third Year

By the Rev. John Evans.

THE Chicago Sunday Evening club—an outstanding contribution of the city to the religious world—opens its doors for its twenty third season tonight in Orchestra hall. Clifford W. Barnes, the president of the club, has announced that the Rt. Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson, Episcopal bishop of Chicago, is the first of a long list of recognized religious leaders of all faiths who will appear as the club's guest preachers.

The general policy of the club is to call its preachers from other cities rather than those who may be heard regularly in Chicago pulpits. In calling Bishop Anderson to open the sessions tonight, however, the leaders of the club state that the bishop stands among the few religious leaders of Chicago whose leadership over many years have lifted them into a field where they are recognized as institutions as well as rich personalities.

The club has had the leadership of business men who, during the quarter of a century of the club's existence, have extended their influence to the point where they are reckoned with in the markets of the world. Perhaps no other Americans are better known in Europe than David R. Forgan, George M. Reynolds, James Simpson, and John W. O'Leary, men who, since the early days of the club, have been on its board of trustees.

Other pioneers in the organization were the late John G. Shedd, A. C. Bartlett, William C. Boyden, and Frank Armstrong. During the last two years some of the younger men have been drafted into the work, such as Edward L. Ryerson Jr., who is a member of the executive committee. James Ward Seabury, the new president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, was elected as a trustee of the club last season.

President Barnes, who returned from a trip abroad last week, stated that while he was in London he found that the idea of the club is reaching that city. In preparing his program for the coming season of the club he said that leaders of all faiths have been called. Among them are such men as Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Robert W. Speer, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Bishop William F. McDowell, Dean Charles R. Brown, and other widely known men. Mr. Barnes' own talks at the 7 o'clock services will be on the subject "Tales of the Road."

An interesting development has been the number of smaller Sunday evening clubs which have been organized in Chicago suburbs, patterned after this parent organization, such as the Wilmette Sunday Evening club, La Grange Sunday Evening club, and those of Downers Grove, Rogers Park, River Forest, and others. Citizens of Memphis, St. Louis, Cleveland, and Cincinnati have called on Mr. Barnes and with his help secured material for developing similar clubs in their cities. Last season a pamphlet was sent to the club office from India showing that a former Chicago citizen had started a Sunday evening club there for the Christian students, travelers, and others interested. A flourishing "branch" is the Northeast Harbor Sunday Evening club, which Mr. Barnes conducts in Maine during the summer months.

The Very Rev. Vincent M. Kienberger of St. Dominic's, Detroit, will preach at the solemn mass at the Holy Name cathedral, State and Superior streets, at 11 o'clock this morning, when the solemnity of the feast of the rosary is observed.

The Holy Name cathedral men's choir and boy choristers, directed by the Rev. Philip F. Mahoney, will render the ordinary of the mass, which will be Pietro Yon's "Missa Solemnis." The proper of the mass will be chanted by the Quigley seminary plain chant choir, directed by the Rev. Edwin V. Hoover. The soloists will be Franz Schultz, Earle Alexander, Rosario Lombardo, and Edgar Strong.

During the month of October, which is dedicated to the rosary, there will be special devotions in the cathedral every evening at 8 o'clock.

The feast of the rosary is observed in Catholic churches on the first Sunday of October every year. The observance dates back to 1571, when a Turkish attack threatened Christian Europe. The Catholics of Rome had recourse to the rosary devotion, and to their prayers they attributed Don Juan of Austria's victory over the Turkish forces at Lepanto. Pope Pius V. then ordered that a commemoration of the rosary be made on the first Sunday of October.

Sergt. Alvin C. York, whom Gen. Pershing called "the greatest civilian soldier of the world war," is coming to Oak Park Sunday afternoon, Oct. 13. He comes as a guest of all the churches of Oak Park, and will speak at the First Methodist church at 3:30 p. m.

---

The Rev. H. W. Reed, for twenty years national secretary of the Baptist Young People's union, died in Belvidere Wednesday following a stroke of paralysis. He was formerly a pastor in churches at Waukegan, Austin, Rock Island, Belvidere, and La Crosse, Wis.

---

Every one has his day at the Saron Evangelical Lutheran church, Shakespeare avenue and Richmond street, so next Sunday, Oct. 6, is the "Older Folks" day. Members of the church have volunteered their machines and services to transport the residents of the Swedish Old People's home in Evanston and on Stony Island avenue to church, where a Swedish service will be held at 3 p. m., to be followed by a luncheon at 4:15 p. m.

---

The Park View Lutheran church at Monticello and Elston avenues has just wrecked its church building, which was built in 1910 and rebuilt in 1916, and is about to begin the erection of a beautiful new church. The Rev. M. E. Fretheim, who has served this church since it was organized, twenty-two years ago, announces that the spacious and beautiful Murphy auditorium at Central Park and Grace street, has been secured for Sunday mornings during the entire church building period.

---

The Women's Missionary federation of the Chicago circuit, Norwegian Lutheran Church of America, will meet at First Lutheran church, Fullerton and Ballou streets, on Oct. 15.

Miss Clara Kildahl of Minneapolis, director of the home finding department, will speak at the afternoon and evening sessions of this convention. Miss Kildahl will speak on the work at the Lutheran Girls' home and on the church's work for orphans.

NEWS OF CHURCHES

BISHOP CHARLES P. ANDERSON.

The opening speaker of the twenty-third season of the Chicago Sunday Evening club is the Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago. Bishop Anderson has led the Episcopal diocese of Chicago for thirty years, and is the vice chairman of the House of Bishops of the Episcopal church.

---

The Englewood Swedish Baptist church, 59th street and Emerald avenue, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 9, will celebrate its forty-fourth anniversary and welcome the Rev. F. C. Hamlin as permanent pastor of the church. The Rev. Mr. Hamlin has served the church as temporary pastor since May 1, succeeding the Rev. F. Linden, who at that time retired. The Rev. Mr. Hamlin has served the following churches: The Third Swedish Baptist church of Chicago, the Swedish Baptist church of Berwyn, the Second Swedish Baptist church of Chicago, the First Swedish Baptist church of St. Paul.

The ladies of the churches in the north suburban towns are holding a luncheon conference at Wilmette Congregational church on Tuesday, Oct. 8, at 12 noon. The speakers will be Dr. Herbert L. Willett, pastor of Kenilworth Union church, Mrs. Theodore Robinson, vice president Chicago council of social agencies, and Mrs. Minnie M. Chapman, general superintendent of the Woman's Church federation protectorate. Mrs. George H. Engelhart of Glencoe will preside. All who are interested in girls' protective work are invited to attend.

The thirty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Luther league in Chicago will be celebrated at a banquet Wednesday evening at the Knickerbocker hotel. The league was founded by a handful of people, some of whom will be present at the banquet. The total enrollment of the league in Chicago is now well above the 1,500 mark.

Among the charter members who will speak at the banquet are the Rev. Frank Jensen, pastor of the Mount Zion Lutheran church, 81st and May streets; the Rev. John J. Clemens of Aurora, and C. J. Driever, C. T. A. Anderson, one of the earliest members of the league and a past national president, will speak of the early days of the organization.

The speaker of the evening will be the Rev. Rudolph G. Schultz, executive secretary of the Luther league of Ohio. Mrs. Minnie Peterson will act as toastmistress.

The Rt. Rev. Charles E. Woodcock, bishop of Kentucky, will conduct a preaching mission at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church, 6720 Stewart avenue, beginning Oct. 9, and continuing until the 16th. This was announced by the rector of St. Bartholomew's, the Rev. Howard R. Brinker.

---

Two well known Episcopal bishops will be guest preachers in Chicago churches today. The Rt. Rev. Theodore N. Morrison, bishop of Iowa, will preach at the Cathedral shelter, Washington and Peoria streets, and the Rt. Rev. William P. Remington, bishop of eastern Oregon, will occupy the pulpit at St. Chrysostom's, 1424 Dearborn parkway. Bishop Morrison was for many years the rector of the Church of the Epiphany before he became bishop of Iowa.

---

The annual fall meeting of the Montgomery County Council of Religious Education will be held at the Evangelical Lutheran church at Irving, Oct. 11. All churches will participate.

Besides several ministers, George Bernie of Jacksonville, general secretary of the young people's department, and the Rev. Dr. Pontius, pastor of the Jacksonville Christian church, will be here as the principal speakers.

The Rev. Melbourne P. Boynton, D. D., will return from his summer vacation and be in his pulpit next Sunday morning, Oct. 6. This occasion will mark the commencement of his thirty-third year of consecutive service as the pastor of the Woodlawn Baptist church.

---

The Chicago Ethical society will begin its forty-seventh year's work with its service at the Studebaker theater next Sunday morning. Dr. Horace J. Bridges, who has recently returned from a European trip, will preach on "The Myth of the Fall of Man."

Druses Refuse to Fight in Palestine

DAMASCUS, Syria.—(AP)—Religious, political, and financial arguments by prominent Arabs from all parts of the Moslem world failed to convince Soltan Altrache, forceful leader of the Druses, who gave the French such a hectic three years of fighting, that it was his duty to battle the British in Palestine.

Emissaries crossed the Syrian desert to the Hauran mountains, where Soltan found haven after defeat by the French in 1927; sheiks came from Transjordania, and some even traveled from Morocco, but to all offers of money, power, and eternal bliss the hard boiled chief turned a deaf ear.

"The Druses fight for freedom, not for cash or promises," Soltan replied.

become the bride of John Thomas Scully at the Pake Lane. Knowlton L. Ames Jr. will come from Chicago to be best man for young Scully and the other attendants, both male and female, will be chosen from classmates of both the bride and bridegroom.

Yesterday Elizabeth Fleming, daughter of Henry S. Fleming, became the bride of Ralph Emerson Stone, the son of F. Conduit Stone, in the chapel of St. Thomas' church.

At the same time, far up in Mamaroneck, at St. Thomas' there, Eleanor Lee Flagg became Mrs. William Moffat Bramwell. Eleanor is the daughter by a former marriage of Mrs. C. Douglass Green, while young Bramwell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bramwell of New York.

Another October wedding, to take place on the 22d, will be that of Jane Shonnard, daughter of Mrs. Joyce Shonnard, and Geoffrey McNair Gates, son of Mrs. George Stevens of Elyria, O., which will take place in St. Bartholomew's church, with a reception to follow at Sherry's.

Debutantes in Swarms.

You note, incidentally, that I haven't said a word about the debutantes. I avoid them advisedly, since they continue to add to their ranks until it looks as if the record will be exceeded this winter. They are under foot everywhere, dashing to the photographers, and the dressmakers, and where not. One meets them—or rather—hears them at the Ritz and the St. Regis at luncheon and they fairly mob the matinées.

Yesterday and Wednesday saw the autumn meeting at Bowman Park, in Rye, of the Westchester-Biltmore Steeplechase association.

Luncheon Served in Tent.

You may be sure it was decidedly English. County society from Westchester in New York and Fairfield in Connecticut was most widely represented. Luncheon was served in a huge tent alongside the track, and the autumn setting, despite the coolness of the weather, was a riot of color. The 7th regiment band played on both days and on Saturday the gray of West Point was present in the form of a squadron of cadets.

Among those who had boxes, turning out in the roughest of colorful tweeds and cheviots, were Mr. and Mrs. Rufus W. Peckham, Mr. and Mrs. Enos Curtain, Mr. and Mrs. Dickson B. Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Ira A. Kip, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Hammond Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Grannis, Mr. and Mrs. D. Rait Richardson, and Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Bulkley.

Andre Mare Puts the Funeral of Foch on Canvas

By May Birkhead.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Oct. 5.—[Special.]—It was inevitable that so impressive and touching a ceremony as the funeral of Marshal Foch should receive consecration at the hands of a painter. Interpreting the interest of the great marshal's contemporaries in this event and forestalling the desires of posterity, Henri Verne, director of the museum at Louvre, asked for sketches, with the understanding that the successful artist be commissioned to execute a canvas for the French national museum.

The committee's choice fell upon a design submitted by André Mare, whose work is widely known in America, as well as in France. As early as 1910, when only 25 years old, M. Mare, whose promise was already recognized, formed one of a small group desirous of emulating the work of the earlier French masters' epic subjects on a heroic scale.

Decorates Place de Letolle.

Although seriously wounded during the war, where he received numerous decorations, André Mare was one of three chosen to decorate the Palace de Letolle for the victory fête of July 14, 1919. He collaborated with another artist in decorating the French embassies in Washington and Warsaw, also the grand salon of the liner Ile de France and the staterooms of the liner Paris.

The Metropolitan museum gave these artists an order for pieces of bronze and ebony furniture, which were displayed here as decorative arts at the exposition in 1925.

M. Mare now devotes himself entirely to painting his canvas in a Luxembourg museum.

For the picture representing the funeral of Marshal Foch, M. Mare emphasized the pathos of the riderless horse as the cortège approaches the Invalides, with the dome over Napoleon's tomb rising from the background, while on the left can be recognized such personalities as President Doumergue, the prince of Wales, and the late ambassador, Myron T. Herrick. In front of this group are massed the historic flags of France, while on the right French soldiers stand at attention.

Legion's Gift.

In the name of the American Legion Col. George C. Cook offered that this huge picture, when finished, be placed in the museum at Versailles as a homage of the American army and Legion to the illustrious soldier who was their generalissimo while they served in France.

From 1917 to 1919 Col. Cook was cited for special merit and distinguished service. While in France he was with the transport division of marines.

Frenchman Ignored on Wet Paint Signs

PARIS.—(AP)—A Frenchman seems to be regarded as a foreigner in his own home town, around the Madeleine, center of tourist shopping. One of the stores recently put up warning placards, "Beware of wet paint," neglecting to put it in French for the benefit of the 3,000,000 natives.

Second of Free Art Supplements in Today's Issue

It Is Homer's "Lost on the Grand Banks."

TODAY THE TRIBUNE is distributing free with this issue the second of a series of beautiful art supplements in full color, printed on high grade paper and ready for framing. Today's picture is a reproduction of Winslow Homer's famous painting, "Lost on the Grand Banks." The original is in the private collection of Mrs. John A. Spoor of Chicago.

Winslow Homer was an American painter. He was born in Boston in 1836; he died in 1910. He is most famous for his paintings of life at sea, and that life is not one of ocean liners and radio, but of men who go down to the sea in ships, in small ships, and fight it for their lives. He paints the fishermen on the north Atlantic coast. Newfoundland, with its swelling gray waves and heavy, sullen fogs, is the scene of many of his important pictures.

Winslow Homer began making drawings for Harper's Weekly at the age of 21. He first came into the public eye by his civil war drawings. In 1863 and 1865 several of his drawings were the focus of a thinking public both here and abroad. For instance: "Rations"; Prisoners from the Front" and "The Bright Side." From this work he went into water color painting and painting in oils.

The Chicago Art institute has a brilliant loan collection of Homer's water colors, pictures dealing with camping life in the mountains, the wooded, rocky hills of the east.

Among his most famous large pictures is "Lost on the Grand Banks." Other celebrated paintings are "Undertow," "Eight Bells" and "The Maine Coast."

Newport Grows Lazy in Waiting for Thanksgiving

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEWPORT, R. I.—There will be little activity here until the Thanksgiving holidays. Many of the houses, however, will remain open, though their occupants will spend most of their time in New York.

Mrs. Muriel Church has left with a string of horses to make a transcontinental trip of some two months. She wil exhibit at ten different shows from Seattle to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Willing Spencer were dinner hosts at the Beeches this week in honor of Mrs. Newbold Morris of Lenox, who is their guest at present. The Clambake club membership were the guests at dinner last night of their president, Mr. Bradford Norman Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward have closed the Cloisters and are now in New York. Mr. and Mrs. James Denison Sawyer, Mrs. Edward V. Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lorimer Worden and Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer have also closed their homes and have gone to New York. Gen. and Mrs. J. Fred Pierson are keeping Rose Lawn open an additional two weeks.

Tennis Matches Hold White Sulphur

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va.—The intercollegiate tennis championships occupied the attention of the autumn visitors this week. Many luncheons were given in connection with the play on the Casino courts. Among those who arrived this week were Dr. and Mrs. P. G. Fislin and Mrs. John Cadmus of Chicago.

H. Percy Schenck gave a dinner this week in the Japanese room of the Greenbrier, his guests including Mr. and Mrs. George T. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Mortland, Mr. and Mrs. L. Frederic Bruce and Miss Mantina Burke of Macon, Ga.

Responsibility and health

Special Eye Examination

Realizing that social diseases can invade almost every part of the body and cause serious functional and organic disturbances the Institute has provided in its special equipment facilities for scientific examinations of all possible results of infection, including impaired vision.

The special eye examination includes tests for visual acuity—the ability to see or read at fixed distances;—outlining for abnormal defects or blind spots in the field of vision;—ophthalmoscopic examination of the blood vessels and nerve endings which form the retina of the eye and such corrections as is possible through proper fitting glasses. The charge for this special examination is $2.00.

Fees for Other Medical Services

|---|---|
| Cost of first examination, including blood and other laboratory tests | $3.00 |
| Successive Treatment or Consultation | $1.00 |
| Kahn and Wassermann Blood Tests | $1.00 |
| Urinalysis | $0.25 |
| Intravenous injections of Neo-Salvarsan or Tryparsamide | $3.00 |
| Six consecutive daily treatments in Urological or Gynecological Departments | $4.00 |

A WARNING bell clangs vibrantly—A red light sways insistently—and a roaring mass of hurtling steel thunders past the crossing. Science has gone a long way in providing safeguards of every kind and description to protect the flying wheels of commerce. Millions of dollars have been spent for safety devices. Yet it is a significant fact that successful operation of these safeguards depends upon the good health of an individual. Therein lies the whole factor of safety. All activities requiring constant vigilance call for perfect mental and physical co-ordination at all times. The eyes are especially important. The slightest defect may endanger many lives.

While irregularities of the eyes are numerous and many can be corrected with properly fitted glasses, quite frequently impaired vision has been directly traced to an uncured social disease. For this reason it is advisable to supplement all and special eye examinations with Wassermann and Kahn blood tests. A social disease may cause defective vision long before its effects are noticed by the individual. When diagnosed continued treatments rapidly control the progressive damage and at times the dangerous symptoms entirely disappear.

Persons whose safety and the safety of others depend upon clear vision should not wait for the inevitable breakdown before tracing any defect in their sight to its source. Regular eye examinations alone are not always fully protective—they should be supplemented with complete medical examinations including blood and other laboratory tests. Possibly your own doctor can make these complete examinations or you can come to the Public Health Institute.

At the Institute complete medical examinations cover more than just the complaints of the patient for in this way only can beginning and serious involvement of the various organs of the body be detected.

The first examination consists of a urological examination for men or a gynecological examination for women and a general medical examination, a urinalysis, Wassermann and Kahn Tests on the blood, and microscopic examinations of all secretions and if necessary, special dermatological and neurological examinations for a charge of $3.00.

There is available also a special heart examination, including an X-Ray fluoroscopic study—a 14 x 17 inch X-Ray picture and an electrocardiograph print of its action. Blood pressure is also taken, all for a charge of $3.00.

And when necessary a cerebro-spinal fluid examination is made including a Wassermann, Noguchi, Ross Jones, colloidal gold sol. tests and cell count for a charge of $2.50.

With state registered physicians supported by every scientific facility the Institute is especially equipped to diagnose and treat social diseases in whatever form they may appear.

Operated not for profit, this medical service is offered to everyone at very low cost. In fact treatments are available even to those without immediate funds.

Rare Vase Lost.

POTSDAM.—(AP)—Berlin and Potsdam police have been unable to trace an antique Meissen porcelain vase which disappeared from San Souci palace, former residence of Emperor Wilhelm. Only one bus load of sightseers visited the palace that day after the vase was last seen, but search of the party failed to reveal the vase.

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

Morrison Hotel

A CORNER OF THE TERRACE GARDEN

The New Morrison, the world's tallest hotel, 46 stories high, will be, when completed, the largest and tallest, with 3,450 rooms.

AS CHICAGO sets back its clock and adds an extra hour to each evening, Sunday dinner at the Terrace Garden becomes an even more popular habit than ever.

Dining, Dancing and Vaudeville

A delicious menu, with all the courses from hors d'oeuvres to dessert, is served in the "Garden" from 5:30 to 9 p. m. every Sunday. A first-rate variety entertainment is given also, with dance-music between the acts by Gus C. Edwards' celebrated orchestra.

Why Rates Are Only $2.50 Up

This famous restaurant has built up such a name for the Clark-Madison intersection that subrentals pay all the ground rent. The saving makes possible a scale of room-rates that would be nearly double elsewhere for similar rooms.

1950 Rooms With Bath

Every room is outside, with bath, running ice water, telephone, bed-head lamp, and Servidor. All rooms are being radio-equipped. A housekeeper is assigned to each floor. Garage accommodation is ample and up-to-date.

Winter Cruises

Once in a lifetime, probably. Go right! With a welcoming Ball on Madeira's lantern-spangled mountain. Christmas with a new meaning in the Holy Land. New Year's Eve celebrations in Cairo. India-Ceylon-Java-Siam in their loveliest seasons. China, Peking, with government courtesies. Japan's plum-blossom time. And the idyllic cruise-life of the "dream-ship" Empress of Australia sailing Dec. 2, for 137 days. This year, more new places—Athens, Sumatra, Formosa—across-India optionals at lower prices—inland-India trip to Agra (Taj Mahal) and Delhi on the "includeds." And it costs no more than the usual world trip—from $2000. Why not look into it?

So popular we've had to double the sailings. And we've added 2 new island ports.... Majorca the magnificent, and Corfu in the Ionian Sea. All 17 principal ports, with complete sight-seeing programs, and plenty of free time. Yet entire cruise covers only 73 days. That takes superb shore management, speedy liners, restful perfection aboard ship! Empress of Scotland sails Feb. 3 and the equally famous Empress of France, Feb. 13. All expenses de-luxe from $900.

FIREFIGHTERS WHO BATTLED BLAZE OF 1871

Fifty-eight years ago this week many of the men shown in these pictures battled in Chicago the greatest fire in American history. Old engine company No. 13, located then as now at 209 North Dearborn street, is shown in the picture above at the left. Engine company No. 14, which was and is located at 509 West Chicago avenue, is shown above and at the right. Seven of its nine members are known to be dead. Seated, left to right: Tedor Bernhardt, pipeman; Peter Lawson, pipeman; Capt. Peter Schnur, Lieut. Nicholas Weinand, now living at 1634 Larrabee street, and Jim Halloran, pipeman. Standing: John Berry, engineer; Conrad Casey, engine driver; Tom O'Leary, hose wagon driver, and Dave Bush, pipeman.

NEAR NO. SIDE TO TAKE STOCK OF ITS GROWTH

An extensive report on improvements now under construction in the north central district and discussion of a proposed program of development will be made by the North Central association at a massmeeting of business men and property owners of the near north side, Thursday noon in the Virginia hotel, Ohio and Rush streets. In addition to Frederick M. Bowes, who will be chairman of the meeting, the speakers will include Eugene F. Taylor, manager of the Chicago Plan commission; Col. William Nelson Pelouze, and Nathan W. MacChesney and William C. Calvert, executive secretary of the association.

"Never before in the 17 years since the North Central association was founded have there been so many problems and demands, in reference to improvements throughout the district, confronting the association," Mr. Calvert said. "Nor have there ever been so many permanent improvements completed or now nearing completion at any time during the last year."

The north central district extends east from the north branch of the river east to the lake. In listing the improvements completed or started during the last year Mr. Calvert included the following:

Street Improvements.

Ohio street widened and paved from Lake Shore drive to Orleans street. The city council is now considering a resolution turning the section east of Michigan avenue over to the Lincoln park commissioners to be used as a boulevard. Boulevard light standards were erected last week and will be illuminated this week.

Walton place widened and paved between Lake Shore drive and Clark street. The Walton place street committee, of which John B. Drake Sr. is chairman, is now planning a new street lighting system to convert the street into a unique shopping district.

Dearborn to Be Widened.

Dearborn street to be widened and paved from the river to Burton place, the work to start in the spring. The contract for the improvement of the section between Chicago avenue and Burton place has already been awarded and the board of local improvements has ordered the widening and paving between the river and Ohio street. Property owners are now petitioning to have the third section between Ohio street and Chicago avenue improved.

Cass street paving between Illinois street ad Delaware place ordered by the boar dof local improvements and awaiting confirmation of the assessment rolls by the County court.

Clark street paving between the river and Division street ordered by the board of local improvements.

Orleans street paving between Kinzie and Division streets awaiting confirmation by the County court.

Petitions for the widening and paving of Superior street from Lake Shore drive to La Salle street have been filed by the property owners with the board of local improvements.

Other Improvements.

Construction of the Clark street bridge and beginning of the new Wabash avenue bridge.

Traffic improvement projects aided by the North Central association include the restriction of bridge openings. A new closed hour ordinance, prepared by the city council, is now before the United States war department.

Elimination of the stub end switches at the surface lines on Division street is urged by the association. The Illinois commerce commission is now considering a plan to remove these traffic barriers.

A new business restriction ordinance covering Michigan avenue from the river to Oak street has been prepared and is being signed by the property owners. The restriction will date until 1948.

Future Projects.

Among the projects planned for the future which will be discussed at the

RAVENSWOOD ONE OF FIRST SUBDIVISIONS

Took Name from Forest and Birds in It.

This article is the seventeenth of a series on the origins of the names of districts, suburbs, and streets of the north side.

A business venture was Ravenswood, one of the first of the laid out and plotted subdivisions in the Chicago area, planned by a group of Lake View business men as an addition to their city and improved by them before the first lot was sold.

The name was selected by the men who formed the Ravenswood Land company, because of the wooded aspect of the sections and the ravens which, tradition has it, abounded there.

Its boundaries were Irving Park boulevard—then Graceland avenue—on the south, Clark street on the east and Lincoln avenue and Winnemac, generally, on the west and north. The section shortly after its beginning enjoyed local option on the liquor question and went dry—however, only to the alley west of Clark street with the result that that thoroughfare had more saloons to the front foot than any other in Chicago.

Founders of the Company.

Among the men who formed the Ravenswood Land company were John M. Wilson, Chauncey T. Bowen, John H. Kedzie, Clarendon Harris, Seth Sheldon Jr., Luther L. Greenleaf, M. Van Allen, Lucius A. Willard, Cyrus P. Leland, and Jared H. Hinkley.

Wilson avenue, which runs from the lake at 4600 north to 6200 west, was named for the Mr. Wilson of the company and Cyrus P. Leland gave his name to Leland avenue, which runs from the lake to the west city limits, 4700 north. Greenleaf avenue in Rogers Park and Clarendon avenue, the extension of Halsted street along the lake, are believed to have been named after others of the group.

According to Chamberlin in his "Chicago and Its Suburbs," which is in the Chicago Historical Society library, only one person used the Northwestern railroad to commute to Chicago in 1869, the year after the Ravenswood company was formed. In 1874 there were 75 and in later years the Ravenswood station became a main stop. However, a few years ago, marking the passing of Ravenswood as a distinct community, the name was changed to Wilson avenue station.

Schools Plentiful from Start.

Ravenswood was well supplied with schools from the beginning. In 1873 the Ravenswood district school was built at Paulina and Montrose at a cost of $15,000 and two years later Irving Park and Ashland, within the Ravenswood boundaries, was selected for the site of the Lake View Township High school, built at a cost of $18,000.

The Congregational church was the first to locate there in 1870, and still stands, known as the church of the lighted cross. Next was the Ravenswood Methodist Episcopal church in 1872. Both were on Hermitage avenue—then Commercial street, the Congregational at Montrose avenue and the Methodist at Sunnyside. Later an Episcopal church, All Saints, located on Hermitage at Wilson avenue.

Ravenswood in its time was considered one of the finest suburbs in the city, and Abbot Alkaloidal at West Ravenswood avenue and Lawrence avenue being the only blot on the horizon. Lawns were spacious and well landscaped, houses set far back from the road and trees lined the parkways.

Now, however, factories and office buildings are lined along the railroad tracks and apartment buildings have taken the place of the old frame houses. Most of the families who had lived there until the second and third generations have moved away.

Mrs. E. S. Gillette Will Edit Parents' Magazine

Mrs. E. S. Gillette, 6341 North Claremont avenue, has been named editor of the magazine to be published by the Stone Parent-Teacher association, the board of directors of the club announced last week.

Lieut. Nicholas Weinand, who later became captain and then a battalion chief, with some of his grandchildren, as he appeared when he related his reminiscences printed in an adjoining column. The grandchildren are: Leona Weinand, 9 years old; Richard Weinand, 2; Lolita Weinand, 6, and Loretta Weinand, 8.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

BY FRED PASLEY.

HERBERT BILLINGS and family have returned from the big city of Brooklyn, where they rode in the tube and saw the noted bridge and other sights. "But I'll be blowed if I'm going back to the store to work yet," declares Herb, and he loafs around the house in a jumper, just to conceal his identity as the town's snappiest dresser.

The iron picket fence enclosing the dwelling of Alister H. McCormick, at 631 Rush street, has received a new coat of black paint and looks quite respectable.

PASTOR J. HELMER OLSEN will give a short talk this evening on the old familiar hymns, at the Messiah Lutheran church, Seminary avenue and School street, and the choir will render the first of a series of monthly song services. Ralph F. Anschuetz is organist and choir director. WM S. Schaubel, tenor, and Miss Mae Swanson, soprano, will present solo numbers. Our W-G-N family has on many occasions listened to Brother Anschuetz' talented vocalists.

Charley Roth reports that Harry Hobbs was late for lodge for the first time in years, the reason being that Harry has just been appointed manager of the Academy garage, in addition to his other regular work. Any of the boys in need of repairs can find Harry at the old stand, 1330 North Clark street.

ALBERT N. ELENBOGEN, son of Herman, the popular bank president of Lawrence avenue, has been made a life member of the Pike's Peak Summit Motor club. Al went on a trip west in the new chevvy he bought from George Pilat, the local dealer, and without a sputter of the carburetor negotiated what is known as the world's highest highway. Thus the membership, which is handsomely embossed.

Frank Cheever, Rogers Park's eligible bachelor and income tax statistician, had a peculiar experience last week, which caused him considerable mental effort. He was passing a loop haberdashery shop when his attention was attracted by three hose, all of the same bright color to which Frank is prone. He had always believed sox came in pairs, but there was the black lettered sign, "Three for one dollar." He cogitated it all the way to his office in the federal building, where he appealed to his colleagues. They concluded the third sock was a spare, in case of blowouts or punctures: "If that is so," says Frank, "it's what I call enterprise."

MISS JOSEPHINE HAHN of New York City, the summer through, is now visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Hahn, at her country home, 688 Irving Park boulevard. She is on a milk diet.

Ernest A. Schmidt, our big contractor, removed several homing pigeon eggs from the coop at his home, 4228 North Hermitage avenue, and surreptitiously put them in the nest of a pair of wild pigeons on top his office building at 22 East Huron street. In time they hatched, and the foster-parents duly taught them the art of flying. The very day they had mastered it the youngsters winged a beeline course for the home coop at 4228 North Hermitage avenue. "The smartest eggs I've ever hatched," says Ernest.

Repair Work Started on North Town Streets

Work was started on the repair of five streets in the north town district last week, Ald. Curtis F. Mellin [50th] announced yesterday. The streets which are being patched are Winchester, Damen, Hood and Norwood avenues and Lincoln street between Granville and Peterson avenues. The asphalt gangs at work on streets in the lower part of the 50th ward have completed repairs on Leland, Wilson, Ainslie, and North Hoyne avenues.

Stately Homes of Yesteryear Are Capital of U. S. Surgery

Members of the American College of Surgeons who attend the annual convention in Chicago Oct. 14 to 18 will tour the three old residences which, with the John B. Murphy memorial, make up the national headquarters of the college.

The home of S. M. Nickerson, second president of the First National bank of Chicago, at Erie and Cass streets; the old John V. Clark home, on the southwest corner of Rush and Erie; and the old R. Hall McCormick home, at the northwest corner of Rush and Erie. These three form the executive home, the clinical laboratory, and the site for the publication of the college's official organ.

The old McCormick residence has been remodeled and will be used temporarily until a new building, necessitated by the larger program of activities of the organization, is provided. A considerable section of this structure when erected will be devoted to the clinical or surgical research department of the college.

Plan Medical Museum.

Room also will be required for a museum, in which will be housed medical specimens which are required for the scientific study of the various diseases, such as cancer, of which no certain method of cure is as yet known.

The new building has not been financed nor has the architect been chosen, but a suggested design has been made, typifying the general character of the required structure. When completed, it will center the research of an organization comprising the outstanding surgeons of the western hemisphere.

The American College of Surgeons is not a college in the usual sense of the word, but an organization automatically limited numerically by the high standards requisite to the outstanding surgeons and surgical specialists of this half of the world. At present it comprises about nine thousand members. It corresponds to the Royal College of Surgeons of England, Scotland, and Ireland, though, since it is generally considered in medical circles that the greatest surgeons are in America, the Royal college suffers by comparison.

The fellows of the college are individual in their working interest in their organization, and not only have worked but financed their own activities and contributed a permanent endowment fund.

Founded by Dr. Martin.

Dr. Franklin H. Martin is president and founder of the college, and Walter E. Carr, the only nonprofessional connected with it, manages the physical properties.

Dr. Martin and his wife, Mrs. Isabelle Hollister Martin, are the owners of the Surgical Publishing company and the journal, Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics, now the official organ of the college. They have announced it is their intention to bequeath the journal and all its assets to the college.

The Nickerson residence, now used as executive headquarters, was once known as "Nickerson's Marble Palace." A bronze tablet at the front entrance testifies that the homestead was purchased and presented to the American College of Surgeons by citizens of Chicago in order to induce the college to make this city permanent headquarters. Among the donors were J. Ogden Armour, E. B. Butler, Charles L. Hutchinson, Cyrus H. McCormick, James E. Patten, Julius Rosenwald, and Edith Rockefeller McCormick.

The John B. Murphy memorial, which has been pronounced by critics as one of the most impressive monumental buildings in the world, was erected through subscriptions from more than two thousand of Dr. Murphy's admirers to the total amount of $550,000. More than half of the amount came from fellows of the college, as individuals. When the building was dedicated in 1926 it was turned over to the American College of Surgeons, of which Dr. Murphy was a founder.

Murphy Books Nucleus of Library.

The hall is used for gatherings of surgeons and above it is a large library containing thousands of valuable reference books. The beginning of this was Dr. Murphy's private library, donated by Mrs. Murphy.

Panel spaces have been provided upon the walls where will be hung portraits of former presidents of the college and other distinguished members of the profession. Restrictions have been formulated from the start with a view to excluding portraits that are not satisfactory from either the artistic or professional standpoint. A number of portraits are now in position and public inspection is always welcomed.

ROOSEVELT HIGH PLAYERS TO GIVE 'SHOWOFF' FRIDAY

"The Showoff" will be the first play to be presented by the recently organized civic theater of the Roosevelt High school community center, A. G. Clark, director of the center, announced last week. The play will be given in the high school, 3436 Wilson avenue, next Friday evening.

Alfred Stury, director of the All Faith players, Lake View Community players, and the Children's theater of the Burley Community center, has been engaged as coach of the Albany Park theater. Several members of other community player groups will assist Mr. Stury in presenting the first plays.

Any are interested in plays, acting, staging and costuming is invited to join the new civic theater, Mr. Clark said.

Miss Lucebe Lobdell will be assistant director of the players and will appear in the play to be given Friday evening. It is planned to present a new play each month in addition to a group of one act plays at frequent intervals. Among the plays to be given during the 1929-30 season are: "Torch Bearers," "Noel," "If I Were King," "Outward Bound," "Anna Christie," and "Roosevelt Follies of 1930."

LINCOLN SQUARE DISTRICT HOLDS FALL FESTIVA

The annual fall opening of the Lincoln square shopping district started yesterday with special displays, sales, and other events featured by each merchant. The sales festival is being sponsored by the Lincoln Square Commercial association and will continue throughout the month of October.

In addition to merchandise displays and special bargain the association has arranged other attractions, including extra street lighting and street entertainers, who will parade throughout the shopping district during the festival. The association plans to advertise the event throughout the entire north side, John Showell, secretary of the association, said.

Highland Park Church Dedicates New Organ

The Highland Park Presbyterian church, of which the Rev. Frank Fitt is pastor, today holds a special service to dedicate the new organ recently installed. The new organ replaces the instrument installed when the church was built in 1912. A set of tubular chimes, a celeste harp, and an adjustable console distinguish the new organ.

OPEN SEMINARY TOMORROW IN NEW BUILDINGS

5 of 7 Structures in Evanston Ready.

Plans which have been in the making for six years will be consummated tomorrow when the Western Theological seminary reopens in its new plant at Sheridan road and Haven street in Evanston. While the new $750,000 plant of the institution is not entirely complete, several of its new buildings will be in readiness for the opening.

THE VERY REV. FREDERICK C. GRANT.

The buildings which are to be occupied for the first time are the Tolman Wheeler administration building, the Robert B. Gregory Memorial library, the William R. Stirling cloister, the William Horlick refectory, and the south dormitory. The west wing of the latter building was contributed by the late Chauncey Keep in memory of his mother and father, the east half by Mr. and Mrs. Angus S. Hibbard in honor of Dr. William C. De Witt, for twenty-five years dean and president of the seminary.

Formerly on West Side.

Six years ago, in 1923, the Western seminary, then located on the west side of Chicago, closed with the intention of reopening the following fall in a new plant in Evanston. The seminary's right to build on the property obtained for the purpose from Northwestern university and Garrett Biblical institute was contested and litigation extending over a period of five years followed. It was not until last year that the Illinois Supreme court finally decided in favor of the seminary, and the building plans went forward. The completed plant will cost approximately $750,000. A second dormitory, the chapel, which is being erected now in honor of Bishop Charles Palmerstone Anderson, and professors' houses remain to be built.

An unusual and friendly relationship has been developed between the Western seminary, an Episcopal institution, and Garrett Biblical institute and Northwestern university, Methodist institutions. Coöperative arrangements have been made by which the students of Western may take courses in both Northwestern and Garrett.

The Western seminary will operate on the quarter system rather than the semester. This, according to the Very Rev. Frederick C. Grant, dean and president, will make possible a greater variety and flexibility in the curriculum and enable the school to work in close harmony with Garrett.

One of Oldest in Midwest.

The Western seminary is one of the oldest seminaries in the central states. It was established in 1883 under the supervision of the late Bishop William E. McLaren of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago. Its establishment was made possible through a gift of $100,000 by Dr. Tolman Wheeler, for whom the new administration building has been named. Bishop McLaren was the first dean of the seminary. In 1904, upon the death of Bishop McLaren and Dr. William J. Gold, the first warden of the institution, the Rev. William Converse De Witt was elected dean and served until his retirement a year ago.

The new buildings of the siminary are in Gothic architecture and are built of Wisconsin limestone to harmonize with buildings erected recently on the Northwestern campus. John N. Tilton of Armstrong, Furst & Tilton, Chicago architects, drew plans for the plant.

DELAYED ALARM CAUSED '71 FIRE, VETERAN AVERS

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

The great Chicago fire, the 58th anniversary of which takes place on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, might have been averted if the alarm had been turned in earlier. Such is the opinion of Nicholas Weinand, 1634 Larrabee street, one of the nine surviving veteran firemen who helped combat what was perhaps the most devastating conflagration in American history.

"Despite the strong gale on that long ago night," says Mr. Weinand, "I don't believe the fire would have spread as it did if we had got the alarm earlier. I know our company, No. 14, on Chicago avenue, saw the reflection of the blaze long before we got the alarm. We thought the hay stacks must be burning over in the prairie neighborhood to the southwest. We figured it must be just a hay fire because we got no alarm. Anyhow, we hooked up the horses and when the signal did come we were all ready to go."

Whether it was because Mrs. O'Leary's cow was being milked for a second time the same night in order to provide milk punch for a party, whether it was because some one besides Mrs. O'Leary tried to milk the cow and aroused bossy's ire, whether the first flames were caused by spontaneous combustion of hay in the shed loft on De Koven street and the cow had nothing to do with it at all—concerning the various versions of the origin of the 1871 disaster, Mr. Weinand has no set opinion.

Started After Milking Time.

"The way we understood it," he recalls, whimsically, "it all came about because Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lamp, but at this late date I'm not so sure. If it was the cow, she was probably angry at being milked a second time, because the fire started at an hour far beyond regular milking time."

Impressions of the fire as Mr. Weinand witnessed and fought its progress are clear in his mind, however. There was, for instance, a burning clapboard that flew over the city like an airplane and, catching against the side of a warehouse, was held there by the strong wind until it had burned itself out. Such was the type of the gale, partly caused by the fire itself.

Mr. Weinand, coming to Chicago at the age of nine, attended St. Joseph's school at Chicago avenue and Cass street. His first job was with the McCormick reaper works and his wages there were 25 cents a day. Later he became a carriage painter.

In June, 1870, Mr. Weinand joined the fire department, just in time to get a bit of experience before the historic blaze. On Saturday night before the big fire his company was called to put out a blaze in a row of frame buildings at Van Buren and South Wells streets. While working there another fire started at Canal and Van Buren streets. It burned a block. The company fought this fire until next morning—Sunday—then went to headquarters.

Worn Out When Big Fire Started.

It was a rather worn outfit, therefore, that was obliged to fight the big fire on the fatal Sunday night.

"We first went to work that night on a little church near Canal and Clinton streets," recalls Mr. Weinand. "While we were there, Baden's planing mill caught fire, and in order to save our engine we had to move. Later, however, along at Canal and Van Buren, we lost the engine. From

11 NORTH TOWN GROUPS JOIN IN TRACTION STUDY

Program of Improvements to Be Outlined.

A comprehensive study of the traction needs of the North Town and West Rogers Park districts, with a complete elimination of political interests and the adoption of a program designed to solve the problems and improve facilities, will be taken up by a committee of representatives of eleven civic organizations of the area at a meeting tomorrow evening in the field house of Green Briar park, Peterson and North Talman avenues. The meeting is sponsored by the West Ridge Improvement association.

According to Frank C. Gosswiller, president of the West Ridge property owners' group, the committee will make plans for three mass meetings to which all residents of the area will be invited to continue the discussion of the transportation problem.

Rouse Community's Interest.

The purpose of the meetings will be threefold, he said:

1. To make a survey of the transportation needs of the community, adhering closely to the practical and probable improvements available.

2. To arouse community interest in local transportation problems, with the hope of enlisting public opinion of such extent and weight that a very definite impression may be made on the various transportation groups.

3. Definitely to eliminate politics, local or citywide, from the transportation problems of the community.

The organizations that are expected to be represented at the meeting tomorrow under the auspices of the West Ridge Improvement association are: Arcadia Terrace Improvement and Protective association, North Town Kiwanis club, Rogers Park Real Estate board, Lincoln Square Commercial association, West Rogers Park Improvement association, North Town Business and Improvement association, Birchwood Improvement association, Ravenswood Kiwanis club, Ravenswood Improvement association, and the Peterson Woods Improvement association.

Heretofore each of these organizations has concerned itself somewhat with transportation improvements, Mr. Gosswiller said, but since the objects of each referred to a particular section of the area, no unified attempt to effect transportation improvements has been made. The committee will especially bear in mind the feasibility of all plans submitted and will not endeavor to obtain improvements which are almost certain to be denied by the traction bodies.

Used as Campaign Fodder.

The members of the West Ridge Improvement association believe that if sufficient interest can be aroused, any petition presented to the traction interests and public officials must necessarily be given adequate consideration.

Mr. Gosswiller declared that the various proposals for transportation improvements heretofore presented have not been received with interest on the part of many people because they have been used by political groups as campaign material. The joint organization hopes to eliminate all taint of politics from the propositions, he said.

Co-operative Opening, Lincoln Square Plan

Plans for a coöperative fall opening in which all merchants in the Lawrence, Lincoln, and Western avenues district will take part were discussed at the first fall meeting of the Lincoln Square Commercial association recently held in the Bowmanville National bank. Tentative plans provide for special street lighting, decorations, entertainment, and other features to attract shoppers to the Lincoln Square business district. The business festival will probably start the middle of October, John Showell, secretary of the association, said.

LINCOLN PARK BOARD READY TO ASK BIDS ON FIELDHOUSE

The Lincoln park commissioners at next Wednesday's meeting are expected to advertise for bids on this new fieldhouse, with carillon tower, to be located in Lincoln park opposite Grace street. The nominal cost of the building, which was designed by Edwin H. Clark, architect, is expected to be about $150,000. The fieldhouse will be in close proximity to the proposed golf course and tennis courts and baseball diamond in the park. The building will be of brick and limestone. On the main floor will be locker accommodations for about 300 men and 80 women, with adequate shower room provisions.

$45 CREPE DE CHINE DRESS FOR $10, IS NORTH SIDE BARGAIN

The Tribune will pay $2 for each story of the best bargain obtained in a neighborhood store, printed in the Metropolitan section. Address Bargain, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Make them short and snappy, writing on only one side of the paper, and print your name and address plainly.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—What I consider my best bargain is a charming brown crêpe de chine dress that I bought early last spring in a local store for $10. At the time of my purchase I was particularly pleased with the quality of the material in this frock and was gratified indeed some time later when I saw one exactly like it on display in an exclusive north side shop for $45.

MISS P. L. FISCHER,
1417 Olive avenue.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—The other day I was in a nearby department store waiting for an elevator that seemed to be a long while coming. I was leaning against a counter, chanced to turn around, and began looking through a quantity of handbags that had been greatly reduced in price. I forgot all about my elevator when I discovered a beautifully made black lizard skin bag reduced from $17.50 to $3.50. The metal mounting was somewhat rusted, but all it required was a little polishing with steel wool. It is one of the prettiest bags I have ever possessed.

E. LIEBLING,
5555 Sheridan road.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—The other day I paid our local fruit dealer 50 cents for ½ of a bushel of peaches that had been slightly bruised. From them I made 5½ quarts of delicious peach jam.

2235 Foster avenue.

Fortnightly Club to Hear Talks on Historical Women

The Fortnightly club of Evanston opened its thirty-ninth year last Monday with a special meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. Wilfred S. Reynolds, 725 Noyes street. The regular activities start with the meeting scheduled for Monday, Oct. 14, when Mrs. Raymond M. Huston and Mrs. E. R. Thomas will talk on "Historical Women in Europe" and "Historical Women in America." Mrs. Jacob Pfeiffer is vice president of the group, which numbers thirty active members, and Mrs. H. G. Rice is secretary-treasurer. On the program committee are Mrs. A. S. Barrows and Mrs. J. W. Garretson.

NEAR NORTH SIDE TO TAKE STOCK OF ITS GROWTH

Massmeeting Is Called for Thursday.

mass meeting this week are the following:

Organization of street committees on Kinzie and Illinois streets and Austin, Grand avenue and Sedgwick street to promote the widening and paving of the streets.

Widening of Lake Shore drive from Michigan at Oak street east and south to Ohio street.

This improvement is planned to link up with the new outer bridge.

Widening and repaving of Division street from Lake Shore drive to Ogden avenue. Engineers are now making a survey of Division street, Mr. Calvert said.

Construction of a civic center at the site of the old county jail on North Dearborn street. Petitions demanding the removal of the jail have been filed with Building Commissioner Paschen.

Formation of a special business men's committee to induce business houses to locate in the district and to promote the construction of modern buildings.

Adoption of business restriction ordinances on other streets of the near north side.

Public Officials Invited.

More than twenty public officials and representatives of other groups interested in the development of the area have been invited to attend the meeting Thursday noon. They are: Judge Oscar Hebel of the Superior court; Loran D. Gayton, city engineer; Chris Paschen, building commissioner; Ald. Dorsey Crowe [42d], Sidney J. Williams of the Chicago Safety council; Albert C. Kettler of the Kettler-Elliott company, contractors for the Wabash avenue bridge substructure; Ald. John Coughlin [1st]; William H. Dean, engineer of the Lincoln park commissioners; Hugh E. Young of the Chicago Plan commission; Ald. Arthur F. Albert [43d], Judge George Carpenter, State Senator Ernest Turner, Capt. Frank Matchett of the traffic police division.

Lieut. Col. William C. Weeks, government engineer; Capt. Charles F. Shaw of the Lincoln park police; Judge John M. O'Connor of the Superior court.

PROSECUTOR'S AID TEACHES ROMAN LAW AT LOYOLA UNIVERSITY

Loyola university's school of law began courses in Roman law last Monday with Frank Mast, LL.B., as instructor. Prof. Mast, an assistant state's attorney in the Felony court, Roosevelt road and State street, was at one time counselor for the Lithuanian legation at Washington, D. C., a position he held for several years.

FRANK MAST.
[Root Photo.]

Prof. Mast's course at Loyola university will consist of an historical summary of the origin and development of Roman law, including the Institutes of Justinian, the digests and the commentaries, and an application of the theory of Roman law to the problems of the common law. Prof. Mast received his bachelor of laws degree from the University of Detroit.

EVANSTON P.-T. PLANS CONCERTS FOR CHILDREN

Committees for the year appointed at the meeting Monday of the central council of Parent-Teacher associations in Evanston include: Child welfare work, Mrs. William F. Prizer; better films, Mrs. W. C. French; civics, Mrs. George Carter; press, Mrs. A. H. Easingwood; revisions, Mrs. Edward Johnson; education, Mrs. J. C. Snow.

Plans were made for another series of concerts for Evanston school children by the Little Symphony orchestra. Mrs. Oliver R. Aspegren, 1321 Elmwood avenue, is president of the council.

Volunteer members of the organization are to meet Tuesday in the Woman's club of Evanston, 1702 Chicago avenue, to address envelopes to Parent-Teacher associations with instructions for the delegates who are to attend the state conference on public welfare at the North Shore hotel Oct. 28 to Oct. 31. A dinner is planned for Oct. 30 by the council.

N. SHORE TO SEE PARISIAN MODES ADAPTED TO U. S.

The new extreme Parisian mode modified to the more wearable lines demanded by American women will be shown in a fashion promenade held by the Edgar A. Stevens, Inc., shop, Orrington avenue, Evanston, tomorrow.

Replicas and adaptations of recent models shown by Patou, Lanvin, Hartnell, Paray, Chanel, Lelong, and other Paris designers of note will be shown to north shore women by mannequins at the shop.

The showing will be at 10:30 in the morning and 2:30 in the afternoon and arrangements have been made to handle the crowds expected. The adaptations have been made by Edgar A. Stevens stylist to conform with the mode preferred by the American women.

DEVON-SHERIDAN PLAN IS ADOPTED FOR TRIAL LATER

Five Changes Expected to Expedite Traffic.

The traffic plan now in operation at the intersection of Broadway, Devon avenue and Sheridan road, will not be materially changed at this time, the North Shore park commissioners decided at their latest meeting. In making the decision the park board announced that five suggestions made by Leslie Sorenson, city traffic engineer, to relieve some of the traffic problems at the corner have been accepted and will be tried out as soon as possible.

The traffic regulations will remain as they are at present until such time as the changes recommended by Mr. Sorenson can be placed in operation as an experimental measure. If the congestion still continues to be a problem, the board will again try to work out other changes, Howard Savage, president, said.

The traffic problem at the busy entrance to Rogers Park long has been the worry of the Devon avenue business men and the park commissioners. Under the leadership of the Devon District Business association, the merchants on Devon avenue west of Broadway recently undertook to solve the problem. They consulted with several traffic experts and presented several plans designed to solve the difficulty. They objected to the ordinance that prohibited westbound automobiles crossing Sheridan road and Broadway.

Five Features of Plan.

The five recommendations made by Mr. Sorenson are as follows:

1. Widen Devon avenue between Broadway and the elevated tracks to create another traffic lane.
2. Ban parking at all times on Devon avenue between Broadway and the lake.
3. Operation of traffic signal lights on a shorter cycle, especially at times when the lights are operated manually.
4. Cut off the northeast corner of Devon avenue and Sheridan road to aid the movement of traffic north from Devon avenue.
5. Allow automobiles to proceed westbound across Sheridan road and Broadway at times to be determined following a check of traffic.

Expects Further Changes.

Joshua D'Esposito, engineer for the park board, whose plan to prohibit southbound machines turning left at Devon avenue, was turned down by the commissioners, said that the Sorenson plan would serve as a compromise, but that he believed other changes could be worked out in the future.

Byron Barwig Jr., who represented the Devon avenue business men, said that the Sorenson plan is satisfactory temporarily.

Commissioner Frederick H. Chetlain was chairman of the committee which considered the various plans submitted.

Sheridan Center Seeks Branch Postal Station

A petition is being circulated by members of the Sheridan Center Business association requesting Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder to establish a branch postal station in the district. The Sheridan center community comprises the southern part of uptown Chicago, between Irving Park boulevard and Addison street. According to L. G. Ross, business manager of the association, business men of the district made stamp purchases totaling $500,000 during 1928.

WEST LAKE VIEW GROUP ASKS MORE TRAFFIC SIGNS

Safety Loading Zones Are Installed.

Various problems of interest to residents of the west Lake View district were discussed at the first fall meeting of the Lake View West End Improvement association, recently held in the Alexander Graham Bell school, Oakley avenue and Grace street. Foremost among the proposals made were suggestions to provide more traffic safeguards throughout the district.

Upon the suggestion of Eugene Bamberger, attorney for the association, the members decided to take steps to protect the many deaf and dumb students at the Bell school while crossing heavily trafficked thoroughfares, particularly Western avenue. A campaign to educate drivers to be careful while driving in the neighborhood of the school will be launched and the city will be asked to erect warning signs along the street.

Ald. John J. Hoellen [47th], who attended the meeting, announced that traffic control lights are to be erected along Western avenue in the West Lake View area as soon as the necessary funds are available. He also reported that many safety loading zones have been built on corners on Western avenue, north of Belmont avenue, as an additional protection to surface car riders.

An appropriation of $29,000 for the installation of a new street lighting system on North Ashland avenue between Diversey parkway and Winnemac avenue, has been obtained, Ald. Hoellen told the property owners. The new lighting system is a part of the Ashland avenue improvement which is now nearly completed in the Lake View district.

A description of the new Lane Technical High school to be erected at Western avenue and Addison street was given by the alderman at the close of the meeting. He said that ground will probably be broken for the erection of the new school in the spring.

The Lake View West End Improvement association is said to be the largest property owners' organization of its kind in Illinois. Charles P. Carr is president. Twenty-five years ago the district from which the association draws its members was largely made up of brick yards, Mr. Carr said. Other officers are: Vice president, Frank J. Henning; secretary, Clarence B. Held, and treasurer, August Lindenau.

KENNETH WILSON WILL ADDRESS Y. M. C. A. FORUM

Various aspects and interests of "Young Men of Today" will be presented in a series of talks under that title at the Monday Forum of the Evanston Y. M. C. A. Young Men's club. The first talk will be by Kenneth L. Wilson, director of athletics at Northwestern university, tomorrow on "Young Men in Athletics."

Other speakers include Loren Meyer, secretary of the Evanston Chamber of Commerce, who will talk Oct. 14 on "Young Men in Business"; Dr. F. C. Eiselen, president of the Garrett Biblical institute, "Educating Young Men," Oct. 21; the Rev. J. B. Hubbard, assistant pastor of St. Luke's Episcopal church, Evanston, "The Religion of Young Men," Oct. 28, and A. J. [Dad] Elliott, student secretary, national council, Y. M. C. A., "The Problems of Young Men," Nov. 4.

The meetings are held from 6:30 o'clock in the evening to 8 o'clock in the Evanston Y. M. C. A., 1619 Orrington avenue.

EVANSTON BOYS START WAR TO FINISH ON MOTHS

Starting the war on tussock moths in earnest, Boy Scouts of Evanston tomorrow will be assigned to certain sections of the city to rid it of the tree pests.

The scouts will visit the parkways and parks armed with long poles tipped with nails and paper bags in which to place their victims. They will each have a bundle of handbills to leave at the homes on their routes, supplied by the Evanston Garden club, asking home owners to do their bit in their own back yards.

Jacob Kramer has donated several trophy vases which will go to the individual scouts bringing in the most cocoons. Each scout is to write his name and troop number on his paper sacks, and as they are filled bring them to scout headquarters, 1312 Chicago avenue, where they will be weighed and a record made before destroying.

The poles and the paper bags are being furnished at scout headquarters, and the boys are admonished not to use ladders or climb trees.

Descriptions and diagrams are also supplied so that they may recognize the deadly cocoons when they see them. "The cocoons," the message reads, "look like dirty gray pieces of cotton. The worms have white tufts, red head, black and yellow body, and fuzzy gray hairs on both sides of body."

Home owners are advised to use poles or rakes in their own yards, removing the cocoons and worms and destroying them by burning.

Each boy will be given until Monday, Oct. 14, to clean up his own territory. After that date until Saturday, Oct. 19, at 5 o'clock, the official closing time of the contest, they may go into any territory to hunt them down.

"An emergency call," the scout bulletin terms the contest, and an essentially "good turn campaign" to save Evanston's trees. Mayor Charles H. Bartlett of Evanston asked the boys to help, since the city could not appropriate money to do the work.

The World's Series Starts Tuesday, Oct. 8th

AFTER the noise and excitement of the big game, come to Leighton's. You'll enjoy the quiet, dignified atmosphere and the wonderful variety of delicious foods. You can always find a place to park your car, for Leighton's is on Lake St., between Michigan and Wabash, just away from heavy traffic and jammed streets.

CHICKEN AND STEAK DINNER, $1.50

SPECIAL TABLE D'HOTE DINNER, $1.00

You will like Leighton's service, too. It is so much like being at home. You never have to wait and you don't have to rush off after you have finished your meal. You can sit around and visit as long as you please. Come to Leighton's after the game and make yourself at home.

SEA SCOUTS, BACK FROM JAMBOREE, BANQUET GUESTS

Chicago Group Honored by Executives.

Howard F. Gillette, National Sea Scout commodore and a member of the executive board of the Chicago Scout council, and the ten Chicago Sea Scouts who represented the Chicago and the National Sea Scout organizations at the International Boy Scout jamboree at Birkenhead, England, during the last summer, were the guests of honor at a dinner in the Edgewater Beach hotel given in connection with the region seven Scout executives' conference, at which 165 Scout executives from Scout councils covering 864 cities, towns, and villages in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Michigan were present.

Mr. Gillette, in mentioning many interesting experiences at the international jamboree, said:

"On one occasion, when the Scouts were passing in review before the prince of Wales and Lord Robert Baden-Powell, who is the originator of the Boy Scout movement in England, I was standing behind them in the reviewing stand.

Complimented by Wales.

"As National Sea Scout Director Thomas J. Keane and the Sea Scouts of the United States passed by the reviewing stand, the prince, after returning their salute, nudged Lord Baden-Powell with his elbow and remarked favorably on the fine appearance that they made.

Led by T. J. Keane.

"Old Ironsides," the Sea Scout ship, from which the Chicago Sea Scouts were selected to attend the jamboree, was first organized as Troop 17 of the northwest district, which had the first Sea Scout patrol in the world. At that time it was under the leadership of Thomas J. Keane, who was then serving as a volunteer Scout leader and who now is the National Sea Scout director of the Boy Scouts of America. Later the troop was reorganized as Sea Scout Ship Old Ironsides Troop 117 and was the first flagship in region seven.

Each Sea Scout troop possesses an imaginary ship. Troop 117 chose "Old Ironsides" as the name for its vessel.

The Sea Scouts who attended the dinner are all members of the National Sea Scout Flagship "Old Ironsides" of Troop 117, which meets at the Grace Evangelical church, Wrightwood and Kimball avenues. Their names are: Albert A. and Harold F. Collinet, D. A. Floreen, Henry Drogemuller, George Gruner, Elmer Hanssen, Sumner Summerfield, Lester Reith, Ross Utter, and Skipper Louis Oloff. Scout Nuel Howard of Ludington, Mich., who attended the jamboree with these Sea Scouts, was also present.

Others who were present at the dinner included: National Sea Scout Director Keane of New York, Sea Scout Director Bruno G. Andrews of region seven, Chief Portmaster A. R. Pieper, Deputy Chief Pilot G. W. Shipman, Regional Executive Walter M. Kiplinger, Scout Executive E. Urner Goodman, and Eames MacVeagh.

SEA SCOUTS HONORED

INDIAN DANCERS DEDICATE TREE TO LONGFELLOW

Chiefs and Princesses Take Part in Program.

The spirits of Hiawatha, old Nokomis, and Minnehaha walked at St. Stephen's Episcopal church—"The Church of the Poets"—3533 North Albany avenue, last Sunday, when more than forty American Indians gathered to help dedicate a tree to Longfellow, the Indians' poet.

Chief Little Moose of the Chippewas, Chief Whirling Thunder of the Winnebagos, Princesses Hapana and O Me Me of the Sioux, were a few of the Indians who gathered to honor the poet who first expressed an appreciation of the redman's contribution to America, in his famous poem, "Hiawatha."

Many of them dressed in feathered war bonnets, buckskin shirts, and beaded blankets, the Indians sang their songs, demonstrated their dances and explained their sign language as a part of the dedication services. Representatives from the Winnebago, Pueblo, Sioux, Oneida, and Omaha tribes assisted the Chippewas, who were the Ojibways of the Hiawatha story.

The Rev. Irving St. John Tucker, rector of St. Stephen's, opened the service with a short sketch of Longfellow's life and work.

"We have crystalized the utterances of the poets of 3,000 years ago of one particular nation, the Hebrews," said the Rev. Mr. Tucker, "as if no other poets were ever inspired.

First to Appreciate Legends.

"Living poets send their poems as offering to be hung on the walls of our church in thanksgiving to the Creator Spirit. We dedicate our trees in memory of great poets of time past. Longfellow first opened our eyes to the beauty of Indian legends. The Indians rever him as one of their great friends."

George Eyson, lay reader of St. Stephens, then described how more than sixty years ago, while he was serving as a choir boy in Ely cathedral, England, he saw Longfellow, who was touring England. The poet stopped one morning to attend church at the cathedral and was soon recognized by the parishioners. Mr. Eyson, who is one of the few living men to have seen the poet, remembered him as a tall, bearded man of kindly face and pleasant demeanor.

Scott Peters, president of the Chicago council of Indians, expressed the appreciation of his people at being given an opportunity to pay tribute to their great friend Longfellow. He spoke of the change which developed in regard to the attitude people have toward Indians, as a result of the work started by the poet. The suspicion, fear, and hatred which formerly existed is now gone and the Indians are regarded as friends and equals by most white men.

23d Psalm Repeated in Signs.

Chief Whirling Thunder then gave a demonstration of the sign language as developed by the American Indians. The Rev. Mr. Tucker read the Twenty-third psalm, pausing between sentences while Chief Whirling Thunder translated the meaning into sign language.

He explained that the sign language was developed by the Indians because each of the tribes formerly spoke different dialects, thus being unable to understand each other. They all used the same signs, however.

The ceremony inside the church closed with a reading from "Hiawatha" by Chief Robert Buffalo of the Chippewa reservation at Bayfield, Wis.

Other poets for whom trees have been dedicated in St. Stephen's "garden of memory" include Eugene Field, Joyce Kilmer, James Whitcomb Riley, Grace Healy Woodruff, Joaquin Miller, and Keith Preston. A tall pepper tree standing in front of the church is to be dedicated soon to Walt Whitman.

HOT DEBATE AS EVANSTON TALKS LIGHTING SYSTEM

Heated argument and a mutual accusation party greeted the long awaited report of the lighting committee to the Evanston city council in session last Tuesday with Mayor Charles H. Bartlett and Ald. Albert J. Smith arrayed against each other.

Although the council in general expressed its approval of the report which recommends a decentralized system in place of the centralized plan of the proposals refused a year ago, official action is not to be taken until the board of local improvements looks it over.

The report incorporates in it a criticism of the engineers who have been handling the plans and states that the committee "has obtained the opinion of a disinterested, competent and nationally known firm of engineers" since last May when a decentralized plan was considered as cheaper.

In the discussion which followed the submission of the report Mayor Bartlett reminded the committee that he had offered a lighting project to the council last November.

"Since it was rejected," he said, "none of the aldermen not on the committee have known what the lighting committee or the engineers have been doing until it was suggested that outside engineers be brought in to study the ordinance."

Ald. Smith then accused the administration of "pussyfooting," and said it was high time the Evanston taxpayers knew what they were going to get for their money."

ANNUAL DINNER HELD BY LEGION OF RAVENSWOOD

Starts Autumn Season of Entertainments.

At the first annual banquet of Ravenswood post, No. 149, of the American Legion, held recently at the Rogers Park hotel, 168 members of the post were present and 28 new members accepted. Charles Lindstrom, vice commander, was in charge of the event. Commander Joseph F. Bernhard announces that the affair was the first of a series of free entertainments to be given by the post during the fall and winter. A. H. Rohlfing, past commander of Ravenswood post, was a delegate from the sixth district to the Louisville convention.

The executive committee of the 33d Division War Veterans' association, meeting recently at the Hamilton club, decided to hold the annual reunion of the association on Saturday afternoon and evening, Nov. 16. The following were appointed to handle the event: Col. Walter J. Fisher, 108th Ammunition Train, chairman; Maj. Charles Schott, 108th Sanitary Train, vice chairman; Thomas G. Burns, 108th Field Signal battalion; the Rev. N. B. Clinch, 129th Infantry; Lieut. Edward Rosengren, 129th Infantry; Maj. Ernest V. Dickson, 132d Infantry; Col. Charles Roth, 108th Engineers; John Plattner, 108th Field Signal battalion; Thomas Killoran, 108th Ammunition Trains and Military Police; Maj. Frank O. Wood, 122d Field Artillery; Lieut. Byron B. Nelson, 122d Field Artillery; George J. Miller, 108th Ammunition Train; Emmett Harrington, 108th Ordnance; Ben W. Lawless, 124 Field Artillery; Capt. Herman H. Weimer, 131st Infantry; George E. Clarke, 122d Field Artillery.

Ben Lawless was appointed chairman of the banquet committee, and Col. Charles Roth, chairman of the publicity committee for the re-union.

Arrangements have been completed by Chicago Elevated post, No. 184, for a Columbus day party and dance to be given in the grand ballroom of Hotel Sherman Saturday evening, Oct. 12, it is announced by Commander George R. Apfel. This is the second annual event of this kind for "L" post. The dance held at the Hotel Sherman last year drew such a large attendance that it was necessary to secure the grand ballroom this year. Among the features of the program next Saturday evening will be dancing to music by a well known orchestra, entertainment numbers by radio, and stage stars and drawings for prizes. Proceeds from the dance will be used in the work of the post, which was one of 31 posts in Illinois to receive the certificate of meritorious service for increased membership this year.

At the last meeting of Naval post, No. 372, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Commander, Norm C. Olsen; senior vice commander, Charles Reynolds; junior vice commander, P. F. Brautigan; finance officer, P. K. Crawford; post surgeon, Dr. M. E. Healy; sergeant-at-arms, P. J. Mitchell; adjutant, George G. Speir; directors, K. E. Carroll and Herb Klein. Included in Naval post's schedule of winter activities is bowling. The post's own league will inaugurate its 1929-30 season tomorrow night. Membership in the league is open to all Naval post members.

Clark B. Kelsey, former adjutant of the American Furniture Mart Legion post, was elected commander at a post luncheon held Tuesday in the sun parlor of the Furniture Club of America. Kelsey succeeds Wilson J. Killough. George McEwen was elected vice commander to succeed Frank S. Whiting. Other officers elected were: Adjutant, William F. Sullivan; finance officer, L. W. Foulk; judge advocate, James Mills, and sergeant-at-arms, Allen Bashara.

Roseland post, No. 49, will hold its annual meeting and election of officers Tuesday night. The present officers are: Ralph De Cook, commander; A. G. Lindell, senior vice commander; R. Von Meeteren, junior vice commander; Albert Price, finance officer; Peter De Vries, sergeant-at-arms; William Frew, chaplain; Cecil Smith, judge advocate, and A. J. Lindell, adjutant. In addition to the offices as indicated by this roster of the incumbents, a third vice commander will be elected for the coming year.

Rogers Park Club to Dance.

The Rogers Park Social club will hold its first fall dance at the North End clubhouse, 6200 Sheridan road, this evening at 8.30 o'clock.

Wed Half Century

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Symons will observe their golden wedding anniversary next Saturday with an informal gathering of friends at their home, 4734 North Rockwell street.

HEARING FRIDAY ON WIDENING OF EAST SUPERIOR

Paving of Superior street between La Salle street and Lake Shore drive at an estimated cost of $243,000 will be taken up by the board of local improvements at a hearing in the city hall next Friday morning.

The project includes paving with asphalt and widening to 50 feet for most of the length. The street will be 50 feet wide except between St. Clair street and Fairbanks court, where it will be 46 feet in width.

Another large improvement for the north side which the board desires property owners to approve is the paving and widening of Spaulding avenue between Montrose avenue and Irving Park boulevard, at an estimated cost of $80,000. A concrete pavement will be laid and the roadway will be widened from 24 to 30 feet.

McClurg court will be paved with asphalt between Grand avenue and Huron street at a cost of $36,000; Mendell street will be paved with granite block between Ashland avenue and a line 237 feet east of Ashland at a cost of $11,500, and a sewer will be constructed in Lincoln avenue between Kimball avenue and the sanitary district canal at an estimated cost of $5,100.

EDUCATOR HEARD AT CHURCH TEA IN EVANSTON

Miss Edna Dean Baker, president of National Kindergarten and Elementary college in Evanston, talked on "Wholesome Environment and Character Building" at the annual president's tea given by the Woman's association of the First Presbyterian church of Evanston Friday in the parlors of the church.

Mrs. John A. Scott, president of the group, and Mrs. David Hugh Jones, wife of the pastor of the church, were special guests at the reception. In the receiving line were Mrs. Samuel H. # Chicago Merchants Now Use This Plan With Profit

THE old fashioned way of doing business was to open up a store, oil up the runners on the cash drawer and wait for trade to stroll in. Selling began after the customer got inside the door.

Then certain shrewd merchants, who did a lot of thinking between sales, decided to speed up the process. Why not go out after customers? Why not start to sell them, long before they arrived at the store?

A Plan that Works!

The tremendous retail establishments built by modern sales methods testify to the soundness of this plan. But as these stores grew, and as the city grew, the cost of going after business also increased. Until recently, it was almost impossible for smaller stores to avail themselves of the profit-making methods used by the large, well-established stores. Then something happened that changed the entire picture. The smaller retailer got a "break."

The Chicago Tribune studied the situation and worked out a sales plan. About two years ago the Tribune put this plan into effect. Merchants and retailers in nearly every line investigated it, tested it, and demonstrated to their own satisfaction what it can do.

Send for this Free Book

The Tribune would like to place before you the complete details of this plan. All the facts, all the information you will want to know, are set forth in a 32-page booklet called "Bigger Profits."

The Chicago Tribune will send a copy of this fascinating book to every merchant and retailer who will take the trouble to ask for it. It will be sent free of charge and without obligating you in any way.

TRADE EXPANSION DRIVE LAUNCHED BY MERCHANTS

Central Northtown Starts Fall Festival.

A 10 day trade expansion drive was launched last week by the business men of the Central Northern district, the area within one-half mile of the intersection of Lincoln avenue, Halsted street and Fullerton avenue. The purposes of the merchants' festival is twofold: It will celebrate the first anniversary of the formation of the Central Northtown Business association and is expected to promote greater business activity in the north side shopping center.

According to Harry A. Miller, secretary of the association, the primary purpose of the festival is to boost the neighborhood. Merchants are offering bargains in all lines of merchandise to attract new shoppers to the area and numerous contests and other features are planned during the 60 day drive.

Prizes to Be Awarded.

The trade expansion festival will be formally closed in December with the awarding for the grand prizes to be awarded visitors in the district during the 60 days. Several valuable prizes, including an automobile and a washing machine, will be given away by the association, Mr. Miller said.

The sales campaign is the first ever held in the district, according to officers of the business men's club. In former years each merchant planned his bargain days separately and each had witnessed special offers by various stores. With every business man cooperating on a concentrated drive, the drive will attract more attention and result in more intensive advertising, than formerly, Mr. Miller said. The festival is being financed by contributions of the members in the association, more than $2,000 having been raised already.

Organized in 1928.

The Central Northtown Business association was organized by the business men late in 1928. The purpose of the club was to place more pressure on the attempts to obtain many needed improvements for the community, including better surface car transportation and street lighting. A new street lighting system is now being installed and is already in operation on Lincoln avenue north of Fullerton avenue.

Treulich Is President.

Alex R. Treulich is president of the association which now has a membership of more than 50 merchants and business men of the neighborhood. Other officers are: vice president, Edward P. Soelter; treasurer, George T. Jengel, and directors, George W. Torpe, William Dess, Edward Garber, Samuel Goldblatt, Ralph Goodman, Harry G. Kramer, Joseph E. Nero, Ernest A. Ricketts, John S. Simonds and Sam Freeman. Emery T. Erickson is executive secretary of the organization.

Central Northtown was selected as the name of the Lincoln and Fullerton avenues and Halsted street district, in a contest conducted by the business men last year, in which $75 was awarded to the contestants submitting the winning names.

LINCOLN Y.M.C.A., LUSTY YEARLING, WILL CELEBRATE

The first birthday anniversary of the Lincoln-Belmont department of the Y. M. C. A. will be celebrated with a charter members' entertainment tomorrow evening in the new building at 3333 North Marshfield avenue. The program will include talks by leaders in the association's work, athletic exhibitions, and other events. In addition to marking the close of the department's first year of activity in the Lake View district, it will stress the importance of renewed efforts to build up the branch association during the coming year.

During the initial year the department has enrolled 2,400 members, O. F. Peterson, executive secretary, said yesterday that a majority of these members were obtained not as a result of a membership campaign but because they felt the need of the fellowship and educational opportunities offered by the organization.

900 Boys Are Enrolled.

The boys' department now numbers more than 900. There are 29 boys' clubs in active operation, teaching subjects such as carpentry, boat and airplane modeling, electricity and radio, stamp collecting, and other work. The classes are directed by men from the community who volunteer to lead the clubs, giving them not only the technical training that they want but also the leadership that is essential in developing the boys into useful citizens.

The physical education section has attracted so many members that the equipment has been taxed at times. Regular gymnasium classes have exceeded the expectations of the organizers and the regularity in attendance is also noteworthy, Mr. Peterson said. Each member of the department has been given a thorough physical examination and the primary effort of the athletic instructors is to eliminate the weaknesses revealed in the examinations.

During the last year a total of 150 boys have learned to swim, an equal number attended the department's summer camp, while more than 1,800 boys participated in the 40 educational tours and hikes during the summer months. Free instruction in swimming is given to a class of crippled boys from Jahn school, 3149 North Lincoln street, and two classes from Burley school, 1630 Barry avenue. The Boy Scouts of the northwest district use the swimming pool for their life saving tests. This work is supported in part by contributions to the boys' subsidy budget.

Eighteen Leaders Trained.

Eighteen young men completed a prescribed course in leadership training during the summer, fitting them to direct new members in physical education activities.

Many programs are planned and staged by the 200 residents of the building. They will assist in giving the entertainment at the celebration tomorrow evening. In addition to the active staff at the department, the managing committee of the Y. M. C. A., headed by Elmer F. Wieboldt, will take part in the anniversary program. Mr. Wieboldt contributed $100,000 to the building fund of the Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A.

Y. W. C. A. GIRLS TO VISIT CITY'S QUEER PLACES

Poking into queer places in all corners of the city, seeing Chinese operas in the foreign quarters, buying in Maxwell street, listening to the chimes of St. Chrysostom's, discovering the real Chicago interesting as few Chicago people know it, are a few of the things that the girls who go on the Y. W. C. A. know our city trips will be doing this year. They are out to find every section of Chicago with all the unusual shops, industrial plants, artists' studios, churches, of every creed and nationality, all the interesting places off the beaten track of the ordinary Chicago tourist and Chicagoan who usually sees only the more widely known beauty spots of the city.

There are know your city trips on week nights and on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. A Y. W. C. A. hostess accompanies each group. In some places official guides conduct the parties.

The first trip of the season is scheduled for next Tuesday, a Chinese dinner followed by opera. The next one, Thursday, is to the Bahai temple, and a tour of the Wilmette harbor will be held on the same day. Friday the sightseers will journey to Maxwell street, and one the evening of Oct. 15 they will dine at a Swedish restaurant.

Private and club parties will be arranged on request, and information on any of the trips may be obtained at any of the Y. W. C. A. branches.

Wilmette Minister Gives Evening Book Lectures

A series of Sunday evening lectures by the Rev. George D. Allison, pastor of the Wilmette Baptist church, arranged because of the late opening this year of the Wilmette Sunday Evening club, opened last Sunday with a talk on the "Bensons," a story of family love and loyalty. Today Dr. Allison will give a review of "The Uncertain Trumpet," A. S. M. Hutchinson's new novel. Each lecture is to be preceded by a musical program.

North End Mothers' Club to Hear Singer and Cellist

An afternoon of music will be the first social event on the program of the North End Mothers' club of Evanston Tuesday in the Haven school auditorium. Alvene Ressegule, contralto, and Estelle Swigart, cellist, will give the program, which has been arranged by Mrs. Holman D. Pettibone. Mrs. Rolla Pribble, social chairman, and Mrs. Richard Thane, hospitality chairman, are in charge of the reception which will precede the musical.

CADET TROOPER OF '71 RECALLS FIRE DISORDER

U. of I. Professor Tells of Fight for Food.

BY AMY R. ENERSON.

One of the few remaining members of the volunteer troops that helped quell the riots that broke out after the fire of 1871, and assisted in doling out food and supplies is Prof. C. W. Rolfe, professor emeritus at the University of Illinois. As a cadet in a company of 157 from the university, Prof. Rolfe came to Chicago to help in preserving order and in distributing relief to the homeless thousands following the fire.

"The Chicago fire? Yes, it occurred in 1871 when I was a senior here at the university—at the Industrial university, as it was called in those days.

"It was a queer coincidence. The Chicago fire broke out on the same day that the Urbana fire raged, and each started in a barn!

"At 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 11, the old fire bell rang in Urbana. We had been having a spell of dry weather, and that day a high wind had come up, blowing the dust which had been lying deep on the dirt roads. No one knows what caused it, but a fire broke out in the stables belonging to Mrs. Hiram Shepherd and Mrs. Whitcomb in the alley between Race and Market streets. In five minutes Mrs. Whitcomb's home was ablaze. The high wind carried huge burning brands to other houses and the fire swept rapidly through the residential and business districts.

"About 200 of the students here at the university went to Urbana to help fight the fire, and we had a busy afternoon.

Recalls Commander's Call.

"The afternoon's excitement was a prelude to the experiences of the next two days. Coming back from the fire after dark, about 7 o'clock, we noticed a light in the window of the chapel—the chapel was in the same building which contained both classrooms and dormitory. When we went into the chapel we found there a telegram from our commander, Capt. Snyder: 'Chicago is all in a riot. Proceed at once with as many men as you can arm.'

"Immediately all was hurry and bustle! Some of the boys were wild to go. Some of us were not. When 157 of us were lined up, given our muskets and cartridges, and told to shoot to kill if necessary, I was sure that I did not want to go. However, I put one of the two cartridges which were issued to each cadet into my heavy musket, dropped the other cartridge into my pocket, and obediently climbed on board the special train for Chicago.

"We had no knapsacks in those days, so each boy wore a patchwork quilt rolled tightly and thrown over the left shoulder, with the ends tied together under the right arm. We were a rough and ready looking set and our faces were grim.

"It was 7 o'clock the next morning when we arrived in Chicago. We marched through the city to Randolph street and reported to the mayor. Then we were inspected by Gen. Phil Sheridan, who congratulated us on our soldierly bearing.

Quartered in a Church.

"Late in the afternoon company A, of which I was a member, was quartered in a church near the 22d street station. We were expected to sleep on the hard pews at night, using our quilts as covers. Companies B and C were sent to Union park, and faired better than we in many ways. This was especially true when it came to rations, for they were given all sorts of luxuries in the way of canned fruit and preserves while our food consisted almost entirely of sandwiches—unbuttered bread with a thick slab of boiled ham between. To this day I cannot endure the sight or smell of boiled ham!

"An amusing incident occurred when the rations were issued at Union park. A rope was stretched to keep out the unruly crowd, but a hungry and persistent individual started to climb the barrier. He was ordered back by the soldiers, but again and again he made the attempt. The third time as he stood with his hand on the post and one leg going over the rope, Capt. Richard drew his sword and made a pass with it over the back of the intruder's hand. The edge of the sword was jagged from many fencing bouts and the saw like edge tore the man's skin and the blood gushed out. At the sight of blood the crowd screamed in terror and the mob quickly vanished. It was evident that the soldiers meant business.

"These choice rations which were being so guarded were sent in by the trainloads daily from surrounding towns. People in outlying districts heard of the suffering and hunger of the needy and homeless, and busied themselves making sandwiches and pastry, and in collecting canned goods to send to those who had been made destitute by the fire. But these delicacies did not always reach their destination.

"Rich women came in rags and stood in line for the chance of getting something for nothing, or arrayed their servants in old clothing and sent them with large baskets to be filled.

"On Friday we were dismissed with flattering acknowledgment of our splendid performance of duty, and we left on a special train for Champaign—back to the quiet of regular school life and study. Our two cartridges apiece were still in our possession. We had helped to quell the riot in Chicago without firing a single shot!"

TELLS OF FIRE

PROF. C. W. ROLFE.

DELAYED ALARM CAUSED '71 FIRE, VETERAN AVERS

Tells How a New Chicago Rose from Ashes.

then on, we worked with engine No. 11, picked up on the south side.

"I recall a schooner that caught fire near the lumber market at Erie street and the river. It burned itself loose from its moorings. The bridgetender opened the draw to let the burning ship pass, but it stuck long enough to set the bridge on fire, cutting off means of escape to the north side. Later on, the burning schooner set the Lynch distillery on fire. Shortly afterward, the whole block was in flames.

"Everything was in an uproar. Smoke, flames, followed by a scene of desolation. But hopeless as the aftermath appeared, it was after the fire that Chicago saw the beginning of its expansion and growth. Our business men found that their credit was good. There was a friend of mine who lost all his worldly goods—$20,000 worth of sausages—in the fire. He spoke to me in despair, but the packing houses told him he could have all the meat he wanted. Soon he was prosperous again.

Mostly Four Story Buildings.

"The buildings that burned in the fire were not tall structures. Not many of them were more than four stories for we had no elevators then. Many of the buildings were wooden and, as a result of a long dry spell, they were like tinder.

"Do I think Chicago is apt to have another big fire? No, I don't, but such things can happen. Say, a number of alarms came in at once from all parts of the city—but, no, there can't be another fire like that. The modern buildings are fireproof, the alarms are quicker, the water supply better. Why, in 1871, we only had six inch pipes on State street and they were partly filled with dirt.

"How do I feel about the passing of the fire horses? Well, they were a smart lot. They seemed to like the excitement and they understood the gongs and all. Still, if a man had feelings he pitied the horses because speed was required and—well, the machines are much better."

Mr. Weinand retired from the service in 1908, wearing a diamond medal given him by his associates of the third battalion to attest their admiration and affection for their fellow worker who had risen to the rank of battalion chief.

38 Years in Service.

After 38 years of service, Mr. Weinand has now been retired for nearly 21 years. He has lived at his present address for thirty years. His wife died three years ago, and he now makes his home with one of his six sons. Recently all the sons and the eight grandchildren gathered at the old home for a family reunion.

"I've never cared to leave Chicago," says Mr. Weinand. "The city, though, that has risen from the ashes of the big fire is a much bigger place than any of we boys ever thought it would be."

The other eight surviving veterans of the great Chicago fire are Isaac M. Adler, 7419 Paxton avenue, 89 years old; Thomas J. Canty, 1113 West Madison street, 81; James Duff, Leavenworth Soldiers' home, 80; Frederick W. Gund, 4938 North Winchester avenue, 79; George Leady, 5530 South Bishop street, 84; Alfred W. Pendleton, 3713 North Crawford avenue, 92; Charles Schroeder, 2144 Bissell street, 84, and Lawrence Walsh, South Bend, Ind., 88.

Start Resurfacing of Columbia Avenue

Street repair workers last week completed the resurfacing of Chase avenue between Sheridan road and the lake, Ald. E. I. Frankhauser [49th] said yesterday. Work has been started on the resurfacing of Columbia avenue between Sheridan road and Glenwood avenue.

GRADS TO RETURN TO LAKE FOREST FOR HOMECOMING

Old grads will return Saturday to Lake Forest college for the annual homecoming festivities. The chief event of the day will be the football game with Knox in the afternoon. The committee on arrangements, headed by Sammy Ditti, has prepared a series of lesser events for the entertainment of the school's guests. Preceding the football game there will be a float parade, in which all campus organizations will have entries. The prize-winning float will be awarded a trophy by Iron Key, senior honorary society.

The alumni banquet in the evening will follow open house by all fraternities and sororities. The evening will be climaxed by a monster bonfire, victory or no victory, followed by a dance in the balroom of the Durand Art Institute.

ST. HENRY PARISH OPENS $185,000 GOTHIC SCHOOL

Dedication Ceremony Set for Oct. 27.

THE REV. CHARLES H. EPSTEIN (Underwood & Underwood.)

The new school of St. Henry church, Ridge boulevard and Devon avenue, recently completed at a cost of $185,000 and said to be one of the finest and most modern parochial schools in the central states, was opened to children of the parish Monday morning. The school building is the first unit of a group of structures which will eventually include a new church, rectory, gymnasium and convent, all to be of the same type of Gothic architecture.

The school is situated in the center of the St. Henry parish property, on North Hoyne avenue several hundred feet south of Devon avenue. Henry J. Schlacks drew the plans for the building. At present only the ten classrooms on the second floor will be utilized while workmen are completing the interior work on the lower floor. Until this work is completed, the only St. Henry's school at 1920 Devon avenue will be used for several classes. Sister Corona is in charge of the school and the classes are instructed by the Poor Handmaids. Nearly 350 children have enrolled for the fall semester.

The building program planned by the parish has been given considerable impetus during the last two years, largely due to the efforts of the Rev. Charles H. Epstein, pastor of the church. Father Epstein came to St. Henry in July, 1927, from St. Francis church, at Newberry avenue and 12th street. He succeeded the Rev. F. Joseph Ruetershoff, who retired after 36 years as leader of the rapidly growing parish.

The dedication of the new school will be held on Oct. 27 at which time the cardinal will inspect the building for the first time.

A revelation in tone quality and furniture craftsmanship

RADIO at first was just an electrical novelty. Popular demand forced its development as a musical instrument. To-day, it must be in addition, a beautiful piece of furniture—a fitting companion to the artistic furnishings which distinguish the better American homes.

A truly up-to-the-minute receiver, then, is the Peck & Hills Radio, embodying all the qualities demanded by discriminating radio buyers. Tone is assured by the master design of the chassis, the vital part of radio. The quiet elegance and distinction of the console make it a thing of beauty.

To achieve tone brilliance, the Peck & Hills Radio engineers have spared no efforts. They have eliminated nothing essential. The volume is full and clear—without distortion. The tuning is sensitive to the highest degree—a slight turn of the dial moves completely off one station and to another. For the DX fan it will bring in distant signals clearly and a turn of the volume control brings them to program strength. Extra power is well under control in the push-pull amplification using two type 245 tubes. Matched dynamic speaker completes the ensemble mechanically—and the beautiful walnut cabinets in an array of masterful designs, make the whole perfect.

QUIN RYAN SET TO BROADCAST WORLD SERIES

New Booths Are Ready at Wrigley Field.

Quin Ryan will begin the broadcast of the first Chicago world's series since the advent of radio on Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. Microphones have been installed in the new glass broadcasting booth at Wrigley field, which will be used for the first time as the series opens. The booth is situated in the most advantageous position possible and will be in constant telephone connection with the score board.

Quin Ryan has been broadcasting baseball games constantly since the city series of 1924. He and Graham McNamee were selected as the radio reporters on the national chain broadcasts to announce the Pittsburgh-Washington world's series in 1925 by Baseball Commissioner Judge K. M. Landis. Quin Ryan, and consequently W-G-N, have broadcast more baseball games than any other announcer and station on the air.

Broadcast Every Day.

For the last three seasons there has been a baseball broadcast from W-G-N every day during the season. During the last season there have been the daily play-by-play broadcasts made from the Chicago parks and, in addition, minute telegraphic reports broadcast as they were dispatched from the out of town parks.

After the first two games the scene of action will be removed to Philadelphia. The broadcast from there will be made in coöperation with the National Broadcasting company.

Football Series Near.

On Saturday, Oct. 12, W-G-N will begin its greatest series of football broadcasts. The officials at the University of Wisconsin have agreed to postpone the season opening kickoff until the fourth game of the world's series is completed. The Wisconsin-Northwestern game will be reported yard by yard by Quin Ryan.

BLUE A.C. LONG LIFE TUBES

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

SWEET are the uses of the radio station. Lecturing last week in Wisconsin we heard the story of a broadcasting station in a nearby town that rented fifteen minutes per day to a radio comedian. The comic fellow sang his songs and delivered his monologue, and then announced that his program was broadcast "through the courtesy" of a certain clothing manufacturer.

He said he would be glad to meet his many friends of the radio audience and would welcome them in the studio. When the listeners flocked to the studio, they found the walls draped with all kinds of men's suits and before they got out many of them had been sold a new suit—with two pairs of pants.

ANNOUNCER Pat Barnes tells the story of the fellow who just bought his first radio set and boasted that it was so good that he could get three stations at once.

MUSICIANS are eager for jobs in the radio studios. For one thing, they do not have to dress for the performances. No more of the stiff postures in the formal attire of the symphony concert or the theater orchestra pit. No more glare of the spotlight, and no more monotony of same music night after night in the musical shows.

Many radio orchestras have pictures taken in the garb they would have the audience believe they work in. We have seen motley groups of boys posing as forest rangers, railroad conductors, gypsies and whatnot, but in reality the majority are glad to doff their coats, vests and collars and feel at ease. The only hardship imposed upon them is the rule of silence, and instructions for shortening or expanding a program are flashed to them on a blackboard.

Down east in some studios the announcers are required to wear dinner jackets!

DO YOU RADIO listeners remember 'way back when——

The late Charlie Erbstein used to chuckle—and sing "Christopher Columbo" and "The Spanish Bull Fight"—and plead for cigarets for the soldiers?

The forerunner of radio at Comiskey park was the installation of the horns all about the grandstands, through which the batteries and pinch hitters used to be announced?

Two of the finest harmony teams on the air [both since dissolved] were Tommy Malie and Jack Little, and George Little and Larry Shay? And remember both teams wrote a lot of good songs, such as the former's "Jealous" and the latter's "Too Tired"?

George Hay, "the Solemn Old Judge," came up from Memphis to do such fine and homey announcing for the new station WLS?

Everybody had a crystal set—and a "cat's whisker"—and the aerial running around the picture molding on the wall?

Monday night was designated as "silent night," when all of the Chicago stations would shut down at 7 o'clock, in order that listeners might tune distant broadcasters more clearly?

The whole town listened to the seemingly endless Democratic convention in New York, with the series of roll calls invariably starting with "Twenty-four for Underwood"?

The Loos brothers, Billy and Ernie, were heavy radio favorites in Chicago?

Cigar stores and other shops gave away "applause cards" for the listeners' use in writing comments to radio stations?

Entire theatrical productions used to be broadcast from the stage in Chicago theaters, "Blossom Time" and "White Cargo" were broadcast by the old KYW, and "The Student Prince" and DeWolf Hopper's production of "The Mikado" by W-G-N. Then the Actors' Equity started an agitation and demanded that every player in the company be paid for a whole extra performance—one-eighth of a week's salary—if any part of a show were put on the air; so the broadcaster desisted from putting microphones in theaters even if the managers desired it for publicity's sake?

Station W-G-N broadcast its Amateur Nights, and Spelling Bees, and Old Fashioned Favorite Song contest?

The chain announcers in New York used to enumerate all of the stations through which the program was being broadcast, and conclude the show by giving their own initials?

The papers used to publish weird diagrams and "hookups" for the early listeners who made their own sets?

Most radio singers were chanting the million verses of "How do you do, Everybody, how do you do"?

The Duncan Sisters were wont to broadcast almost every night, during their long runs of "Topsy and Eva," featuring the songs, "Rememberin'," and "I Never Had a Mammy"?

The long since dispersed staff of KYW consisted of "Sen" Kaney, Sally Menkes, Herbie Mintz, Art Linick, Bobby Brown, Lee Sims, Steve Trumbull, Frank Clark, Grace Wilson and the "Harmony Girls," Edith Carpenter and Grace Ingram?

A famous oatmeal company used to sell five dollar sets made out of their cardboard oatmeal cartons?

The Edgewater Beach station was WJAZ and the Drake hotel station was WDAP?

This announcer was "Uncle Walt" and the children's period was "Skeezix Time"?

It was seriously proposed to lay a government tax on all radio receiving sets and accessories, the funds to be distributed to the radio stations for their maintenance?

Radio stations, when starting in business, tried to get call letters which were abbreviations of the owner's name—as in the case of W-G-N, "World's Greatest Newspaper," and WEBH, "W-Edgewater Beach Hotel," and KTHS, "Kum to Hot Springs," and others?

The members of the family used headphones and sat around the receiver as though it were an ouija board?

[With apologies to Harvey Woodruff, the original "Way Back Wheneer"].

DILL ACCUSES RADIO ARBITERS OF FAVORITISM

Says Chain Organizations Control Programs.

WASHINGTON, D C.—[Special.]—The federal radio commission was brought to task on the senate floor recently by Senator C. C. Dill [Dem.] of Washington, who is one of the most vigorous promoters of radio legislation in congress, for its apparent favoritism for chain broadcasting systems as against the independent stations. Interrupting a debate on tariff, the western senator warned the radio commission that unless it changed its policy the public will demand that the United States government take over and control all broadcasting stations.

Senator Dill roundly criticized the commission for its continual postponement of putting into effect general order No. 43, which would prohibit the broadcasting of the same program from stations not more than 300 miles apart. This order, which was originally promulgated on Sept. 8, 1928, has been delayed several times because it would practically prohibit chain broadcasting in many localities except for an hour each night. The last postponement was made on Oct. 1, when its effective date was moved up until Dec. 31.

Control in Hands of Few.

"The radio commission has been granting wave lengths, power, and time in a manner that is tending to put the control of an effective radio service in the hands of a few great organizations," Senator Dill said. "The forty cleared channels established in this country today are fast driving out the independent use of radio in an effective manner—forty cleared channels, with thirty-eight of the forty cleared channel stations on chains. These channels were cleared for the purpose of giving the people radio service all over the country on those channels—and they have placed those channels in the very best places on the dial, in spite of the fact that they heterodyne and cause harmonics beyond the limits of their own channels.

"The commission, under the law, has specific power over these chain stations. Nearly a year ago they issued an order which, if they had carried it out, would go far to remedy this situation, but every time the date for the enforcement of the order arrives they postpone it, and they have postponed it again and again."

Hits Proposed Mergers.

"Efforts to weaken the radio law in its monopoly features are being made all over this country today in the form of propaganda," he continued. "They want to repeal sections 13 and 17 of the radio law, so that the International Telephone and Telegraph company can buy the Radio corporation's interoceanic stations, and they want to pay $40,000,000 worth of stock for them.

"Mr. Behn said they were worth $25,000,000 when he was on the stand before our committee last June. Those stocks are selling today for more than $100,000,000; and, if it is permitted, there will be $75,000,000 of water to begin with upon which cable and telephone rates must be made high enough to pay dividends."

ON W-G-N TUESDAY

Mario Chamlee, noted lyric tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company, who will be heard Tuesday evening, Oct. 8, at 8 p. m. over W-G-N.

Angora Deserts Pastor for W-G-N Organ Music

A clergyman in Somonauk, Ill., is fond of cats. His large Angora, Rags, sits purring and blinking contentedly at his feet as the pastor prepares the message for his flock. However, he is thinking seriously of beginning a suit for alienation of affections. As soon as Larry Larsen, organist at W-G-N, Chicago, begins to play Rags is roused. Listening, he walks leisurely to the loud speaker and curls up, again contentedly, before it.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB PROGRAM ON AIR TONIGHT

The first broadcast of the Chicago Sunday Evening club's twenty-third season goes on the air tonight with Bishop Charles P. Anderson, for thirty years bishop of the Espiscopal church in the Chicago diocese, giving the principal address. R. Floyd Clinch, a trustee of the club, and Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, moderator of the Presbyterian Church of America, will take part while President Clifford W. Barnes will preside. WMAQ will carry the program.

The club already has received requests from listeners in over twenty states and Canada, asking that information regarding these weekly services be sent to them.

Bishop Anderson, who is now vice chairman of the House of Bishops, and therefore the second ranking churchman in the Episcopal denomination of America, has chosen for his subject "Chicago Day," and the general theme of the meeting will be civic in character.

Edgar Nelson, director of music, states that the choir of 125 contains more solo material than in any previous season. Music students from all parts of the country are enrolled in this choir. Tonight they will sing "Hail Bright Abode," by Wagner, "Bless Our Land," by Cherubini, "Ho Every One That Thirsteth," by Martin. A new contralto soloist, Miss Eva Horadesky, will sing "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain," by Harker. Mark Love and Mabel Sharp Herdien will have solo parts.

ACOUSTICS EXPERTS SOUGHT.

A broad knowledge of electricity and acoustics is necessary for a new side line that has sprung up in the many sided radio business. That is the installation and maintenance of large sound amplifiers and public address systems in hotels, auditoriums, theaters and schools. Experts in this sort of work are in considerable demand, according to engineers.

WHITE HOUSE STUDIO ACOUSTICS PERFECT, ENGINEERS DECLARE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It was discovered when President Hoover broadcast for the first time from the recently restored presidential studio in the east wing of the White House that the acoustics here were what is termed in the broadcasting world as "brilliant."

President Hoover never spoke with a better acoustical background than he did that night, according to radio engineers.

Nor was the natural tone of voice sacrificed, as is often the case when a voice comes through too clearly.

CHICAGO ANNUAL RADIO SHOW TO COME OCT. 21-27

Chicago's Radio show will open for its eighth annual session on Monday, Oct. 21, and continue through Sunday, Oct. 27.

So complete is this year's exhibition that the facilities of the Coliseum, where the show will be held, will be severely taxed.

In a demonstration of television citizens of the central west will be accorded the first view of the most advanced status of radio's smaller sister.

There will be a "Radio Queen," the winner of an essay contest on the subject, "What My Radio Means to Me." Thousands of letters have been received by the management of the show. The woman whose essay is judged the best exposition on the utility of her radio set will be brought to Chicago as the guest of the radio show.

Arctic Flyer Scientists to Use Radio in Search

WASHINGTON.—A license to use the radio channels between 200 and 300 kilocycles for use in the million dollar aerial search of the Arctic northwest near the Arctic circle for Col. C. D. McAlpine and his party of seven explorer-geologists has been granted by the federal radio commission to the Curtiss flying service of New York. The radio equipment is to be operated on the amphibian plane bearing the numbers NC4443. The license is good for only 90 days, and the call letters are KHEB.

TOM, DICK, HARRY TO SING SANDERS' NEW SONG HIT

When Quin Ryan's voice introduces the Ozite Cushioneers Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock listeners are going to hear one of the most interesting programs these newcomers have yet presented. Old and new favorites are being offered.

With Tom, Dick, and Harry vocalizing, the Cushioneers offer first that new song by Joe Sanders of the famous Coon-Sanders aggregation, "I Gotta Great Big Date." The trio, who are fast proving one of the features of these programs, are also to sing "Break Away."

Lawrence Salerno, soloist, is to sing "My Mother's Eyes."

Radio May Set Watch If You Forget About It

The experiments of the Elgin National Watch company of Elgin, Ill., in the use of radio to regulate timepieces will be continued as the application for a renewal of license has been granted by the federal radio commission. At a recent hearing it was explained that the Elgin research men expected to devise a means of setting watches by radio while they are in the owners' pockets.

go on the air for the first time

AT 4:30 P.M., THIS AFTERNOON

Philco, the Balanced-Unit Radio, fittingly sponsors the outstanding radio events of the year—the world's finest orchestra in a series of three nation-wide broadcastings. Tune in this afternoon . . . and mark these red-letter radio days on your calendar: Sunday, November 3rd; Sunday, December 8th. Each symphonic concert will be from 4:30 P. M. to 5:30 P. M. over station WCFL.

If you want to clearly hear the glorious music of the Philadelphia Orchestra, listen in on a Balanced-Unit Philco, the radio that is unique in trueness and clearness of tone. Visit your dealer—he will gladly arrange a free home demonstration, with easy terms if you decide to buy.

People who take excellence for granted naturally turn to the new all-electric screen grid

Eveready Radio

THE PRECISION INSTRUMENT

THERE ARE many fortunate people in this world to whom good taste is second nature. They live pleasantly, yet not ostentatiously. They dress well, yet without extremes of style. Every possession of theirs bespeaks an admirable and tempered attitude toward living.

And quite naturally these are the people who are buying the new Eveready Radio. For there, too, just as in their houses, their clothes, yes, even their friends, they take excellence for granted . . . a radio which brings the smartest dance-orchestra into their living-room . . . which takes them to the sidelines of the big games . . . which places them ten feet from the speaker's table . . . this is the sort of reception they expect, and get—from this remarkable radio receiver.

But such people—those who are buying the new Eveready Radio—look for something more in their material possessions. They want permanence. This radio receiver is built to last. It is precision-built. Each part is put together with as much care as if an aviator's life depended on the winding of a coil. The assumption is that Eveready Radio users want a fine instrument, as fine in its way as all their other material possessions.

Mystifying technical names, new accoutrements, devices and mechanisms bore the buyers of this radio. They know they have the best. They know that improvements will be added from time to time as the large scientific organization which makes this receiver tests and uncovers their merits. But they leave the details to the experts. That is their attitude towards radio . . . houses . . . motor-cars . . . life in general.

And so, if you are interested in effects and take the causes for granted, if you order your life according to this principle and to the point, you will want the new Eveready Radio. See it. Hear it. Note how beautiful the cabinetwork is. Ask for the explanation, if you like, of its "weather-proof" principle; but remember that the effect is this—even on muggy nights the reception is remarkably clear.

8 UPTOWN LIONS NAMED ON BOARD AND COMMITTEES

The appointment of eight members of the Uptown Lions club to the board of governors and committees was announced last week by Walter E. Schneider, secretary. A. D. Steffen has been named chairman of the board of governors. Other new members are Fred C. Klein and E. V. Smedes. Arthur P. Feiger heads the attendance committee. He is assisted by Ben Dictor, Elmer Swanson and Lisle Hart. E. C. Carleton has been made chairman of the speakers committee.

A dinner party will be held on Oct. 23 at the Sheridan Plaza hotel, Sheridan road and Wilson avenue. The committee in charge includes John P. Keating, C. A. Jackson, and Mr. Carleton.

BENJAMIN GROSS, CEMETERY HEAD, TAKEN BY DEATH

Wholesale Druggist Until Recent Years.

Special funeral services were held last week by the Congregation Anshe Emes for Benjamin Gross, 67 years old, who died after an illness of more than two years. Mr. Gross was a pioneer member of the congregation and had been superintendent of its cemetery for more than 37 years.

He was born in Lithuania and came to Chicago 44 years ago. He had been in the wholesale drug business, but retired several years ago. He and Mrs. Gross, who survives him, resided at 1519 Olive avenue.

Two sons and two daughters survive him: Benjamin Gross Jr., 1451 Gregory street; Maurice Gross; Mrs. F. E. Mollner, 6038 Claremont avenue, and Mrs. Samuel N. Edison, 823 Junior terrace.

Rabbi Solomon Goldman officiated at the rites, which were held at 4911 Broadway.

MRS. THOMPSON'S FUNERAL SERVICES HELD ON TUESDAY

Funeral services were held Tuesday at the First Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston for Mrs. Abia L. Thompson, who died Monday at her home, 721 Simpson street, after a long illness.

Mrs. Thompson, who was the widow of D. D. Thompson, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate for many years, came to Evanston in 1892, identifying herself with the Methodist church. She was formerly a worker for the W. C. T. U. and conference treasurer of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of her church, as well as national recording secretary for the Woman's Home Missionary society.

She had spent more than 20 years working among the Jewish immigrants at Marcy center in Chicago and was a member of the University guild, the Woman's club and the Education aid.

The Rev. Ernest Fremont Tittle officiated at the services. Interment was at Rosehill.

Radiant Lodge Plans Party.

Radiant lodge of Good Fellowship club will hold a card party Wednesday evening at the Upton Masonic temple, 941 Lawrence avenue.

Hold Last Rites for Charles G. Franklin

Funeral services for Charles G. Franklin, police magistrate of Evanston, who died Sunday at Evanston hospital, were held Wednesday at the First Baptist church of Evanston. Dr. James Madison Stifler officiated. Active pallbearers were Mayor Charles H. Bartlett, Edward H. Payne, Chauncey S. Patrick, Thomas F. Airth, James G. Barber, and William J. O'Connell. A successor to Judge Franklin will not be appointed. Other judges will alternate in hearing his cases, as they did during the two weeks' illness that preceded his death.

Highland Park Church Club to Hear Gen. Wood

The Men's Fellowship club of the Highland Park Presbyterian church will resume its monthly dinner concerts Friday evening at which time Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck and company, will be the principal speaker. A community sing at 6 o'clock, followed by the banquie and a program, feature these events. The November dinner will be the annual father-son affair, and Dr. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church and head of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, will be the speaker at the December meeting.

Many of These Modern Features Are Exclusive With the New Grebe

Screen Grid Tubes—The use of which results in sensitivity never before attained.

New Control for New Power—But in the New Grebe this added power is controlled. Overlapping of stations is eliminated . . . strays are kept out. You get the full tone value made possible by that exclusive Grebe feature—the Equalized Band Pass Filter.

Single Audio Stage Means No Hum—Grebe reception is so strong . . . so pure in tonal characteristics . . . that only a single audio stage is needed. Hum and microphonic noises are eliminated.

Large Diameter Speaker . . . an Original Grebe Idea—Full tone range is effectively accomplished by special large diameter electrodynamic speaker . . . so successfully introduced by Grebe.

For Superb Reproduction of Phonograph Records—You can play your favorite phonograph records by a mere turn of the tuning dial. This automatically connects the phonograph pick-up with specially wound transformer.

Cabinets Designed for Lasting Beauty and Acoustic Perfection—The New Grebe is obtainable in a wide choice of selected walnut and mahogany lowboy and highboy models. Furniture of characteristic beauty and dignity, expertly designed for acoustic properties. In a word, Grebe craftsmanship.

In the New Grebe, just announced, you find something you have long sought . . . but never before discovered . . . Tri-toned* radio. Music . . . with all that the word suggests . . . comes to you in its full, natural beauty. Distant and local stations . . . stations from all points on your dial . . . now get through to your home the full measure of tonal splendor.

The secret? Screen Grid tubes, of course. Yet Screen Grid tubes alone are not enough. In this one radio . . . which is setting next year's standards of design and re-production . . . you find combined with Screen Grid that exclusive Grebe development . . . the "Equalized Band Pass Filter."

Newer than Screen Grid Tubes

This ingenious device, worked out in the Grebe laboratories, controls the remarkable power of the Screen Grid tubes . . . without in the least subduing it. Outside noise and interference never reach the detector tube. A world of power . . . kept silent.

Radio is not a side-line . . . with Grebe

The craftsmanship which is the secret of Grebe Tri-tone* performance goes back for twenty years. Long before the days of broadcasting Grebe was building fine precision radio instruments . . . many of which did valiant service, during the World War, in the radio rooms of our fleets and those of our Allies. What is Tri-toned Radio?*

Every musical instrument has three distinct characteristics: 1. Pitch, by which we distinguish the note as being high or low; 2. Intensity, or loudness; and, 3. Tone, or character by which we distinguish the sound of one musical instrument from another. In Grebe Radio you have re-production that gives you perfect blending of all three characteristics without unnatural over-emphasis of any part of the scale.

'DEVIL'S DISCIPLE' FIRST PLAY FOR THEATER GUILD

North Shore Actors Are Rehearsing.

Rehearsals are under way for the first North Shore Theater Guild play of the season, "The Devil's Disciple," by George Bernard Shaw, which will be presented on the Guild's circuit of the north shore towns in November.

Production of the play has been secured through arrangements with the Theater Guild, Inc., of New York. J. Williams Macy of Winnetka is chairman of the guild's production committee in charge of the play and the director is Charlotte Barrows Chorpenning, director of the Playshop Acting company at Northwestern university.

With this production the guild initiates its new policy of a different director and an entirely different set of actors for each play.

Second Play in January.

The second production of the guild will be "The Rise of Silas Lapham" a dramatization of the novel of the same name by William Dean Howells, to be produced in January. The play was dramatized from the novel by Lillian Sabine expressly for the New York Theater guild and produced by them several years ago.

In addition to the officers already announced for the season, ten North Shore residents have been elected to the board of directors. They include two newcomers, Mrs. F. C. White and Miss Zoe Comer.

Mrs. White has appeared in many of the North Shore Theater guild productions, most recently in "Lilies of the Field," and Miss Comer, director of plays presented at Deerfield Shields Township High school, played for the guild in "Number Seventeen" and "The Man with the Load of Mischief."

Fall Campaign Started.

The directors reelected to their positions are: Mrs. Sherman Aldrich, Mrs. Laird Bell, Walter R. Bridgeman, Frank Parker Davis, Mrs. Harry C. Holloway, Louis Ellsworth Laflin Jr., Leslie M. Parker, and Gordon Wilson.

Mrs. Aldrich, who is general chairman of the membership committee of the guild, has started the annual fall campaign for subscriptions. More than one hundred guild enthusiasts will secure 1,500 subscriptions of $8 each before the first performance, Nov. 7.

Chairman of the local committees in each town are: Central Evanston, Mrs. Karl Hale Dixon; south Evanston, Miss Greta Goffe; north Evanston, Miss Helen M. Sanford; Wilmette, Mrs. Robert Stoddard; Winnetka, Mrs. Merritt Lum; Glencoe, Mrs. Dwight C. Orcutt; Highland Park, Mrs. Constant C. Hopkins, and Lake Forest, Mrs. Clifford P. McCullough.

Subscription to the guild entitles the holder to two tickets for each of the four productions or eight to one, or however he wishes them divided, and the revenue gained forms the backing for the productions. In eight years the number of subscribers has grown from 250 to 1,400 and more than that is assured for this year.

Each play is produced in every town which has a local committee. All operations of the guild are directed from the studio at 1706 Sherman avenue, Evanston, and requests for information may be directed to John Allen Stewart, business manager.

AMATEUR PHOTOGS, HERE'S A CHANCE TO PROVE YOUR SKILL

What does your family do on a rainy day? Say it with photographs and win a prize in The Tribune's photo contest. Perhaps the youngsters turn the attic upside down and most likely the co-ed daughter curls up in a big chair with a book and a box of caramels. Maybe mother spends the day making cookies, but Jack and Tom will be off for a hike in hip boots and slickers.

Dull day photographs are an interesting problem to any amateur camera fan and doubly so with a chance to win some prizes. The Tribune will pay $5 for the best picture taken by an amateur. It will pay $3 for the second best and $2 for the third. All pictures must be taken in the Chicago area.

Address entries to Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section of The Tribune. The name and address of the photographer should be printed plainly on the back of the print as well as the names of all persons in the picture.

The contest is open only to amateurs and the editor will be the final judge. Theme, treatment, and clearness of the print will be taken into consideration. No pictures will be returned.

WHEN SKYSCRAPERS GLEAM IN THE DARKNESS

VALIANTS OF FIRE THAT SWEPT CHICAGO FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO

When Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lantern in her stable down in De Koven street she started several days of the hardest work Chicago firemen ever did. Only a handful of the men who fought the greatest fire in American history Oct. 8 and 9, 1871, are alive. One of them is Thomas Canty, who lives among his books, his pictures and his memories at 1113 West Madison street. At the time of the fire he was 23 years old and was a member of Engine company No. 13, 119 Dearborn street. The picture at the left shows Engine company No. 24, now located at 2447 Warren avenue. Above and at the right are the members of old Engine company No. 12, then at 1641 Lake street. Their engine was a giant of its time. The picture below is of Engine company No. 7, which was stationed in Blue Island avenue near Harrison street.

FIGHTER OF '71 BLAMES FIRE ON COW'S IRE

Says Bossy Resented Second Milking.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

The cause of the great Chicago fire, the 58th anniversary of which will take place on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, has these many years been attributed to Mrs. O'Leary's cow. But what caused Mrs. O'Leary's cow to kick over the lantern in the barn on De Koven street, the result of which was perhaps the most devastating conflagration in history?

What circumstance motivated bossy to wreck the means of illumination that led to the blaze that licked up 18,000 buildings, whose contents were valued at $200,000,000, cost nearly 300 lives, and left 100,000 persons homeless?

Didn't Want to Be Bothered.

Thomas Canty, 1113 West Madison street, one of the nine surviving veteran firemen who fought in the fire of 1871, says that a party was being held at the O'Leary house that long ago night, that the cow had already been milked early in the evening and that it was the desire of some one, later on, to secure more milk for the making of punch, which caused the animal to object. "She had been milked once," says Mr. Canty, "and she didn't want to be bothered again."

There have been various versions about the incident. One is that some one besides Mrs. O'Leary tried to milk the cow and thus aroused her ire. Another is that a man who bought milk from the O'Leary's had run up a bill and, upon being denied further credit, set fire to the cow shed for revenge. In fact the tale that the cow had anything to do with the fire has been branded as a legend, spontaneous combustion of hay in the loft of the shed being blamed. The latter was the version of the O'Leary family who lost cows, horse and barn, which were not covered by insurance.

Blames Cow's Disposition.

Thomas Canty, aged 81, places the blame on the cow's disposition upon being milked a second time on the same night to provide an ingredient for the party's punch, and his statements concerning his memories of the fire are as emphatic as they are vivid.

Mr. Canty lives alone in a room on the third floor above a shoe store on West Madison street, close to the heart of the throbbing city that sprung up from the ashes of the '71 disaster. It can hardly be said, however, that he lives alone for he has acquired the books of the best authors and with these he spends his spare hours. During the day he works in Douglas park.

"The big fire? Yes the anniversary's getting close," said Mr. Canty. "There was a bad fire on Oct. 8 in 1871 that I worked on. It was between the river and Jefferson street and Van Buren and Adams street. But the big fire started at 8 o'clock on the night of Oct. 9. I was with engine 13, 119 Dearborn street, a pipeman, 23 years old. I'd been with the company a year and a half.

"This is how I'd gotten my job with the department. I was born at Oswego, N. Y., where I'd worked on the canal boats. Oswego couldn't support its population increase and when I was 18 I came west and landed in Chicago. I was passing the fire station on Dearborn street one day and I told the boys there they weren't hitching up their horses right. They asked me if I could do it better and I showed them how we had done it with the canal horses. It got me my job.

All Frame Buildings.

"Chicago was all frame buildings except in the heart of the city in those days. A four story structure was considered high. Well, along came the

Forest Park's Bright Lights on Tomorrow

All is ready for the Greater Forest Park celebration to begin tomorrow and continue throughout the week to mark the completion of two major improvements in the village: a comprehensive street lighting system and the widening of Madison street and Roosevelt road.

A program for each day of the week has been prepared by the committee in charge. At 7 o'clock tomorrow evening the lights will be turned on by Mayor George Gold, followed by a parade of floats and automobiles beginning at Roosevelt road and Des Plaines avenue, traversing Oak Park, Maywood and River Forest and returning to Forest Park. This gives promises of being a gala affair with banks, stores and others represented.

Tuesday to Be Souvenir Day.

Tuesday has been designated by the committees in charge as souvenir day. Stores and shops throughout the village will offer customers appropriate souvenirs with their various purchases. On Wednesday evening a foot parade will march through the village. Thursday and Friday are to be special sales days and Saturday will mark the grand finale of the week's celebration.

H. F. Carlson, general chairman of the festivities, said last week that the new lighting system provides exceptional illumination. The residential streets have single globes, similar to those in use in Oak Park, and Roosevelt road and Madison street are equipped with double globes, each having 1,000 candle power. Roosevelt road has been widened ten feet, according to Mr. Carlson, and Madison street eight feet.

Promoters of Celebration.

Several committees have been active in making plans for the celebration. Members of the finance committee are W. F. Grosser, H. H. Hann, Ernest Witt, and H. F. Carlson. The program committee comprises H. C. Rieck, Charles Hussey, Leslie Hurwitz, and Joseph Butler.

The publicity committee is made up of Walter Yunker and Charles Eck, and the decoration committee is composed of Charles Brazda, M. Chiodo and Charles Meseke. Members of the parade committee are Chief Fred W. Licht, Chief John Pries, Louis Oswald, and Frank S. Zimmerman, and the personnel of the advisory committee is Mayor Gold, Albert L. Hall, Albert C. Roos, and Henry J. Mohr.

ELEVATED DRIVE CALLED BOON TO NEAR WEST SIDE

Project Boosted by Civic Leaders.

Prediction that building of the proposed elevated boulevard through the west side will revive areas near the loop which have depreciated in value under existing conditions was made yesterday by Ralph F. Kopperschmidt, president of the Empire Trust and Savings bank, Crawford and Milwaukee avenues. Voters of the west park district are to ballot Nov. 5 on a bond issue of $20,000,000 for the project.

The phenomenal development of Chicago in recent years has avoided the near west side almost entirely, Mr. Kopperschmidt pointed out. This fact, which he attributed largely to lack of adequate traffic connections with other portions of the city, has caused drastic depreciation of values affecting real estate which, for many reasons, should be among the most valuable in Chicago, the banker added.

"Such a project is bound to lead to building and development along its route and throughout the west side," Mr. Kopperschmidt continued. "The north side and the south side are developing at a much more rapid pace than the west side because the former are accessible by efficient traffic routes, the shore drives.

Foresees Population Gain.

"People prefer to live where traffic facilities are adequate, and the proposed superhighway will increase the population of the west side, thereby stimulating business.

"One of the arguments I have heard used against the superhighway is that such a rapid traffic boulevard will take business away from the local dealers because it will divert motorists from in front of their stores. This idea is absolutely false. There is no proof that because a driver passes a store he will drop in and buy. The driver who is driving a long distance, the man who will use the superhighway, has a definite destination. It is absurd to believe that he is window-shopping and will stop at random somewhere along the line.

"As for the route," Mr. Kopperschmidt concluded, "I believe it is the best that could have been selected on the west side because it runs entirely over what is now dead property, namely Kinzie street, and will give value to land now entirely undeveloped and worth little.

Bartholf Cites Other Projects.

William J. Bartholf, president of Crane Junior college, Jackson and Oakley boulevards, and a resident of Chicago for more than forty years, yesterday expressed himself in favor of the elevated boulevard and gave arguments to support his views.

"In all my years in Chicago I have never seen a dollar invested in so great a public improvement that did not bring back ten in return, but still certain interests fight the elevated highway," he said. "The trouble with them is that they have not learned that money must be spent if a city is to be built up.

"Most of us are learning this lesson, and money is being spent to build up Chicago. I am convinced, however, that the opposition to the project is composed of men not yet acquainted with the idea that no development can come without an expenditure.

"In years past," Mr. Bartholf continued, "west side residents who came into money used to move to another part of the city. It is improvements such as the great thoroughfare planned by the west park commissioners which will make this district a desirable community and not a district in which people live only because of necessity.

"The project under consideration is in my opinion a primary step in what

Downer, 1833 Pioneer, Gave Suburb a Name

This article is the seventeenth of a series on names of streets and suburbs of the west side.

Downers Grove, southwestern suburb of Chicago, was named after Pierce Downer, who settled in the vicinity on coming from Vermont in 1833. The locality was at one time the camping ground of Indian bands with whom the pioneers had acquaintance. Waubansie, chief of the Pottawattomies, lived in the grove a year before Mr. Downer arrived.

A history of Due Page county written in 1876 speaks of Downers Grove as "one of the quietest of places until thirteen years ago, when the railroad was completed from Chicago to Aurora, gradually making it more and more a suburb of Chicago."

"This in many ways helps toward refinement and stimulates our citizens to an ambition to keep pace with the times," adds the historian. "There may be drawbacks to this in the tendency to indulge in luxuries of city life beyond what we can afford, but if our people will not yield to the temptation to any greater extent in the future than in the past there will be no cause to regret our proximity to the city."

Chose a "Garden Spot."

Pierce Downer was of the same New England stock as the Wheatons and other pioneers who, on viewing the Chicago scene, chose the Du Page county territory rather than that nearer the lake. Downer decided that the locality he had finally chosen was the "garden spot," and as a farmer and student and highly respectable citizen his career appears to have been a rather enviable one.

Downer first came to Chicago to visit his son, Stephen, who was engaged in erecting the first lighthouse in Chicago. Settling inland, he became a practical and progressive farmer on the fertile acres and, we are told, made use of all improvements in farm machinery as they came along. It was his pride that his farm was one of the best tilled in the state. His fences were well kept, everything was neat and orderly, and his stock always in good condition.

Read Congressional Record.

And, though his life was a busy one, Mr. Downer kept himself posted on all the questions of the day. During his entire life he was a reader of the Congressional Record.

In his wife Mr. Downer found a faithful companion and helpmeet, and together they traveled life's journey for 55 years. Mr. Downer died the day following Mrs. Downer's death in 1883.

"PASSING TORCH" SERVICE HELD AT FLOWER SCHOOL

The ceremony of "Passing the Torch" was held by the Honor Club of Lucy Flower High School last Friday. According to this tradition, the president for last semester, Miss Esther Lambert, passed the torch to the new president, Miss Selma Soltner, admonishing her to carry on the high standards of scholarship and citizenship long cherished by the club.

The attributes of the club and the girls who were chosen to represent them at the ceremony were: Loyalty, Miss Francine Zimmerman; courtesy, Miss Margaret Toth; ambition, Miss Ruth Flaks; health, Miss Elsie Zalesky; good citizenship, Miss Helen Price; cleanliness, Miss Doris Bayard; thrift, Miss Nellie Martin. Other officers of the club are: Vice president, Miss Ruth Franson; secretary, Miss Josephine Drigot.

70 Crippled Children Are Rotary Guests

Seventy crippled boys and girls of the orthopedic department of J. Sterling Morton High school, Cicero, are cherishing seventy souvenir pencils and many more than seventy happy recollections of "swings and slides and thrilling rides" and a jolly dinner that they enjoyed at Medinah Country club, where they were guests of the Cicero Rotarians recently.

This was the second annual affair of this kind sponsored by the Cicero Rotary club. John Carlander, chairman of the committee in charge, arranged for the thirty-one automobiles driven by Rotarians, that transported the children from the school building to Medinah club and back to their respective homes in the evening. The entire afternoon was given over to sports under the supervision of instructors from the high school.

Rotarians Join Children at Dinner.

Some fifty members of the Cicero Rotary club interspersed themselves among the children at the dinner tables. Joseph Houze, president of the club, spoke briefly on the principles of Rotary. He referred to H. V. Church, superintendent of J. Sterling Morton schools, who is called the "daddy of the crippled children's department," as "the man who made it possible for these children to have special school attention." Supt. Church outlined the institution of the orthopedic department and spoke of the inspiration members of the Rotary club had given him in his work of establishing such a department.

Special Program for Children.

A special program was given by the children. While Joseph Hanzel played his saxophone, Henry Weigman, who has the use of neither his arms nor his legs, painted gay little little dancers on a canvas with a brush held between his teeth. Members of the Rotary committee were: John Carlander, chairman; Ben Braun, Dr. J. McLallen, Joseph Houze, N. F. Fultz, John Nepil, the Rev. Stuart Pratt, and George Wilde.

STRONG FORCES SEEKING DEFEAT OF FRANK REID

the congressman's district, so called because it includes the city in which he resides; but it stretches from the Wisconsin line all the way to the Indiana line, its four counties, McHenry, Kane, Du Page, and Will, bordering Lake and Cook counties to the west and south.

The population of those four counties makes it one of the big districts of the state and from each of them come reports that general opinion holds he will be beaten next April if there is a concerted movement in that direction. Companion reports are that such a movement is expected and even now may be taking shape.

Not Battler, Drys Assert.

Although Mr. Reid was elected in 1922, 1924, 1926 and 1928 as a dry, the drys of the district, and particularly those of his own county of Kane, are dissatisfied with him. They say he votes with them when a record test is made, but he does not battle for their cause or aid it except by his vote when it comes to a showdown.

That man is B. S. Pearsall, butter and dairy products magnate, a resident of Elgin and several times a millionaire. He not only is dry but ardently so. In politics he always has been on the side of reform. He was one of the financial supports in the election of State's Attorney Carbary. He was a battling reform alderman a quarter of a century ago.

Mr. Pearsall is in Europe and is not expected to return until about Thanksgiving day. At that time, it is believed, he will say definitely whether he will run against Reid and his decision will be the signal for the opening of the battle, for it will have some effect on the decision of other potential candidates of considerable political strength.

Boom for Chauncey Reed.

There are at least two of these. One is Chauncey W. Reed of Naperville, state's attorney of Du Page county, who in that office has made a record for law enforcement against strong drink, although he is not considered a dry. He is a young, active service man and a good sized boom for him was launched during the recent state convention of the American Legion at Rock Island.

State's Attorney Reed is now on his honeymoon. When he left he planned a six weeks' stay, so that he will be back on the scene slightly in advance of the decision awaited from Mr. Pearsall.

The same is said to be true of State Representative Frank A. McCarthy of the Fourteenth senatorial district, a resident of Elgin. He was one of the big men of the last session of the assembly in which, as in former sessions, he was the spokesman for the mine producers, who are numerous in his section. This is considered a big asset

NORTHWEST SIDE TO GET $744,000 IN IMPROVEMENTS

Street and Water Pipe Projects Approved.

Improvements which would cost property owners of the northwest side approximately $744,000 were approved at a public hearing recently held by the board of local improvements. Few objections were raised by residents to the street and water pipe projects for which the board desires to award contracts, and objections which were voiced were promptly overruled. Only in one instance was a project abandoned at the request of residents who would be assessed to bear the cost.

A paving job estimated to cost $146,000 which was to have included improvement of Cornelia avenue between the C., M., St. P. & P. railroad and New England avenue was amended at the request of property owners to eliminate that street. Roscoe street, between Natoma and New England avenues, Normandy avenue, between Cornelia avenue and Roscoe street, and Rutherford avenue, between Addison and Roscoe streets will be improved as planned.

The largest project approved is the paving of California avenue between Montrose avenue and Addison street at an estimated cost of $200,500, which includes laying an asphalt pavement and widening to 42 feet.

A third improvement costing more than $100,000 is planned for the following system of streets: Thorndale avenue, between Kedzie and Central Park avenues, and Christiana, Bernard, St. Louis, and Drake avenues, between Peterson and Thorndale avenues. It would cost $119,000.

Other paving jobs to which no objections were made are on the following streets: Ainslie street between Spaulding and Lawndale avenues, costing $62,000; a system including Oketo and Ogallah avenues, between Avondale and Isham avenues; Oriole and Olcott avenues, between Devon and Isham avenues, and Isham avenue, between Avondale and Olympia avenues, costing $59,500; Wellington avenue between Austin and Narragansett avenues, at a cost of $56,000; New England avenue between Hayes avenue and Imlay street, costing $10,400; and Wabansia avenue between Neva and Harlem avenues, costing $9,500.

Property Owners Object.

Paving of Spaulding avenue between Fullerton and Wrightwood avenues was also recorded as approved despite the fact that property owners requested its abandonment by the city since they had arranged for a private contractor to do the work. They presented a petition containing signatures of residents who wanted the work done privately, but President Faherty invited the residents to file a formal petition against the project with the board within 30 days.

The proposed opening of condemnation proceedings for widening Tripp avenue between Belmont and Wellington avenues was also recorded as approved despite the fact that a score of property owners declared themselves opposed. A long court fight is in store for the city if it goes through with plans for the improvement, the board was warned.

Proceedings for the opening of Lawrence avenue between Austin and Narragansett avenues and widening the street to 80 feet were approved by property owners without dissension.

Y. W. C. A. GIRLS TO VISIT CITY'S QUEER PLACES

Poking into queer places in all corners of the city, seeing Chinese operas in the foreign quarters, buying in Maxwell street, listening to the chimes of St. Chrysostom's, discovering the real Chicago interesting as few Chicago people know it, are a few of the things that the girls who go on the Y. W. C. A. know our city trips will be doing this year. They are out to find every section of Chicago with all the unusual shops, industrial plants, artists' studios, churches, of every creed and nationality, all the interesting places off the beaten track of the ordinary Chicago tourist and Chicagoan who usually sees only the more widely known beauty spots of the city.

There are know your city trips on week nights and on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. A Y. W. C. A. hostess accompanies each group. In some places official guides conduct the parties.

The first trip of the season is scheduled for next Tuesday, a Chinese dinner followed by opera. The next one, Thursday, is to the Bahai temple, and a tour of the Wilmette harbor will be held on the same day. Friday the sightseers will journey to Maxwell street, and on the evening of Oct. 15 they will dine at a Swedish restaurant.

Private and club parties will be arranged on request, and information on any of the trips may be obtained at any of the Y. W. C. A. branches.

Ladies' Night on Oct. 18.

West Irving lodge, No. 1154, A. F. & A. M., will observe ladies' night Oct. 18 in the Odd Fellows' temple, 5835 Irving Park boulevard.

THE CHOICE OF THE EXPERTS

O'NEILL VS. BARR TO BE HOTTEST SENATE BATTLE

Preliminaries Are Setting Pace for State.

Chicago and its suburbs have ringside seats for the most exciting fight now in the cards for the next legislative primary, the battle of State Representative Lottie Holman O'Neill to wrest from that veteran Senator Richard J. Barr, his seat in the upper chamber of the general assembly.

RICHARD J. BARR.

Nowhere else in the state is there anything like such a fight forecast. Those who love a good scrap are praying that it will remain a "two man" affair; that there will be no added starters to confuse the lines; and the two contestants are said to be telling their friends that they want nothing better than a straightaway contest to a finish without complications.

Mrs. O'Neill, the first woman member of the Illinois assembly, lives in Downers Grove, in Du Page county, which borders Cook county on the west. Senator Barr, who already has served twenty-seven years, resides in Joliet. That is in Will county, lying below Du Page and extending around the southern end of Cook. Together thy constitute the Firty-first district. Both are heavily Republican and the winner of the nomination of that party is considered as good as elected.

Preliminaries Set Pace.

The primary is not until next April, but heavy preliminaries for this go are already in progress, setting the pace for the rest of the state.

Even those who predict a tough—if not an impossible—tussle for Mrs. O'Neill give her credit for immense courage. Her first election to the lower house came in 1922. Since then she has been reëlected three times for the regular two year term. In her four regular sessions she has won recognition as a scrapper for her pet measures.

Barr is considered a giant in the assembly. For several terms now he has been recognized as the boss of the senate, a place that he continued to hold, although sidetracked, at the wish of Gov. Emmerson this year from his old honor of the presidency pro tempore.

And Mrs. O'Neill isn't known as a giant killer. While she did win a place in the lower house four times running, members of that chamber have two practical advantages that do not occur in connection with contests for senate seats. First, each of the friends of a candidate for the house may cast as many as three votes for him. A supporter of a senatorial aspirant can give hi monly one vote. Second, the senatorial district committee of each party may limit its nominees for the house to two, or even one. If the Democrats nominate only one in the Forty-first district and the Republicans only two, the primary settled the election except for the rare danger of an independent candidacy.

"Plumping" a Doubtful Factor.

In her four successes Mrs. O'Neill admittedly was the beneficiary of extensive cumulative voting or "plumping," the women of her district particularly giving her their three votes for the lower house. Since this three-vote power may be used to give one vote to each of three candidates, or one and one-half votes for each of two candidates, or three votes for one candidate, it is impossible to compute with mathematic accuracy the actual number of voters who marked for her in any of her four primaries or elections, and therefore to some extent might be expected to go along with her against Senator Barr. But some wiseacres contend that the returns show that Barr consistently has had more of the district's voters supporting him than she has had behind her.

Barr's Influence a Factor.

The next question that the district experts are mulling over in the cool of the autumn evenings is whether any great majority of those who supported Mrs. O'Neill for the lower house will carry on when it means an immense, direct loss to the district if Barr is retired and replaced by a senator who cannot be expected to exert anything like his influence at the state house. This, it is argued, would be especially true if his successor were to be a woman.

For many years Barr has been able to get for the counties of his district more than their normal share of state administration favor.

To accomplish these results for his district, his critics charge he played in with the administration during the eight years of Len Small in the state house. While Small may have held off some moves for which he could not win Barr's advance approval, it is said that the Joliet senator never attempted to array his strength in the senate against any Small legislative project.

This coöperation and sympathy with the man defeated by Emmerson last year, including his support of Small in the primary, probably will constitute a considerable part of Mrs. O'Neill's campaign material; but the whispered answer of the Barr supporters will be that he did it to get things for the district and that he got them.

Possible Third Entrant.

The one possibility of a third entrant in this race is said to be the fact that State's Attorney Hjalmar Rehn of Will county is none too friendly toward Barr and is said to have been urged to back a candidate for the senate against him.

But there is one complication in the O'Neill-Barr contest that is considered already a factor. Last year at the Republican national convention at Kansas City Mrs. O'Neill was the Deneen choice for national committeewoman to succeed Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, then the nominee for the post of congressman-at-large to which she was elected in November. Mrs. McCormick was a large factor in breaking a caucus deadlock which resulted in the election of Mrs. Bertha Baur to the committeeship with Deneen's consent.

Fast February, in the early days of this year's session of the legislature, Mrs. O'Neill issued a press statement attacking Speaker Shanahan because he refused her the chairmanship of the committee on education, which she had requested. She charged that his decision was dictated by Mrs. McCormick and Gov. Emmerson, and she attacked Mrs. McCormick in strong terms.

331 on Honor Roll at Marshall High School

The honor roll at Marshall High school now contains 331 students, including those at the branch of the school, according to a recent announcement. Three girls, Miss Bessie Zabelin, Miss Miriam Oiring, and Miss Beatrice Gutensky, have attained places on the roll seven times. Nine girls and one boy have been named for the honor six times. They are Miss Josephine Colagrossi, Miss Lillian Factor, Miss Alice Lapert, Miss Janith Maginnis, Miss Ruth Slabaugh, Miss Sarah Ziblat, Miss Pearl Morson, Miss Faye Torme, Miss Jean Goldberg, and Harry Kupersmith. To win a place on the honor roll a student must get an average of "E" or better.

District President

WOMEN'S CLUBS OF 7TH DISTRICT MEET THURSDAY

With the Park Ridge Improvement association as hostess and with Mrs. W. Earle Adams, 4845 North Hamlin avenue, presiding, the fall meeting of the Seventh district Federation of Women's clubs will be held Thursday at St. Luke's Lutheran church, Prospect avenue and Cedar street, Park Ridge, Ill.

On the program planned by the chairman, Mrs. Sebre M. Baldwin, 6040 Nickerson avenue, will appear James Farwell Edson in a talk on American opera; Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley on the American home; Miss Myrtle L. Carpenter on legislation, and Mrs. James H. Jackson on literature. Music will be furnisned by the hostess club. The Seventh district chairmen will give informal outlines of their plans and work for the year.

The district board meeting will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow at Independence park fieldhouse, Irving Park boulevard and Hamlin avenue.

A meeting was held for the Seventh district chairmen on Sept. 26th at the home of the vice president, Mrs. John Bunting Jr., 3650 North Kedvale avenue, at which the president, Mrs. Adams, gave out the annual reports and outlines to the new chairmen of the district and instructed them in their duties of the year.

Plan to Remodel Church.

Plans are being made for the remodeling of St. John the Baptist (Syrian) church, 1249 South Washtenaw avenue. The pastor is the Rt. Rev. Msgr. S. R. Roumie, O. S. B. M. St. John the Baptist parish has been in existence for twenty-two years.

FIREWORKS BOOM AS PORTAGE PARK OPENS FESTIVAL

Parade Starts Autumn Shopping Event.

With a display of fireworks and a parade of floats and automobiles, the two week fall festival of Portage Park was ushered in last week by the business men of the northwest community.

Centering at the "six corners" at Milwaukee and Cicero avenues and Irving Park boulevard, the festival embraces a double purpose; to open the fall shopping season and to celebrate the establishment of two new commercial enterprises in the district.

Two New Stores Opening.

The features of the celebration will be the opening of the new five story store and office building of the Klee Brothers company, clothiers, at Milwaukee and Cicero avenues, and the store and apartment block bounded by Milwaukee, Cuyler and Belle Plaine avenues, being completed by Michael Flicht.

The committee in charge, headed by V. E. Jones, has announced that the entertainment and features arranged indicate that the festival will be the finest celebration ever staged in the community. Numerous contests and special events are being held by the merchants, who formed an organization for the express purpose of advertising the shopping center by means of the festival. The coöperation of all residents of the area has also been enlisted in making the event more than a community affair.

Members of Committees.

The committees in charge are as follows:

Entertainment: Mr. Dedic.

Advisory: Ralph Davis, chairman; Peter Cleven, Oscar Carlson, Mr. Carlson, and Mr. Slade.

Finance: Fred Mayer, chairman; Al Slade, Art Thompson, John J. Dedic, and Mr. Jones.

Publicity: Milton Klee, chairman; J. J. Derx, R. B. Hart, Frank W. Barber, and B. J. Green.

Mr. Slade is secretary of the general committee and Mr. Mayer is treasurer.

$750,000 PAVING WORK HEARING DUE ON FRIDAY

Property Owners Given a Chance to Object.

Paving jobs in west side wards, estimated to cost property owners more than $750,000, will be taken up by the board of local improvements at a large public hearing in the city hall next Friday morning. Scores of property owners are expected to attend the session, which will be the third this fall. North and south side projects which the board also desires to have approved brings the total proposed expenditure for improvements to well over $1,500,000.

The largest west side project under consideration will be the proposed paving and widening of Ashland avenue between Roosevelt road and 22d street, part of the long delayed widening of that street across the entire city. Improvement of this section will cost $143,000, to be borne partly by property owners under a special assessment and partly by the city as a public benefit, and will be completed when the city finds funds to pay its share.

Approved in June.

The project was approved at a former hearing, in June, but is back for consideration on petition of property owners who want to change the specifications from asphalt to concrete. It will probably be approved after the board consents to the change.

Property owners on Milwaukee avenue between Halsted and Division streets will be asked to approve the proposed paving of that street at a cost of $201,000.

Paving jobs on the following streets will also be taken up: A system, at a cost of $75,500, including Byron street between Narragansett and Melvina avenues, Melvina avenue between Byron street and Berenice avenue, and Mobile avenue between Byron and Addison streets.

Other Improvements.

A system including Nagle avenue between Raven street and Milwaukee avenue and Haft and Hermitone streets between Nagle and Milwaukee avenues, at a cost of $59,000; Berwyn avenue between Leclaire and Laramie avenues and Leamington avenue between Berwyn and Elston avenues, at a cost of $25,000.

Albion avenue between Natoma and Newcastle avenues, costing $17,800; Leonard avenue between Central and Miltimore avenues, costing $16,000; Slocum street between Menard and Marmora avenues, costing $15,500; Leclaire avenue between Foster and Berwyn avenues, costing $13,000.

YIDDISH THEATER OPENS OCT. 14 IN LAWNDALE AREA

The Lawndale theater, Roosevelt road and Crawford avenue, will be opened Oct. 14 as the first playhouse in Chicago presenting musical comedies and light opera in Yiddish. A celebration at the theater is planned by the Roosevelt Road Commercial association and other civic and social organizations of the Lawndale district. Prominent Jewish residents of Chicago as well as a number of city officials have promised to take part in the affair.

Aaron Lebedeff, known as the Al Jolson of the Yiddish stage, arrived in Chicago Monday to become the star of the cast at the new theater. Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24th], who is on the arrangements committee, predicted that the theater would become the amusement center of the district where 175,000 Jews reside.

Pat Malone Guest of Austin Athletic Club

The newly organized Austin Athletic association held a meeting recently with Pat Malone of the Cubs as one of the principal guests. Dancing followed the meeting. Officers elected several days ago by members of the association are: President, L. A. Warner; secretary, Edward Peper, and treasurer, L. O. Runner. The board of managers is made up of the following: E. I. Tackaberry, R. P. Bluett, J. J. Mitchell and H. S. Newman.

Co-educational Club to Hold Card Party

The West Side Co-educational club will hold a card party at the Guyon hotel next Wednesday, Chicago day. There will be prizes for each table. Proceeds are to be devoted to the philanthropies of the club. At the first meeting of the season held last Tuesday Milan Lusk, violinist, gave a program. The chairman of the music committee is Mrs. A. E. Truesdell.

Mason School Group to Meet on Oct. 29

A board meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of the Mason school, 1800 South Kesler avenue, is announced for Oct. 29. The chairman of each committee is expected to attend or send one of the members. The first meeting of the general membership was held last Tuesday. Mrs. Elsie Nilson is now editing the Mason Public School News, which is published monthly by the association.

CRANE COLLEGE ADDS ITALIAN TO ITS CURRICULUM

The study of Italian has been added to the curriculum of Crane Junior college this semester as a result of many requests by students for work in that language. Dr. Gennaro Albachiara, member of the faculty of Loyola university, downtown college, was appointed to teach the subject.

Dr. Albachiara is a graduate of the University of Rome and is studying for a degree on romance languages at the University of Chicago. He has been teaching at Loyola for two years and resides at 1008 South May street.

William J. Bartholf, principal of Crane college, said yesterday that Italian was placed on the curriculum with the aid of Oscar Durante, member of the board of education and a leader in American-Italian circles in Chicago.

FIGHTER OF '71 BLAMES BLAZE ON BOSSY'S IRE

Claims Cow Resented the Second Milking.

big fire. The members of our company were worn out from fighting the Oct. 8 fire when we saw those burning clapboards flying over the city from the southwest. The strong gale carried the burning boards half a mile high.

"The alarm was turned in from the city hall. We went to Jefferson and Polk streets. The whole south side of the river was on fire. People were driving away with their worldly goods. Everything was in an uproar. Mike Kelly was in the pop business at Harrison and Clinton streets. His wares—some new temperance drink he had gotten out—were in the street and the stuff furnished a bit of refreshment in the midst of the hot flames.

Futile to Fight Flames.

"We gave all the energy we had in trying to ward off the fiery monster that fed on the dry buildings. That same night we went to the south side. The Grand Pacific had just been built. It was supposed to be fireproof, but it might as well have been a carpenter's bench covered with shavings. While the flames were fierce they were not so high, but it was no use fighting them.

"We worked on the south side of the river until the next day at noon, finishing up at a location about where Wacker drive now joins Michigan avenue and where there was a three story building. No food, no rest—just smoke and fire.

"The vicinity of the Illinois Central depot, South Water street and the lake was packed with freight that the owners hoped to get hauled away. Chicago became just a scene of waste. There were coal yards that burned for six months.

Lost Everything.

"We young fellows in the department—for we were young then, you know—had lost everything along with the rest of the folks. I did go back to our fire station to get my watch before it was too late. There is another member of that old company still surviving—Lieut. Albert N. Pendleton, who has been at Henrotin hospital for 14 years.

"Well, I stayed with the department until 1886—sixteen years. Then I went railroading. I remained in Chicago until 1901 and then until 1919 I ranched out in Montana. Ten years ago I came back to the old town that had grown up. It had grown up more than we old timers thought it would, and it's my opinion that it will continue to grow at a bigger pace than most of the present day folk think it will.

Never Such Another.

"No, there'll never be such another fire in Chicago. The city is undermined with water, the skyscrapers are fireproof and the fighting equipment is the best to be had. Still, I can't help but think sometimes of those three horses at old Engine 13—the pair of blacks pulling the engine who knew as much about fires as the firemen did, and the dapple gray mare that pulled the hose carriage.

"I may be past 80, but I can still do a good day's work, I'm thankful to say. Yesterday, out at the park, I kicked a football. My philosophy of life is 'labor and read good books.' If I was young again I'd go into the air service. One of the these days I'll be checking out; most of the boys who fought the big Chicago fire with me are gone."

RIDGEMOOR CLUB IN UNIQUE FIGHT ON TAX SHARKS

Handling an appeal for reduced assessments as a group matter, the Ridgemoor Improvement club, of which Michael A. Marine is president, is setting a new precedent in its fight against tax sharks.

Instead of having members appeal for reductions individually or through individuals who solicit such business on a percentage basis the club is filing all complaints through its own attorney, thus saving the members thousands of dollars.

Members of the club both on Montrose avenue and adjacent streets are being assessed for the paving of Montrose from Austin avenue to Narragansett avenue.

LOOKS BACKWARD

KNUD HENDERSON.

TRIBUNE READER SINCE 20 YEARS BEFORE BIG FIRE

Returning to Chicago to visit his daughter, Mrs. William Andresen, 4929 North Kedvale, and go through The Tribune plant and marvel at its giant presses, Knud Henderson, 94 years old, told of having read THE TRIBUNE for 78 years.

For the past few years, because of the weakness of his eyes, his son, with whom he now makes his home in Cambridge, Wis., has been reading the paper to him, but before that it was part of his daily ritual.

Mr. Henderson, who edited the first Norwegian song book published in this country, and who has written for Norwegian publications both here and in Norway, came over from the old country 80 years ago. He has been back four times, crossing the Atlantic nine times, his last trip just a few years ago.

He went back to Cambridge yesterday with an early edition of the Sunday comic section safely stowed away in his pocket.

JOSEPH LOVETT P.-T. A. TO HOLD EVENING MEETING

Joseph Lovett School Parent-Teacher association's fall and winter program will start with a meeting on the evening of Oct. 11 in the assembly hall of the school, 6333 Bloomingdale avenue.

Included on the evening's program are Arthur Burrage Farwell, who will talk on "Juvenile Protection."; Miss Mary Sugrue, the teacher representative for the evening, who will give some interesting sidelights on "From the School Point of View," and a program by the eighth grade pupils. A membership drive starts at this time, with the association asking every pupil to enroll both parents in the organization. A prize is offered to the room bringing in the largest number of new members. A special award will be given to the room having the largest number of fathers enrolled as members. Already the faculty is 100 per cent enrolled.

Officers for this term are: Mrs. G. Ernsting, president; Mrs. R. Plowe, first vice president; Miss Mary Sugrue, second vice president; Mrs. S. Small, recording secretary; Mrs. H. Kirkpatrick, corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. Houtsinger, financial secretary, and Miss M. L. Grumpacker, treasurer.

Lombard Lilac League Urges Autumn Planting

The Lombard Lilac league, intent on making that suburb "known the world over for its beauty and culture of lilacs," has issued an autumnal call to all residents that the time is nearing for fall planting of the bushes. The league has arranged through a local concern to supply the plants at cost, and is otherwise well advanced in its plans for a bigger and better "Lilac Time in Lombard, 1930."

Irving Park Baptists Observe Rally Week

Last Sunday was rally day in the Irving Park Baptist church of which the Rev. Earl F. Adams is pastor. Part of the rally week observance was a homecoming dinner with arrangements in charge of the women's union under the direction of its president, Mrs. A. W. Stahnke.

—Mr. Merchant!

Would you spend two cents

to make 1929 your biggest year in business

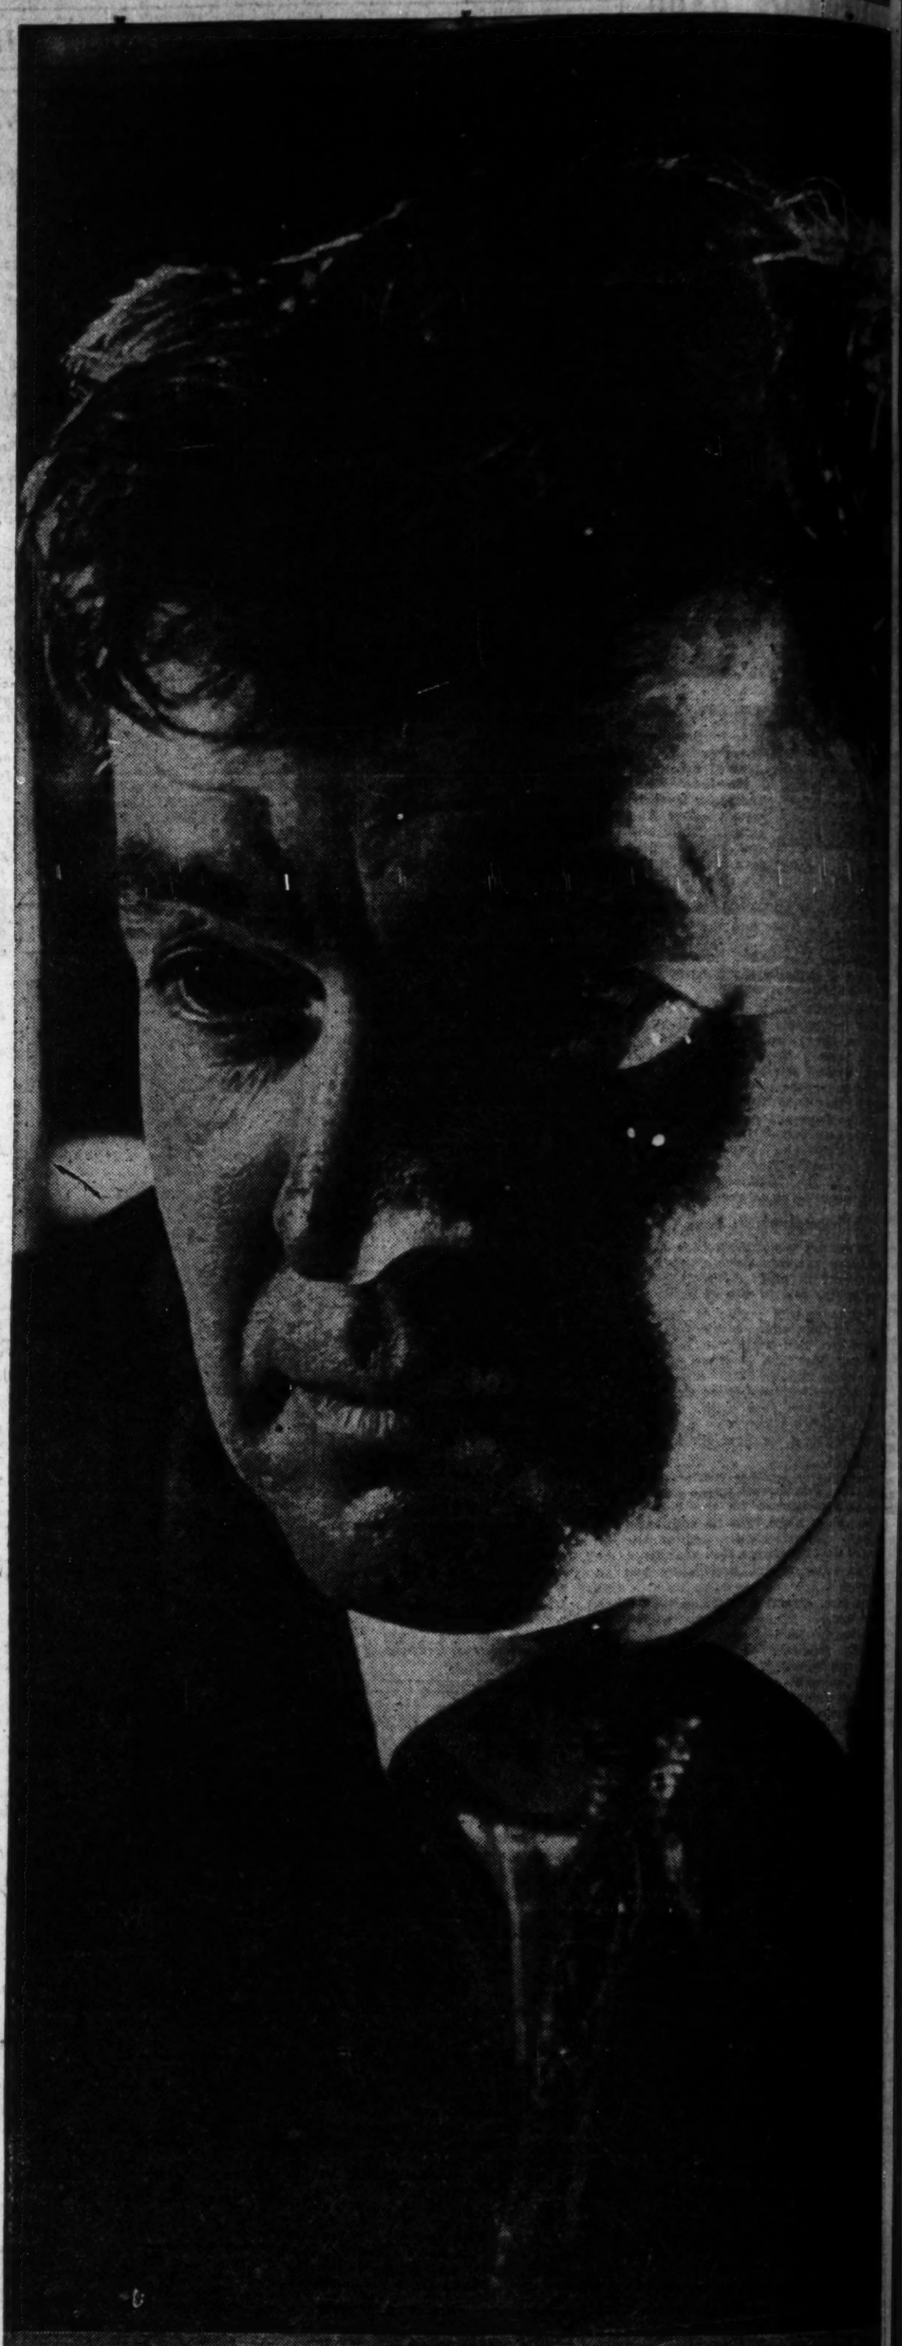
THE FAMILIES OF YOUR SIDE OF THE CITY WILL SPEND NEARLY A QUARTER OF A BILLION DOLLARS AT RETAIL BETWEEN NOW AND NEW YEAR'S DAY!



IF there was a way to make your present business and your present capital return you greater profits during the last half of this year than in any similar period, would you spend two cents and two minutes of your time to find out about it?

The Chicago Tribune has developed a new plan for spurring sales that can be used with profit in every line of retail business. Scores of merchants, large and small, are getting amazing results with it. Many of them have increased their sales from 50% to 100% and even more. Faster turnover is giving them fresher merchandise to push and more capital to work with.

SEND FOR "BIGGER PROFITS"

You, too, can reap the benefits of the new sales method developed by the Chicago Tribune. It will work for you just as profitably as it is working for scores of other alert retailers. There is nothing complicated about it. Nor does it require any large initial investment to try it out.

The Tribune would like to place before you the complete details of this new selling method. All the facts, all the information you naturally will want to know before making a start, have been set forth in a 32-page book published especially for merchants of your side of the city.

IT'S FREE
NO OBLIGATION

The title of this book is "Bigger Profits for Merchants." It will be sent free of charge to every merchant who will take the trouble to ask for it. By filling in and mailing the attached coupon, you will not be obligating yourself in any way. All it costs you to find out is a two-cent stamp and two minutes of your time. Take those two minutes right now! Tear out the handy coupon, fill it in and mail it NOW.

In the face of today's peak prosperity, many merchants and retailers are still plugging along at the same old pace. Sales for them come just as hard as ever. Bigger profits, as always, are "just around the corner." The golden clangor of the market is at its loudest. But many merchants haven't even heard it. What about YOUR business?

CHICAGO TRIBUNE 10-4-NW
Room 933, Tribune Tower, Chicago
Gentlemen:

Without obligating me in any way, you may send a copy of your new free book, "Bigger Profits," as per your offer in the Sunday Tribune.

STRONG FORCES SEEKING DEFEAT OF FRANK REID

Drys Discontent with His Record in Congress.

...t an even bigger one, politicians ..., is the fact that as a member of ...e legislature he voted against Illi...' approval of the eighteenth ...endment.

McCarthy an Emmerson Ally.

Representative McCarthy was one ... the speakers—and proved himself ... effective stumper—who traveled the ... with the state ticket last fall ... stands unusually well with the ...merson forces. As far back as 1920 ... showed remarkable strength as ...gressional timber when he ran ...inst a veteran, Ira C. Copley, and ...st out by only 1,761 votes.

...f Congressman Reid and Mr. Pear..., two drys, both go into the fight, ...ect leaders say McCarthy's legis...ive record, particularly his vote on ... eighteenth amendment, coupled ... his known attitude toward the ... King slaying in Aurora, would ...ve him a big chance for success. ... his only statement is that he is ...watching developments."

District observers attach maximum ...portance this time to the wet and ... issue, largely because the Anti-...sm league favor is about the only ...ck of votes that has stuck by Con...sman Reid.

...ut much of the campaign material ...ainst the incumbent, it is said, will ... the same as that used two years ... when in the primary, with a total ...publican vote of 87,928 he barely ...a majority, his margain over half ...f the total vote cast being only 1,381.

Lucrative Thompson Connection.

The principal material against the ...ngressman then was his close asso...iation with Mayor Thompson of Chi...go and his consequent profit as one ...f the city hall's $100 a day experts ...n legal matters. It is the same ma...erial with the added point that Mr. ...eid's compensation has been mount...ng steadily until his pay on special ...ouchers for the current year prob...bly will exceed $15,000—more for ..."part time" work than is received by ...ny of the city department heads or ...ven by Gov. Emmerson for full time.

This increase in pay is due to the ...act, say the politicians, that Con...gressman Reid's value to the Thomp...on scheme of things became greater ...hen the Chicago mayor launched ...nto his publicity campaign on flood ...elief and control. The Aurora repre...entative is chairman of the house ...ommittee on flood prevention and ...oined hands heartily with Mr. Thomp...on, submitting to his domination, it ...s said in Washington, in matters be...ore his committee.

Congressman Reid, being attached ...o the city law department pay roll ...n 1917 for an amount undisclosed be...ause the records are not available, ...as been paid substantial sums almost ...very year that Thompson has been in ...ffice. The total of his receipts found ...n the records now is $35,973 and of ...hat amount $11,450 was charged for ...is services during the first eight ...onths of 1929. His present duties are ...aid to be in connection with the 10 ...ent elevated fare case, which has ...een continued from time to time.

$34,550 in Two and One-Half Years.

...is closest previous approach to ...hat figure was $6,550 for the nine ...onths of 1927 remaining when Mayor ...hompson began his present term. ...he payments to him in 1928 are ...given as $6,050. Therefore his total ...or the last two years and a half of ...is administration is $24,050. The fig...re of $11,450 for this year shows that ...e claimed pay for 114 days' work plus ...alf a day somewhere.

...or some time Congressman Reid ...as reported to be in doubt whether ...e would seek another term. Recent...y this has been replaced by reports ...hat he is considering running for the ...nited States senatorship with the ...upport of Mayor Thompson, entering ...he race now limited to Senator De...en and Ruth Hanna McCormick.

...he politicians consider this merely ..."war talk," intended as a belligerent ...otice to the friends of Senator De...en and Mrs. McCormick that if they ...on't have him in peaceful possession ...f the congressional field in his district ...e will make trouble for them.

New Jefferson Park Church

With its pillared porch and domed tower, this new Jefferson Park Congregational church and community house is reminiscent of the old New England meeting house. The new church home will be dedicated today.

DEDICATION OF JEFFERSON PARK CHURCH TODAY

Dr. O. S. Davis to Preside at Formal Service.

The new Jefferson Park Congregational church and community house, Giddings street near Milwaukee avenue, will be dedicated this morning at 11 o'clock, the Rev. Lewis A. Convis, pastor, preaching the sermon. This afternoon the formal dedication service will be held with Dr. Ozora S. Davis, former president of the Chicago Theological seminary, preaching, and Siegfried E. Gruenstein presiding at the organ.

The community house will be dedicated Tuesday night with a sermon by Dr. Robert W. Gammon, secretary of the Congregational Educational society. Dedication week will close with a banquet on Friday night, when Dr. J. A. Jenkins, president of the Union Theological college, will be the speaker. The banquet will be in honor of the Woman's guild. Mrs. Oscar Kohl, president, will speak in behalf of the former guild presidents.

Addresses of Greeting.

Addresses of greeting will be brought from Harry Jensen, worshipful master of Providence Masonic lodge; S. R. Rappold, vice president of the Jefferson Park Business Men's association, and from the Rev. John G. Graham, pastor of the Cragin Congregational church.

The present building was planned nearly four years ago. A campaign for the raising of funds resulted in the securing of over $60,000 in pledges. The auditorium of the present church will seat about seven hundred and there are facilities for caring for a Sunday school of equal number.

Dedication Book Interesting.

An interesting feature of the elaborate dedication book which the church has published is a page of old photographs of people who now are members of the church who attended either as members or as Sunday school scholars the old original church on Milwaukee avenue. Many of the pictures —some of which were taken nearly half a century ago—show the changing style of dress of the various periods. Among those whose photographs appear in this list are: Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Schuhr, Mrs. M. Hansen, Mrs. Emma Helmke, Charles and Miss Luella Moisley, Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, Mrs. William Deitcher, T. E. Bourne, Mrs. Kate Bourne, Mrs. Henry Moisley, Mrs. Clara Lowell, Mrs. Henry Wulff, Mrs. Cady K. Wright, Mrs. L. Alting, Mrs. Emma Meyers, and Milton D. Smith.

COURT APPROVES $146,000 PAVING JOB ON 5TH AVE.

The last legal hurdle in the proposed paving of 5th avenue between Cicero and Crawford avenues at an estimated cost of $146,000 was cleared recently by attorneys for the board of local improvement when the assessment roll for the project was confirmed by the County court.

The board will advertise for bids within a few days, and probably will have the project completed next spring. An asphalt pavement is to be laid on the street, which is now a mudhole in the section to be improved. Fifth avenue runs diagonally southwest from Madison street and California avenue and is expected to become an important traffic artery when it is paved.

Paving of Palatine avenue between Newark and Natoma avenues at a cost of $36,000 and of Peterson avenue between Caldwell and Cicero avenues at a cost of $23,000 also was approved by the court in addition to a $4,200 sewer in Sunnyside avenue between Long and Central avenues.

Reilly School P.-T. Holds First Autumn Meeting

Reilly school Parent-Teacher association held its first fall meeting on Thursday in the school assembly hall, School street and Lawndale avenue. Miss E. R. Weitman of the Chicago chapter, American Red Cross, talked on "Health." Mrs. W. A. Longfield spoke on "Safety." The officers of the association are the newly elected president, Mrs. H. Sheldon; the vice president, Mrs. J. Davidson; the recording secretary, Mrs. H. Taylor, and corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. Janicki.

Homecoming Dinner for Portage Park Ladies' Aid

The Ladies' Aid society of the Portage Park Congregational church gave a homecoming dinner Friday evening in the church social rooms. A program after the dinner was in charge of the Young People's society. Last Sunday the children of the Bible school took part in a special rally day program under the direction of Supt. Oscar Thonander. Rev. Thomas Fulton Campbell gave a short talk.

FOREMAN SCHOOL P.-T. TO WELCOME 500 NEWCOMERS

Parent-Teacher association of Edwin G. Foreman Junior High school will welcome 500 new members at an evening reception on Oct. 16 in the school assembly hall.

Included on the program, which follows the meeting of the association at 7:45 p. m., is a welcome to the parents by Miss Sophie A. Theilgaard, principal, and an address on "Why the Thinking Parent Wants a Parent-Teacher Association," by Robert Bremner. Refreshments and the informal reception follow.

A child study class is now being organized by the association.

Harlequin Club to Give "Seven Keys to Baldpate"

Announcement was made last week that the Harlequin club of Roosevelt High school will present the mystery play, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," on Nov. 21 and 22 in the school auditorium, 3436 Wilson avenue. Tryouts for the cast are now being made.

Norwood Park Woman's Club to Meet on Tuesday

Norwood Park Woman's club will meet on Tuesday at 1:30 p. m., in the Norwood Park community house. James Heron, Scotch poet, will speak on "My Chicago." Music will be furnished by Miss Lois Lynn Rogers. Hostesses for the meeting will be Mrs. E. W. Droege, chairman; Mrs. D. F. Kelly, Mrs. Ben Mertes, Mrs. David Ball, Mrs. Max Becker, Mrs. August Dobrick, Mrs. J. M. Kletzing, Mrs. Charles Klugman, and Mrs. Julius Eberle.

Oak Park Junior Police Invited to Convention

Miss Josephine Blackstock, director of Oak Park playgrounds, will address the 16th annual congress of the Playground and Recreation Association of America at Louisville, Oct. 14 to 19, on "Developing Leadership in Children." The attendance at the congresses is usually more than 600. The junior police of the Oak Park playgrounds have been asked to demonstrate their work before the delegates.

$18.50 CANDLEHOLDER FOR $2; RADIO FOR $2.50, BEST BARGAIN

The Tribune will pay $2 for each story of the best bargain obtained in a neighborhood store, printed in the Metropolitan section. Address Bargain, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Make them short and snappy, writing on only one side of the paper, and print your name and address plainly.

Berwyn, Sept. 23.—I found a pair of quaint wrought iron candle holders in a neighboring gift shop some time ago—a particular type for which I had been searching many months. They were on a sale counter of odds and ends and had been reduced from $18.50 to $2.

MRS. L. HOUDEK.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Having just finished furnishing a small cozy room, I found that I needed a radio to add the finishing touch. I had in mind a certain set but the exchequer had been reduced to a most distressing condition; in fact, I had the price of about one of the parts. Imagine my surprise when one day I went into a local radio bargain house and found just the set I wanted, priced at $2.50. And it was a five tube set at that.

SEVERIN F. MARLEWSKI.

Westmont, Sept. 23.—When I came home from France I needed clothes. I "fell for" a particular $75 suit in a west side store. Whew! I decided I'd have to wait and save up. A month later this firm had a big sale and I got my suit for $29.50.

FRANKLIN PARK WOMAN'S CLUB PLANS SEASON

Several meetings and social events have been planned for the season by the Franklin Park Woman's club. A card party is to be given on Oct. 17, with Mrs. E. Radke as chairman; a talk on "The Potter's Trade" will be given by Mrs G. H. Baughman on Nov. 7, with Mrs. F. Phillips acting as hostess; Mrs. F. Case will be heard on "Siberia" on Nov. 21, with Mrs. E. Reynolds hostess.

The Christmas party of the club is scheduled for Dec. 19 and the committee in charge consists of Mrs. V. L. Anderson and Mrs. M. Heitger. Officers of the club are: President, Mrs. John Newhouse; vice presidents, Mrs. J. C. Stutsman and Mrs. V. L. Anderson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. H. Baughman; recording secretary, Mrs. L. E. Fero, and treasurer, Mrs. Bert Sweet.

C. J. FOSTER AGAIN NAMED PRESIDENT OF NORWOOD CLUB

C. J. Foster has been unanimously reelected president of the Norwood Community Improvement association. Other officers are: Frank Olsen, first vice president; Jack Cummings, second vice president; George A. Oberg, recording secretary; John Neumann, financial secretary; L. R. Cooper, treasurer; Robert Roberts, John Kolenberg and G. H. Gaunt, trustees; Charles J. Foster, J. J. Cummings and Frank Olsen, delegates to the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs.

The club is working for the immediate construction of the proposed Smyser school, to be built at Melvina and Montrose avenues, and is also demanding a playground for the vicinity.

Sunnyside avenue has been resurfaced and oiled through the efforts of the group, and gas lamps have been installed on Narragansett and Mulligan avenues.

Forest Park Allots $65,000 for Incinerator

An ordinance calling for the borrowing of $40,000 for the building of an incinerator was passed last Monday night by the village council of Forest Park. This measure will be placed before the voters of the village at the Nov. 23 election. The voters will also decide at this election upon an ordinance calling for $25,000 for the purchase of a site for the proposed incinerator. Meetings of the council are held every Monday night with Mayor George Gold presiding.

State's Attorney of Du Page County Weds

Miss Ella D. Stegen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stegen, Third street, Elmhurst, was married Wednesday evening to Chauncey W. Reed, Naperville, state's attorney of Du Page county, at St. Peter's Evangelical church. The Rev. K. M. Chworowsky, pastor of the church, officiated. The wedding was followed by a reception in the parish hall.

Prospect Club Plans Dance.

The Prospect club will give a dance for its members and friends Saturday evening, Nov. 16, at Wilson Park field house. Leslie Rappaport, chairman, is assisted by Misses Florence Pitsner, Sylvia Molay, and Hazel Ruben, and by Edward Schneider and Eugene Rappaport.

ROSARY COLLEGE MARKS FEAST OF PATRON TODAY

Commemorate Defeat of Mohammedans.

Faculty, students, and friends of Rosary college will join today in celebrating the feast of the patroness of the college, Our Queen of the Holy Rosary. The formal program sponsored by the Rosary college auxiliary will begin at 2:30 p. m. on the campus and will be continued later in the afternoon in the chapel.

MRS. WILLIAM HARDY. [McBeis Photo.]

Busses will be at the Wisconsin avenue elevated station between 1:30 and 2:15 p. m. to accommodate those who wish to attend the celebration. The feast is an annual celebration dating back more than four hundred years, commemorating one of the decisive battles of the world, when the defeat of the Mohammedans made Europe safe for Christendom.

The celebration will begin with a procession from the cloister walk to the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes, recently completed on the college campus. A recital of the rosary will be held on the way to the shrine, which will be blessed by the Rev. W. P. McIntyre, O. P., chaplain of the college.

Procession to Chapel.

Following this ceremony, the assembly will form a procession to the chapel. Exercises there will be opened by a solo by Arthur de St. Aubin, "Veni Creator." The Rev. Leo C. Gainor, principal of the Fenwick High school for boys, will give the sermon, "Our Lady of the Rosary." This will be followed by "Ave Maria" sung by Miss Genevieve Kennedy.

Rosary Sunday, which will be honored with this solemn celebration commemorates the naval battle of Lepanto, won Oct. 6, 1517, by the Christian forces who were fighting the Mohammedans. The Catholic faith attributes the victory to the three days' continual prayer of the rosary which preceded the battle, and the celebration derives its name from this fact.

Fifteen Hundred Women in Auxiliary.

The Rosary college auxiliary, which joins the college in celebrating the feast, consists of 1,500 women, who have made the interests of the college their own. The society was formed in July, 1920, to assist the college, and especially to aid in furnishing and maintaining the chapel.

Mrs. William Hardy of River Forest was founder of the auxiliary. The present presiding officer is Mrs. Lee Cupp, 5337 West Madison street, Chicago, and Mrs. Edward Hines of Evanston is the honorary president. Other officers are Mrs. Lawrence Harvey, 4730 West End avenue, Chicago, first vice president and chairman of the membership committee, and Mrs. William S. Hefferan, 6631 Harvard avenue, Chicago, second vice president and chairman of the program committee.

Harrison High School Teachers Are Moved

Four teachers of Harrison Technical High school were recently transferred to other schools. Miss Marguerite Plummer, who was at the Harrison branch, has been assigned to Fenger High; Harold Billings has gone to Austin High; Mrs. Mary L. MacK. Comstock has been sent from the main building to the branch, and Mrs. Joyce Neal, formerly at the branch, is now at Crane.

PROSECUTOR'S AID TEACHES ROMAN LAW AT LOYOLA UNIVERSITY

Loyola university's school of law began courses in Roman law last Monday with Frank Mast, LL.B., as instructor. Prof. Mast, an assistant state's attorney in the Felony court, Roosevelt road and State street, was at one time counselor for the Lithuanian legation at Washington, D. C., a position he held for several years.

Prof. Mast's course at Loyola university will consist of an historical summary of the origin and development of Roman law, including the Institutes of Justinian, the digests and the commentaries, and an application of the theory of Roman law to the problems of the common law.

is bound to follow in the way of development of automobile traffic facilities. I do not believe the slight increase in taxes to pay for it will be felt at all, and will certainly prove small compared to the benefits which will accrue.

"Supporters of a proposition of this kind are probably more open to economic arguments than any other kind, but let them not forget that its value as a life saving measure is extremely important.

"I am convinced that everything about the project is healthful and in line with progress and growth. The opposition can urge nothing against it except that it will cost money, and such an argument is unsound," he concluded.

Merchant Denies Trade Loss.

Ed Shalek, former president of the West Side Kiwanis club and merchant located at 3228 West Madison street, declared that business men who oppose the project because it will "carry away prosperity" have no basis for their contention. In fact, Mr. Shalek believes, the removal of thousands of through drivers from the streets will be a genuine aid to business.

"The superhighway is valuable for the very reason that it removes many through drivers from surface business streets such as Madison," he said, "and leaves the thoroughfare free for the local driver. My business comes from the man who is driving directly to my store, and not the motorists speeding past who are interested only in getting to destinations, they have in mind.

"It is particularly desirable that women drivers shopping in our district are not subjected to the dangers brought by the motorists in a hurry. These motorists choke up the streets so that one desiring to park or go slowly is handicapped.

"The only argument advanced against it is that it brings a tax increase, and that is the only line along which people might be misled by the opposition. For that reason, the point that the return on the investment will come soon and in full measure cannot be too strongly stressed."

Church Training School Meets Tuesday Evenings

The fourth interchurch standard training school held under the auspices of the West Central District council of religious education will be held at Jackson Boulevard Christian church community house each Tuesday evening beginning this week and continuing until Nov. 12. C. Everett Smith is president of the council.

LEGION CORPS STARTS BOXING SHOWS FRIDAY

Yarmo-De Vere Series to Continue All Winter.

Commencing Friday, and every Friday night thereafter during the winter months, amateur boxing, sanctioned by the A. A. U., will be held at 3216 West Roosevelt road, under the auspices of the drum and bugle corps of Yarmo-De Vere post, No. 469, of the American Legion. Morton Leviton is the matchmaker, and many well known referees, including Dave Miller, will officiate. One of the motives in staging this fistic series is the development of talent for the coming A. A. U. and Golden Gloves tourneys.

Dr. S. C. Bromberg, past commander of Edison Park post, No. 541, and Leo S. Miller of Logan Square post attended the national convention of the legion which opened last Monday, as delegates from the ninth district. Edward Samuelson of Albany park and John Fitzmorris of John P. Conley post were alternates.

New officers are now in charge of Portage Park post, No. 183. J. Leslie Hansen is commander. Other new officers are: Carl Anderson, senior vice commander; Edward Johnson, junior vice commander; Elmer C. Siewert, finance officer; new directors to serve two years, Jack Keating, William Johnson, past commander, Robert P. Weil, George Schelkopf, and C. A. Hill; to serve one year, Jack Whitford; Walter Heidenson, historian; George Schelkopf, adjutant; Earl Derz, service officer, and Robert Weil, publicity chairman.

Portage Park unit, No. 183, American Legion auxiliary, met Friday evening for its first business session under the new officers, Mrs. Marjorie Schelkopf, the new president, and Mrs. Josephine Freeman, past president, gave their delegates' reports on the Rock Island state convention.

Lieut. Otto Staehli post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold an open meeting with a special program tomorrow evening at 4019 Milwaukee avenue. Philip Mendelssohn is the commander. Veterans from posts throughout the city are expected. A buffet supper is to be served.

At the last meeting of Naval post, No. 372, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Commander, Norm C. Olsen; senior vice commander, Charles Reynolds; junior vice commander, P. F. Brautigan; finance officer, P. K. Crawford; post surgeon, Dr. M. E. Healy; sergeant-at-arms, P. J. Mitchell; adjutant, George G. Speir; directors, K. E. Carroll and Herb Klein. Included in Naval post's schedule of winter activities is bowling. The post's own league will inaugurate its 1929-30 season tomorrow night. Membership in the league is open to all Naval post members.

Clark B. Kelsey, former adjutant of the American Furniture Mart Legion post, was elected commander at a post luncheon held Tuesday in the sun parlor of the Furniture Club of America. Kelsey succeeds Wilson J. Killough. George McEwen was elected vice commander to succeed Frank S. Whiting. Other officers elected were: Adjutant, William F. Sullivan; finance officer, L. W. Foulk; judge advocate, James Mills, and sergeant-at-arms, Allen Bashara.

GLENBARD HIGH SHOWS INCREASE IN ENROLLMENT

The autumn schedule at Glenbard Township High school, Glen Ellyn, is now in full swing with an enrollment of 720 students, according to an announcement made at the school last week. This number represents an increase of 121 students over the enrollment last June.

Spanish is the only new course being offered this year. Sewing has become very popular among the students, last year's registration in this course being nearly tripled.

Rehearsals are progressing for members of the orchestra of 30 pieces and the bands of 40 in preparation for the year's musical program. The glee clubs of the school are also making ready for the year's schedule.

The faculty of the school numbers 28, besides the principal, F. L. Biester.

Elmhurst College Co-ed Question Up to Synod

The question of co-education at Elmhurst college beginning 1930 will be decided when the quadrennial conference of the Evangelical synod assembles Oct. 8 at Rochester, N. Y. President Lehmann will give a report of the college growth over a four year period and present a plan for making this change. A plan to inaugurate a million dollar campaign will also be presented at the synod.

Oak Park Writers' Club to Hold Fall Assembly

The Village Writers' club of Oak Park will hold its first assembly of the season tomorrow evening at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. R. G. Hulburt, 1029 Randolph street. Several papers will be read by the authors, followed by a general discussion. The president of the club is Mrs. Margaret Pack, 735 Franklin avenue, River Forest.

SEA SCOUTS, BACK FROM JAMBOREE, BANQUET GUESTS

Chicago Group Honored by Executives.

Howard F. Gillette, National Sea Scout commodore and a member of the executive board of the Chicago Scout council, and the ten Chicago Sea Scouts who represented the Chicago and the National Sea Scout organizations at the International Boy Scout jamboree at Birkenhead, England, during the last summer, were the guests of honor at a dinner in the Edgewater Beach hotel given in connection with the region seven Scout executives' conference, at which 105 Scout executives from Scout councils covering 864 cities, towns, and villages in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Michigan were present.

Mr. Gillette, in mentioning many interesting experiences at the international jamboree, said:

Complimented by Wales.

"On one occasion, when the Scouts were passing in review before the prince of Wales and Lord Robert Baden-Powell, who is the originator of the Boy Scout movement in England, I was standing behind them in the reviewing stand.

"As National Sea Scout Director Thomas J. Keane and the Sea Scouts of the United States passed by the reviewing stand, the prince, after returning their salute, nudged Lord Baden-Powell with his elbow and remarked favorably on the fine appearance that they made.

Led by T. J. Keane.

"Old Ironsides," the Sea Scout ship, from which the Chicago Sea Scouts were selected to attend the jamboree, was first organized as Troop 17 of the northwest district, which had the first Sea Scout patrol in the world. At that time it was under the leadership of Thomas J. Keane, who was then serving as a volunteer Scout leader and who now is the National Sea Scout director of the Boy Scouts of America. Later the troop was reorganized as Sea Scout Ship Old Ironsides Troop 117 and was the first flagship in region seven.

Each Sea Scout troop possesses an imaginary ship. Troop 117 chose "Old Ironsides" as the name for its vessel.

The Sea Scouts who attended the dinner are all members of the National Sea Scout Flagship "Old Ironsides" of Troop 117, which meets at the Grace Evangelical church, Wrightwood and Kimball avenues. Their names are: Albert A. and Harold F. Collinet, D. A. Floreen, Henry Drogemuller, George Gruner, Elmer Hanssen, Sumner Summerfield, Lester Reith, Ross Utter, and Skipper Louis Oloff. Scout Nuel Howard of Ludington, Mich., who attended the jamboree with these Sea Scouts, was also present.

Others who were present at the dinner included: National Sea Scout Director Keane of New York, Sea Scout Director Bruno G. Andrews of region seven, Chief Portmaster A. R. Pieper, Deputy Chief Pilot G. W. Shipman, Regional Executive Walter M. Kiplinger, Scout Executive E. Urner Goodman, and Eames MacVeagh.

SEA SCOUTS HONORED

ROSARY GIRLS COMPETE FOR TENNIS TITLE

Who will be tennis queen at Rosary college this year? This question is holding the interest of the entire student body of the institution, as the tournaments begun several days ago draw to a close. The title is to be bestowed on the winner some time in the near future. Miss Alice McGrail is in charge of the tournament.

Hockey is also attracting scores of students, from the enthusiastic freshman to the seasoned senior player. Games are to be staged between the various classes. A series of hiking trips is also on the recreational program at the college this year.

Miss Helen Hauser Heads Aurora Class

The German Club of East High School, Aurora, has named its officers for the current scholastic year. Miss Helen Hauser is president, Miss Marion Fricke, vice president, Miss Dorothea Klebe, secretary, and Miss Doris Swinehammer, treasurer. The officers of the Spanish club, also elected recently, are: President, William Arle; vice president, Miss Helen Couve; secretary, Miss Leona Dittman; treasurer, Miss Charlotte Thompson.

Dr. Edward Schoolman to Talk on Modernism

Dr. Edward N. Schoolman, for many years a lecturer on philosophy and psychology, will begin a series of lectures on the new psychology at the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard, Oct. 14. Dr. Schoolman's first subject will be "What Price Modernism" and will be followed by discussions of related subjects each week through the winter.

MISS LAURA GAGE NAMED HEAD OF KEY GIRLS' GROUP

Election of officers was held at a meeting of the Key Girls to Girls conference of Oak Park and Proviso, held recently. Miss Laura Gage was elected president, Miss Ruth Kinlock, secretary, and Miss Eleanor Slingluff, treasurer.

Committees and chairmen have also been chosen. Katherine Anne Hughes is chairman of the program committee. Her assistants are: Betty Shuman, Mary Lee Watson, Peggy Rittenhouse, Elaine Vander Heydt, and Jean Hartman. Other committees are as follows:

Music: Harriet Hill, chairman; Mary Campbell, Doris Hagen, Elisabeth Humiston, Muriel Van Wagoner, Mary McAuliffe, Jean Clapp, Glenna Snapp. Publicity: Marjorie Roberts, chairman; Eunice Beecher, Jane Owen, Rosemary Volk, Martha Lucocck, Eleanor Sherman, Grace Hanley, and Lenore Scharschug.

Alice Jane Austin is chairman of the registration committee, Martha Voigt of the decoration, Barbara Harris of recreation, and Ruth Jansen of the hostess committee.

David Berger to Lead Harrison High Debaters

The Harrison Technical High school house of representatives, debating organization of the school, has elected the following officers: President, David Berger; clerk, Irving Steinberg; assistant clerk, Herman DeKoven; treasurer, Walter Naurocki; sergeant-at-arms, Max Terry. Two committees have recently been appointed by the president. The bill committee includes Maurice Kaplan, chairman; Irving Steinberg, Miss Libbie Nathan, Irving Hoffman, and Miss Ruth Heller. The by-laws committee is made up of Sam Kaplan, chairman; Miss Lillian Loukota, and Nathan Hoffberg.

Church Holds Conference.

An All-Workers' conference took place at the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Peace Thursday evening when the Rev. Otto Doering addressed the group on educational methods in the church.

A revelation in tone quality and furniture craftsmanship

RADIO at first was just an electrical novelty. Popular demand forced its development as a musical instrument. To-day, it must be in addition, a beautiful piece of furniture—a fitting companion to the artistic furnishings which distinguish the better American homes.

A truly up-to-the-minute receiver, then, is the Peck & Hills Radio, embodying all the qualities demanded by discriminating radio buyers. Tone is assured by the master design of the chassis, the vital part of radio. The quiet elegance and distinction of the console make it a thing of beauty.

To achieve tone brilliance, the Peck & Hills Radio engineers have spared no efforts. They have eliminated nothing essential. The volume is full and clear—without distortion. The tuning is sensitive to the highest degree—a slight turn of the dial moves completely off one station and to another. For the DX fan it will bring in distant signals clearly and a turn of the volume control brings them to program strength. Extra power is well under control in the push-pull amplification using two type 245 tubes. Matched dynamic speaker completes the ensemble mechanically—and the beautiful walnut cabinets in an array of masterful designs, make the whole perfect.

QUIN RYAN SET TO BROADCAST WORLD SERIES

New Booths Are Ready at Wrigley Field.

Quin Ryan will begin the broadcast of the first Chicago world's series since the advent of radio on Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. Microphones have been installed in the new glass broadcasting booth at Wrigley field, which will be used for the first time as the series opens. The booth is situated in the most advantageous position possible and will be in constant telephone connection with the score board.

Quin Ryan has been broadcasting baseball games constantly since the city series of 1924. He and Graham McNamee were selected as the radio reporters on the national chain broadcasts to announce the Pittsburgh-Washington world's series in 1925 by Baseball Commissioner Judge K. M. Landis. Quin Ryan, and consequently W-G-N, have broadcast more baseball games than any other announcer and station on the air.

Broadcast Every Day.

For the last three seasons there has been a baseball broadcast from W-G-N every day during the season. During the last season there have been the daily play-by-play broadcasts made from the Chicago parks and, in addition, minute telegraphic reports broadcast as they were dispatched from the out of town parks.

After the first two games the scene of action will be removed to Philadelphia. The broadcast from there will be made in cooperation with the National Broadcasting company.

Football Series Near.

On Saturday, Oct. 12, W-G-N will begin its greatest series of football broadcasts. The officials at the University of Wisconsin have agreed to postpone the season opening kickoff until the fourth game of the world's series is completed. The Wisconsin-Northwestern game will be reported yard by yard by Quin Ryan.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

SWEET are the uses of the radio station. Lecturing last week in Wisconsin we heard the story of a broadcasting station in a nearby town that rented fifteen minutes per day to a radio comedian. The comic fellow sang his songs and delivered his monologue, and then announced that his program was broadcast "through the courtesy" of a certain clothing manufacturer.

He said he would be glad to meet his many friends of the radio audience and would welcome them in the studio. When the listeners flocked to the studio, they found the walls draped with all kinds of men's suits and before they got out many of them had been sold a new suit—with two pairs of pants.

ANNOUNCER Pat Barnes tells the story of the fellow who just bought his first radio set and boasted that it was so good that he could get three stations at once.

MUSICIANS are eager for jobs in the radio studios. For one thing, they do not have to dress for the performances. No more of the stiff postures in the formal attire of the symphony concert or the theater orchestra pit. No more glare of the spotlight, and no more monotony of same music night after night in the musical shows.

Many radio orchestras have pictures taken in the garb they would have the audience believe they work in. We have seen motley groups of boys posing as forest rangers, railroad conductors, gypsies and whatnot, but in reality the majority are glad to doff their coats, vests and collars and feel at ease. The only hardship imposed upon them is the rule of silence, and instructions for shortening or expanding a program are flashed to them on a blackboard.

Down east in some studios the announcers are required to wear dinner jackets!

DO YOU RADIO listeners remember 'way back when——

The late Charlie Erbstein used to chuckle—and sing "Christopher Columbo" and "The Spanish Bull Fight"—and plead for cigarets for the soldiers?

The forerunner of radio at Comiskey park was the installation of the horns all about the grandstands, through which the batteries and pinch hitters used to be announced?

Two of the finest harmony teams on the air [both since dissolved] were Tommy Malie and Jack Little, and George Little and Larry Shay? And remember both teams wrote a lot of good songs, such as the former's "Jealous" and the latter's "Too Tired"?

George Hay, "the Solemn Old Judge," came up from Memphis to do such fine and homey announcing for the new station WLS?

Everybody had a crystal set—and a "cat's whisker"—and the aerial running around the picture molding on the wall?

Monday night was designated as "silent night," when all of the Chicago stations would shut down at 7 o'clock, in order that listeners might tune distant broadcasters more clearly?

The whole town listened to the seemingly endless Democratic convention in New York, with the series of roll calls invariably starting with "Twenty-four for Underwood"?

The Loos brothers, Billy and Ernie, were heavy radio favorites in Chicago?

Cigar stores and other shops gave away "applause cards" for the listeners' use in writing comments to radio stations?

Entire theatrical productions used to be broadcast from the stage in Chicago theaters. "Blossom Time" and "White Cargo" were broadcast by the old KYW, and "The Student Prince" and DeWolf Hopper's production of "The Mikado" by W-G-N. Then the Actors' Equity started an agitation and demanded that every player in the company be paid for a whole extra performance—one-eighth of a week's salary—if any part of a show were put on the air; so the broadcaster desisted from putting microphones in theaters, even if the managers desired it for publicity's sake?

Station W-G-N broadcast its Amateur Nights, and Spelling Bees, and Old Fashioned Favorite Song contest?

The chain announcers in New York used to enumerate all of the stations through which the program was being broadcast, and conclude the show by giving their own initials?

The papers used to publish weird diagrams and "hookups" for the early listeners who made their own sets?

Most radio singers were chanting the million verses of "How do you do, Everybody, how do you do"?

The Duncan Sisters were wont to broadcast almost every night, during their long runs of "Topsy and Eva," featuring the songs, "Rememberin'," and "I Never Had a Mammy"?

The long since dispersed staff of KYW consisted of "Sen" Kaney, Sally Menkes, Herbie Mintz, Art Linick, Bobby Brown, Lee Sims, Steve Trumbull, Frank Clark, Grace Wilson and the "Harmony Girls," Edith Carpenter and Grace Ingram?

A famous oatmeal company used to sell five dollar sets made out of their cardboard oatmeal cartons?

The Edgewater Beach station was WJAZ and the Drake hotel station was WDAP?

This announcer was "Uncle Walt" and the children's period was "Skeezix Time"?

It was seriously proposed to lay a government tax on all radio receiving sets and accessories, the funds to be distributed to the radio stations for their maintenance?

Radio stations, when starting in business, tried to get call letters which were abbreviations of the owner's name—as in the case of W-G-N, "World's Greatest Newspaper," and WEBH, "W-Edgewater Beach Hotel," and KTHS, "Kum to Hot Springs," and others?

The members of the family used headphones and sat around the receiver as though it were an ouija board?

[With apologies to Harvey Woodruff, the original "Way Back Wheneer"].

DILL ACCUSES RADIO ARBITERS OF FAVORITISM

Says Chain Organizations Control Programs.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—The federal radio commission was brought to task on the senate floor recently by Senator C. C. Dill [Dem.] of Washington, who is one of the most vigorous promoters of radio legislation in congress, for its apparent favoritism for chain broadcasting systems as against the independent stations. Interrupting a debate on tariff, the western senator warned the radio commission that unless it changed its policy the public will demand that the United States government take over and control all broadcasting stations.

Senator Dill roundly criticized the commission for its continual postponement of putting into effect general order No. 43, which would prohibit the broadcasting of the same program from stations not more than 300 miles apart. This order, which was originally promulgated on Sept. 8, 1928, has been delayed several times because it would practically prohibit chain broadcasting in many localities except for an hour each night. The last postponement was made on Oct. 1, when its effective date was moved up until Dec. 31.

Control in Hands of Few.

"The radio commission has been granting wave lengths, power, and time in a manner that is tending to put the control of an effective radio service in the hands of a few great organizations," Senator Dill said. "The forty cleared channels established in this country today are fast driving out the independent use of radio in an effective manner—forty cleared channels, with thirty-eight of the forty cleared channel stations on chains. These channels were cleared for the purpose of giving the people radio service all over the country on those channels—and they have placed those channels in the very best places on the dial, in spite of the fact that they heterodyne and cause harmonics beyond the limits of their own channels.

"The commission, under the law, has specific power over these chain stations. Nearly a year ago they issued an order which, if they had carried it out, would go far to remedy this situation, but every time the date for the enforcement of the order arrives they postpone it, and they have postponed it again and again."

Hits Proposed Mergers.

"Efforts to weaken the radio law in its monopoly features are being made all over this country today in the form of propaganda," he continued. "They want to repeal sections 13 and 17 of the radio law, so that the International Telephone and Telegraph company can buy the Radio corporation's interoceanic stations, and they want to pay $40,000,000 worth of stock for them.

"Mr. Behn said they were worth $25,000,000 when he was on the stand before our committee last June. Those stocks are selling today for more than $100,000,000; and, if it is permitted, there will be $75,000,000 of water to begin with upon which cable and telephone rates must be made high enough to pay dividends."

Radio May Set Watch If You Forget About It

The experiments of the Elgin National Watch company of Elgin, Ill., in the use of radio to regulate timepieces will be continued as the application for a renewal of license has been granted by the federal radio commission. At a recent hearing it was explained that the Elgin research men expected to devise a means of setting watches by radio while they are in the owners' pockets.

Angora Deserts Pastor for W-G-N Organ Music

A clergyman in Somonauk, Ill., is fond of cats. His large Angora, Rags, sits purring and blinking contentedly at his feet as the pastor prepares the message for his flock. However, he is thinking seriously of beginning a suit for alienation of affections. As soon as Larry Larsen, organist at W-G-N, Chicago, begins to play Rags is roused. Listening, he walks leisurely to the loud speaker and curls up, again contentedly, before it.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB PROGRAM ON AIR TONIGHT

The first broadcast of the Chicago Sunday Evening club's twenty-third season goes on the air tonight with Bishop Charles P. Anderson, for thirty years bishop of the Episcopal church in the Chicago diocese, giving the principal address. R. Floyd Clinch, a trustee of the club, and Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, moderator of the Presbyterian Church of America, will take part while President Clifford W. Barnes will preside. WMAQ will carry the program.

The club already has received requests from listeners in over twenty states and Canada, asking that information regarding these weekly services be sent to them.

Bishop Anderson, who is now vice chairman of the House of Bishops, and therefore the second ranking churchman in the Episcopal denomination of America, has chosen for his subject "Chicago Day," and the general theme of the meeting will be civic in character.

Edgar Nelson, director of music, states that the choir of 125 contains more solo material than in any previous season. Music students from all parts of the country are enrolled in this choir. Tonight they will sing "Hail Bright Abode," by Wagner, "Bless Our Land," by Cherubini, "Ho Every One That Thirsteth," by Martin. A new contralto soloist, Miss Eva Horadesky, will sing "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain," by Harker. Mark Love and Mabel Sharp Herdien will have solo parts.

ACOUSTICS EXPERTS SOUGHT.

A broad knowledge of electricity and acoustics is necessary for a new side line that has sprung up in the many sided radio business. That is the installation and maintenance of large sound amplifiers and public address systems in hotels, auditoriums, theaters and schools. Experts in this sort of work are in considerable demand, according to engineers.

WHITE HOUSE STUDIO ACOUSTICS PERFECT, ENGINEERS DECLARE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It was discovered when President Hoover broadcast for the first time from the recently restored presidential studio in the east wing of the White House that the acoustics here were what is termed in the broadcasting world as "brilliant."

President Hoover never spoke with a better acoustical background than he did that night, according to radio engineers.

Nor was the natural tone of voice sacrificed, as is often the case when a voice comes through too clearly.

CHICAGO ANNUAL RADIO SHOW TO COME OCT. 21-27

Chicago's Radio show will open for its eighth annual session on Monday, Oct. 21, and continue through Sunday, Oct. 27.

So complete is this year's exhibition that the facilities of the Coliseum, where the show will be held, will be severely taxed.

In a demonstration of television citizens of the central west will be accorded the first view of the most advanced status of radio's smaller sister.

There will be a "Radio Queen," the winner of an essay contest on the subject, "What My Radio Means to Me." Thousands of letters have been received by the management of the show. The woman whose essay is judged the best exposition on the utility of her radio set will be brought to Chicago as the guest of the radio show.

Arctic Flyer Scientists to Use Radio in Search

WASHINGTON.—A license to use the radio channels between 100 and 200 kilocycles for use in the million dollar aerial search of the barren northwest near the Arctic circle by Col. C. D. McAlpine and his party of seven explorer-geologists has been granted by the federal radio commission to the Curtiss flying service of New York. The radio equipment is to be operated on the amphibian plane bearing the numbers NC-4642. The license is good for only 30 days, and the call letters are KHEB.

People who take excellence for granted naturally turn to the new all-electric screen grid

Eveready Radio

THE PRECISION INSTRUMENT

THERE ARE many fortunate people in this world to whom good taste is second nature. They live pleasantly, yet not ostentatiously. They dress well, yet without extremes of style. Every possession of theirs bespeaks an admirable and tempered attitude toward living.

And quite naturally these are the people who are buying the new Eveready Radio. For there, too, just as in their houses, their clothes, yes, even their friends, they take excellence for granted . . . a radio which brings the smartest dance-orchestra into their living-room . . . which takes them to the sidelines of the big games . . . which places them ten feet from the speaker's table . . . this is the sort of reception they expect, and get—from this remarkable radio receiver.

But such people—those who are buying the new Eveready Radio—look for something more in their material possessions. They want permanence. This radio receiver is built to last. It is precision-built. Each part is put together with as much care as if an aviator's life depended on the winding of a coil. The assumption is that Eveready Radio users want a fine instrument, as fine in its way as all their other material possessions.

Mystifying technical names, new accoutrements, devices and mechanisms bore the buyers of this radio. They know they have the best. They know that improvements will be added from time to time as the large scientific organization which makes this receiver tests and uncovers their merits. But they leave the details to the experts. That is their attitude towards radio . . . houses . . . motor-cars . . . life in general.

And so, if you are interested in effects and take the causes for granted, if you order your life according to this principle and to the point, you will want the new Eveready Radio. See it. Hear it. Note how beautiful the cabinetwork is. Ask for the explanation, if you like, of its "weather-proof" principle; but remember that the effect is this—even on muggy nights the reception is remarkably clear.

CHARGES FRAUD IN PASSAGE OF BERTEAU SEWER

Ald. Ross, Civic Groups Fight for Repeal.

Charging city hall forces with tactics similar to those alleged to have been employed in slipping through the ordinance for the Cuneo tower, Ald. Joseph C. Ross [40th] and civic groups of the northwest side are organizing a campaign to obtain the repeal of an ordinance for a $3,000,000 sewer in Berteau avenue from the north branch of the Chicago river to Narragansett avenue.

Ald. Ross pledged himself before his election last spring to work for the defeat of plans for the sewer, which he says people in his ward do not want. He discovered a short time ago, however, that an ordinance for the project had been passed by the city council without his knowledge on June 26 after it had been published according to the regular procedure June 14. Prior to the passage of the ordinance, he learned, it had been favorably recommended by the committee on judiciary and special assessments June 6.

Denies It Was Brought Up.

Ald. Ross is a member of the judiciary committee and was present at the meeting June 6, as well as the subsequent council meetings, but declares that to his knowledge the ordinance was not brought up or discussed at that session.

Furthermore, Ald. Ross said yesterday, at the council meeting the ordinance was passed in the omnibus bill and was not read in full by the clerk as a $3,000,000 improvement ordinance should be. Ordinances to which there are no objectors are recommended for passage by the alderman introducing them and are passed by a unanimous vote in the omnibus bill without discussion.

His attention was not called to the measure until some time after its passage, Ald. Ross said, since he did not learn of it at the council meeting because he did not expect it to come up in the omnibus, and his attention was diverted at the time.

A repeal ordinance is in the hands of the committee on judiciary, and will be considered at the next meeting of that body. If the repeal measure is not passed, the alderman said, the project will be fought when the board of local improvements attempts to have it confirmed in the County court.

Civic Bodies Back Fight.

Civic organizations aiding in the fight are the Park View association, the East Park View association, the Northwest Federation of Improvement clubs, the Montrose District Boosters association, the West Montrose Improvement club, and the West Walker improvement club. These groups are prepared to raise a fund for a legal battle if necessary.

The Berteau sewer first came up for consideration in 1926 when plans for the project were abandoned after a court battle with property owners. Plans were revised and the measure was again launched on the legal route.

Assessment rolls are being prepared by engineers for the board of local improvements, and the project will come up for confirmation in the County court shortly unless the ordinance is repealed.

Plan to Relieve Old Systems.

The proposed system would extend from the river in Berteau avenue to Narragansett avenue, with the main branch in Austin avenue north to Lawrence avenue, and other branches in north and south streets along the line. It is planned to relieve sewerage system in Montrose avenue and Irving Park boulevard.

Residents of the district at the eastern portion of the proposed sewer oppose it on the ground that it would benefit only the western end of the city. They claim that they do not need a sewer and do not propose to be assessed for a project serving another section.

Rev. William Ruby Wins Y. M. C. A. Golf Tourney

Thirty ministers laid aside the conventional black and donned knickers and soft collars to participate in the golf tournament sponsored by the Irving Park boulevard department of the Young Men's Christian association at the Shorewood Golf club at Round Lake. The committee in charge of the arrangements included the Rev. Joshua Oden of Irving Park Lutheran church, the Rev. Roy L. Brown of the Irving Park Presbyterian church, and Secretary Emil R. Bolin. The Rev. William Ruby carried off honors with the score of 86, the Rev. Paul L. Spaid was second with 88, the Rev. Mr. Brown third with 91, and the Rev. Mr. Oden fourth with 94.

West Irving Park Bank Marks 6th Anniversary

The West Irving State bank is observing its sixth anniversary this month and next, holding open house for the entire community in its building at Austin avenue and Irving Park boulevard. Ralph S. Davis is president, and Murray MacLeod is the advisory counsel.

INDIAN DANCERS DEDICATE TREE TO LONGFELLOW

The spirits of Hiawatha, old Nokomis, and Minnehaha walked at St. Stephen's Episcopal church—"The Church of the Poets"—3533 North Albany avenue, last Sunday, when more than forty American Indians gathered to help dedicate a tree to Longfellow, the Indians' poet.

Chief Little Moose of the Chippewas, Chief Whirling Thunder of the Winnebagos, Princesses Hapana and O Me Me of the Sioux, were a few of the Indians who gathered to honor the poet who first expressed an appreciation of the redman's contribution to America, in his famous poem "Hiawatha."

Many of them dressed in feathered war bonnets, buckskin shirts, and beaded blankets, the Indians sang their songs, demonstrated their dances and explained their sign language as a part of the dedication services.

The Rev. Irving St. John Tucker, rector of St. Stephen's, opened the service with a short sketch of Longfellow's life and work.

"We have crystalized the utterances of the poets of 3,000 years ago of one particular nation, the Hebrews," said the Rev. Mr. Tucker, "as if no other poets were ever inspired.

First to Appreciate Legends.

"Living poets send their poems as offering to be hung on the walls of our church in thanksgiving to the Creator Spirit. We dedicate our trees in memory of great poets of time past. Longfellow first opened our eyes to the beauty of Indian legends. The Indians rever him as one of their great friends."

George Fyson, lay reader of St. Stephens, then described how more than sixty years ago, while he was serving as a choir boy in Ely cathedral, England, he saw Longfellow, who was touring England. The poet stopped one morning to attend church at the cathedral and was soon recognized by the parishioners.

Scott Peters, president of the Chicago council of Indians, expressed the appreciation of his people at being given an opportunity to pay tribute to their great friend Longfellow.

23d Psalm Repeated in Signs.

Chief Whirling Thunder then gave a demonstration of the sign language as developed by the American Indians. The Rev. Mr. Tucker read the Twenty-third psalm, pausing between sentences while Chief Whirling Thunder translated the meaning into sign language.

The ceremony inside the church closed with a reading from "Hiawatha" by Chief Robert Buffalo of the Chippewa reservation at Bayfield, Wis.

Many of These Modern Features Are Exclusive With the New Grebe

Screen Grid Tubes—The use of which results in sensitivity never before attained.

New Control for New Power—But in the New Grebe this added power is controlled. Overlapping of stations is eliminated . . . strays are kept out. You get the full tone value made possible by that exclusive Grebe feature—the Equalized Band Pass Filter.

Single Audio Stage Means No Hum—Grebe reception is so strong . . . so pure in tonal characteristics . . . that only a single audio stage is needed. Hum and microphonic noises are eliminated.

Large Diameter Speaker . . . an Original Grebe Idea—Full tone range is effectively accomplished by special large diameter electrodynamic speaker . . . so successfully introduced by Grebe.

For Superb Reproduction of Phonograph Records—You can play your favorite phonograph records by a mere turn of the tuning dial. This automatically connects the phonograph pick-up with specially wound transformer.

Cabinets Designed for Lasting Beauty and Acoustic Perfection—The New Grebe is obtainable in a wide choice of selected walnut and mahogany lowboy and highboy models. Furniture of characteristic beauty and dignity, expertly designed for acoustic properties. In a word, Grebe craftsmanship.

In the New Grebe, just announced, you find something you have long sought . . . but never before discovered . . . Tri-toned* radio. Music . . . with all that the word suggests . . . comes to you in its full, natural beauty. Distant and local stations . . . stations from all points on your dial . . . now get through to your home the full measure of tonal splendor.

The secret? Screen Grid tubes, of course. Yet Screen Grid tubes alone are not enough. In this one radio . . . which is setting next year's standards of design and re-production . . . you find combined with Screen Grid that exclusive Grebe development . . . the "Equalized Band Pass Filter."

Newer than Screen Grid Tubes

This ingenious device, worked out in the Grebe laboratories, controls the remarkable power of the Screen Grid tubes . . . without in the least subduing it. Outside noise and interference never reach the detector tube. A world of power . . . kept silent.

Radio is not a side-line . . . with Grebe

The craftsmanship which is the secret of Grebe Tri-tone* performance goes back for twenty years. Long before the days of broadcasting Grebe was building fine precision radio instruments . . . many of which did valiant service, during the World War, in the radio rooms of our fleets and those of our Allies. *What is Tri-toned Radio?

Every musical instrument has three distinct characteristics: 1. Pitch, by which we distinguish the note as being high or low; 2. Intensity, or loudness; and, 3. Tone, or character by which we distinguish the sound of one musical instrument from another. In Grebe Radio you have re-production that gives you perfect blending of all three characteristics without unnatural over-emphasis of any part of the scale.

Stomping, laughing rhythms have been alloyed with precise craftsmanship. The musicians are eager. On the last syllable of the announcement Jean Goldkette and his W-G-N Dance Orchestra leap into an exhilarating dance tune. The instruments follow the subtle drum throbs precisely and with spirit. Hear 'em today at 1:30, 2:25 and 11.

QUAINT TUNES BY JOHN STAMFORD

John Stamford, tenor, makes the popular melodies mean something. The well known feature announcer sings several pretty tunes this afternoon at 2:15.

HICKEY & JOHNSON HAWAIIAN GUITARS

The modulated melodies of the Hawaiian Guitar snake across the ether as they are plucked from the strings by Hickey and Johnson. Their act today at 1:00.

PAT BARNES & OLD TIMER

Pat Barnes' Sunday Evening Guest is that charming fellow, Old Timer. The two exchange views on current subjects most interestingly. 7:00.

TONE CASTERS BILLED TODAY

BUSINESS MEN OF ASHLAND AV. ASK BOND APPROVAL

Point Out Losses for Last Ten Years.

Property development and renting on Ashland avenue, between Division street and Diversey parkway, have been practically at a standstill since negotiations for widening the street were launched ten years ago. Owners have feared to build pending the completion of the improvement and have been unable to obtain tenants on long term leases. Many buildings were vacated upon order of the city from three to five years ago when officials believed the improvement at hand, and have been vacant ever since.

These facts were pointed out by H. A. Brown, president of the Squire-Dingee company, Ashland avenue and Cortland street, in urging the passage of the $19,000,000 bond issue which will be on the ballot Nov. 5. The entire sum, if the issue is approved by the voters, will be used to pay property owners' judgments against the city, awarded them for condemnation of property which the city took for the widening, and for damages incurred by the latter's failure to complete the improvement.

Awaiting Action 10 Years.

"We have a judgment against the city for part of our property which must be taken to widen the street," he said, "and for the corner of our plant which must be cut off. We have been awaiting action on the improvement for ten years and have been unable to build or improve our factory until Ashland avenue is widened.

"We are inconvenienced further by the fact that the subway under the Chicago and North Western railroad along our property was begun years ago and our switch track was destroyed.

Unable to Do Anything.

"The Thomas J. Kane Coal company across the street has suffered along this line perhaps more than we have, and their case is typical of many.

"As far as renting is concerned," Mr. Brown continued, "property which we own adjacent to our plant was vacated at the request of city authorities in 1926 on the ground that the land would be needed immediately for the widening project. Three years have passed, the building is unoccupied, and the improvement is still in the future.

"Many similar cases will be found both in stores and manufacturing buildings all along the street," he concluded. "We feel that if the bond issue is passed and our ten year old judgments are paid, the way will be clear finally for completion of the project, and business will again be able to move along. It is certain, however, that until these judgments, which the long suffering property owners are certainly entitled to, are paid, Ashland avenue will never be finished."

Unable to Rent.

J. J. Krause, vice president of the Home Bank and Trust company, 1200 North Ashland avenue, said yesterday that the bank as well and many other business houses have suffered because the street has not been widened.

A new bank building was recently completed on a building line 27 feet from the existing curb while the building next to the new structure on the north is only about 10 feet from the curb. The bank will thus be hidden from view of passersby until the street is widened and the old building which now protrudes is set back to the new building line.

The bank, which is actually only a few feet south of Milwaukee avenue, one of the principal arteries on the northwest side, is located on property which is valuable because of its strategic position at the triple corner of Ashland avenue, Division street and Milwaukee avenue. It will not have the benefit of its full value, however, until Ashland avenue is widened, and the bank is visible from Milwaukee avenue, according to Mr. Krause.

Property owners on the entire street who were forced to build on a setback building line while abutting structures extended to the sidewalk are unable to rent and obtain a return on their investments until all buildings are back to the new line.

Business men who are urging the passage of the bond issue point out that its use, according to the wording of the proposition, is confined to paying judgments and the money cannot be used for any other purpose by the city administration.

LA GRANGE SEEKS FILM BOARD TO SELECT, NOT BAR

Pastor Outlines Plan on Censorship.

A board of censorship to chose rather than delete motion pictures formally proposed at a meeting of the board of trustees by Dr. E. A. Thompson, pastor of the First Congregational church, has the support of prominent La Grange citizens, including Mrs. E. E. Gore, president of the La Grange League of Women Voters, Mrs. H. J. Gibson, president of the Woman's club, and Robert C. Fletcher, president of the high school board of education.

"With the opening of the new La Grange theater we are faced not so much with the problem of weeding out undesirable portions of a picture as in choosing the type of play suitable for the families of the town," declared Dr. Thompson.

"We propose the drafting of an ordinance by the trustees to choose members for a censorship board which will be endowed with police powers. We want to avoid the cheap, mushy type of picture so often imposed upon the theater going public.

"I believe such a board, with broad vision and purpose, can be a real asset to such a community as La Grange."

A. C. Dallach, owner of the La Grange theater building, expressed approval of the pending ordinance.

"The community is mainly concerned with the type of performance offered. I earnestly suggest appointment of a board of censors, representatives of all factions, and endowed with police power to prohibit the showing of undesirable films."

The question of seven day movies, which will be brought to a referendum vote Oct. 25, has aroused the protesting voice of La Grange Methodists, who object to Sunday performances.

VALIANTS OF FIRE THAT SWEPT CHICAGO FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO

When Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lantern in her stable down in De Koven street she started several days of the hardest work Chicago firemen ever did. Only a handful of the men who fought the greatest fire in American history Oct. 8 and 9, 1871, are alive. One of them is Thomas Canty, who lives among his books, his pictures and his memories at 1113 West Madison street. At the time of the fire he was 23 years old and was a member of Engine company No. 13, 119 Dearborn street. The picture at the left shows Engine company No. 24, now located at 2447 Warren avenue. Above and at the right are the members of old Engine company No. 12, then at 1641 Lake street. Their engine was a giant of its time. The picture below is of Engine company No. 7, which was stationed in Blue Island avenue near Harrison street.

FIGHTER OF '71 BLAMES FIRE ON COW'S IRE

Says Bossy Resented Second Milking.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

The cause of the great Chicago fire, the 58th anniversary of which will take place on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, has these many years been attributed to Mrs. O'Leary's cow. But what caused Mrs. O'Leary's cow to kick over the lantern in the barn on De Koven street, the result of which was perhaps the most devastating conflagration in history?

What circumstance motivated bossy to wreck the means of illumination that led to the blaze that licked up 18,000 buildings, whose contents were valued at $200,000,000, cost nearly 300 lives, and left 100,000 persons homeless?

Didn't Want to Be Bothered.

Thomas Canty, 1113 West Madison street, one of the nine surviving veteran firemen who fought in the fire of 1871, says that a party was being held at the O'Leary house that long ago night, that the cow had already been milked early in the evening and that it was the desire of some one, later on, to secure more milk for the making of punch, which caused the animal to object. "She had been milked once," says Mr. Canty, "and she didn't want to be bothered again."

There have been various versions about the incident. One is that some one besides Mrs. O'Leary tried to milk the cow and thus aroused her ire. Another is that a man who bought milk from the O'Leary's had run up a bill and, upon being denied further credit, set fire to the cow shed for revenge. In fact the tale that the cow had anything to do with the fire has been branded as a legend, spontaneous combustion of hay in the loft of the shed being blamed. The latter was the version of the O'Leary family who lost cows, horse and barn, which were not covered by insurance.

Blames Cow's Disposition.

Thomas Canty, aged 81, places the blame on the cow's disposition upon being milked a second time on the same night to provide an ingredient for the party's punch, and his statements concerning his memories of the fire are as emphatic as they are vivid. Mr. Canty lives alone in a room on the third floor above a shoe store on West Madison street, close to the heart of the throbbing city that sprung up from the ashes of the '71 disaster. It can hardly be said, however, that he lives alone for he has acquired the books of the best authors and with these he spends his spare hours. During the day he works in Douglas park.

"The big fire? Yes the anniversary's getting close," said Mr. Canty. "There was a bad fire on Oct. 8 in 1871 that I worked on. It was between the river and Jefferson street and Van Buren and Adams street. But the big fire started at 8 o'clock on the night of Oct. 9. I was with engine 13, 119 Dearborn street, a pipeman, 23 years old. I'd been with the company a year and a half.

"This is how I'd gotten my job with the department. I was born at Oswego, N. Y., where I'd worked on the canal boats. Oswego couldn't support its population increase and when I was 15 I came west and landed in Chicago. I was passing the fire station on Dearborn street one day and I told the boys there they weren't hitching up their horses right. They asked me if I could do it better and I showed them how we had done it with the canal horses. It got me my job.

All Frame Buildings.

"Chicago was all frame buildings except in the heart of the city in those days. A four story structure was considered high. Well, along came the

Forest Park's Bright Lights on Tomorrow

All is ready for the Greater Forest Park celebration to begin tomorrow and continue throughout the week to mark the completion of two major improvements in the village: a comprehensive street lighting system and the widening of Madison street and Roosevelt road.

A program for each day of the week has been prepared by the committee in charge. At 7 o'clock tomorrow evening the lights will be turned on by Mayor George Gold, followed by a parade of floats and automobiles beginning at Roosevelt road and Des Plaines avenue, traversing Oak Park, Maywood and River Forest and returning to Forest Park. This gives promises of being a gala affair with bands, stores and others represented.

Tuesday to Be Souvenir Day.

Tuesday has been designated by the committees in charge as souvenir day. Stores and shops throughout the village will offer customers appropriate souvenirs with their various purchases. On Wednesday evening a foot parade will march through the village. Thursday and Friday are to be special sales days and Saturday will mark the grand finale of the week's celebration.

H. F. Carlson, general chairman of the festivities, said last week that the new lighting system provides exceptional illumination. The residential streets have single globes, similar to those in use in Oak Park, and Roosevelt road and Madison street are equipped with double globes, each having 1,000 candle power. Roosevelt road has been widened ten feet, according to Mr. Carlson, and Madison street eight feet.

Promoters of Celebration.

Several committees have been active in making plans for the celebration. Members of the finance committee are W. F. Grosser, H. H. Hann, Ernest Witt, and H. F. Carlson. The program committee comprises H. C. Rieck, Charles Hussey, Leslie Hurwitz, and Joseph Butler.

The publicity committee is made up of Walter Yunker and Charles Eck, and the decoration committee is composed of Charles Brazda, M. Chiodo and Charles Meseke. Members of the parade committee are Chief Fred W. Licht, Chief John Pries, Louis Oswald, and Frank S. Zimmerman, and the personnel of the advisory committee is Mayor Gold, Albert L. Hall, Albert C. Roos, and Henry J. Mohr.

The Providence High School auxiliary will hold a card party Friday afternoon, Oct. 18, in the gymnasium of the school, Central Park avenue and Monroe street. The social chairman for the event is Mrs. Robert M. Sweitzer. Officers of the club are desirous of having the mothers of all girls at the school present at the party as well as the friends of the faculty, the Sisters of Providence.

Project Boosted by Civic Leaders.

Prediction that building of the proposed elevated boulevard through the west side will revive areas near the loop which have depreciated in value under existing conditions was made yesterday by Ralph F. Kopperschmidt, president of the Empire Trust and Savings bank, Crawford and Milwaukee avenues. Voters of the west park district are to ballot Nov. 5 on a bond issue of $20,000,000 for the project.

The phenomenal development of Chicago in recent years has avoided the near west side almost entirely, Mr. Kopperschmidt pointed out. This fact, which he attributed largely to lack of adequate traffic connections with other portions of the city, has caused drastic depreciation of values affecting real estate which, for many reasons, should be among the most valuable in Chicago, the banker added.

"Such a project is bound to lead to building and development along its route and throughout the west side," Mr. Kopperschmidt continued. "The north side and the south side are developing at a much more rapid pace than the west side because the former are accessible by efficient traffic routes, the shore drives.

Foresees Population Gain.

"People prefer to live where traffic facilities are adequate, and the proposed superhighway will increase the population of the west side, thereby stimulating business.

"One of the arguments I have heard used against the superhighway is that such a rapid traffic boulevard will take business away from the local dealers because it will divert motorists from in front of their stores. This idea is absolutely false. There is no proof that because a driver passes a store he will drop in and buy. The driver who is driving a long distance, the man who will use the superhighway, has a definite destination. It is absurd to believe that he is window-shopping and will stop at random somewhere along the line.

"As for the route," Mr. Kopperschmidt concluded, "I believe it is the best that could have been selected on the west side because it runs entirely over what is now dead property, namely Kinzie street, and will give value to land now entirely undeveloped and worth little.

Bartholf Cites Other Projects.

William J. Bartholf, president of Crane Junior college, Jackson and Oakley boulevards, and a resident of Chicago for more than forty years, yesterday expressed himself in favor of the elevated boulevard and gave arguments to support his views.

"In all my years in Chicago I have never seen a dollar invested in so great a public improvement that did not bring back ten in return, but still certain interests fight the elevated highway," he said. "The trouble with them is that they have not learned that money must be spent if a city is to be built up.

"Most of us are learning this lesson, and money is being spent to build up Chicago. I am convinced, however, that the opposition to the project is composed of men not yet acquainted with the idea that no development can come without an expenditure.

"In years past," Mr. Bartholf continued, "west side residents who came into money used to move to another part of the city. It is improvements such as the great thoroughfare planned by the west park commissioners which will make this district a desirable community and not a district in which people live only because of necessity.

"The project under consideration is in my opinion a primary step in what

Downer, 1833 Pioneer, Gave Suburb a Name

This article is the seventeenth of a series on names of streets and suburbs of the west side.

Downers Grove, southwestern suburb of Chicago, was named after Pierce Downer, who settled in the vicinity on coming from Vermont in 1833. The locality was at one time the camping ground of Indian bands with whom the pioneers had acquaintance. Waubansie, chief of the Pottawattomies, lived in the grove a year before Mr. Downer arrived.

A history of Due Page county written in 1876 speaks of Downers Grove as "one of the quietest of places until thirteen years ago, when the railroad was completed from Chicago to Aurora, gradually making it more and more a suburb of Chicago."

"This in many ways helps toward refinement and stimulates our citizens to an ambition to keep pace with the times," adds the historian. "There may be drawbacks to this in the tendency to indulge in luxuries of city life beyond what we can afford, but if our people will not yield to the temptation to any greater extent in the future than in the past there will be no cause to regret our proximity to the city."

Chose a "Garden Spot."

Pierce Downer was of the same New England stock as the Wheatons and other pioneers who, on viewing the Chicago scene, chose the Du Page county territory rather than that nearer the lake. Downer decided that the locality he had finally chosen was the "garden spot," and as a farmer and student and highly respectable citizen his career appears to have been a rather enviable one.

Downer first came to Chicago to visit his son, Stephen, who was engaged in erecting the first lighthouse in Chicago. Settling inland, he became a practical and progressive farmer on the fertile acres and, we are told, made use of all improvements in farm machinery as they came along. It was his pride that his farm was one of the best tilled in the state. His fences were well kept, everything was neat and orderly, and his stock always in good condition.

Read Congressional Record.

And, though his life was a busy one, Mr. Downer kept himself posted on all the questions of the day. During his entire life he was a reader of the Congressional Record.

In his wife Mr. Downer found a faithful companion and helpmeet, and together they traveled life's journey for 55 years. Mr. Downer died the day following Mrs. Downer's death in 1883.

"PASSING TORCH" SERVICE HELD AT FLOWER SCHOOL

The ceremony of "Passing the Torch" was held by the Honor Club of Lucy Flower High School last Friday. According to this tradition, the president for last semester, Miss Esther Lambert, passed the torch to the new president, Miss Selma Soltner, admonishing her to carry on the high standards of scholarship and citizenship long cherished by the club.

The attributes of the club and the girls who were chosen to represent them at the ceremony were: Loyalty, Miss Francine Zimmerman; courtesy, Miss Margaret Toth; ambition, Miss Ruth Flaks; health, Miss Elsie Zalesky; good citizenship, Miss Helen Price; cleanliness, Miss Doris Bayard; thrift, Miss Nellie Martin. Other officers of the club are: Vice president, Miss Ruth Franson; secretary, Miss Josephine Drigot.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

BY FRED PASLEY.

GRANDPA OLLENDORF, formerly of Norwood Park, who spent the summer in Michigan, has returned to his home in Park Ridge.

Frank J. Petru's English type residence at 2110 South Austin boulevard, Cicero, is rapidly nearing completion, and Frank, who is president of the school board out there and manages to scrape together a living selling real estate, is boasting that it will stand as a monument to the versatility of his town's industry and craftsmanship, as it is virtually a "Cicero built" home. Good for Cicero, Frank.

* *

VILLAGE PRESIDENT CRYSLER of Oak Park is a diligent worker and frequently burns the midnight incandescent. Being so employed the other evening, he forgot the passage of time until the wee sma', as we say, hours, when he discovered he was hungry. He hurried from his office to the business section in search of a restaurant. All were closed. He couldn't understand it. He investigated and learned of an ancient ordinance that compelled the eating houses to lock their doors at 1 a. m. Last week the council repealed it. Chief of Police Barsema says that ice box prowling by the friend husbands has fallen off 90 per cent since.

MRS. SIGNE PALMBLAD of 1119 North Mayfield avenue, who has been spending the summer at her studio at Skansen, Wis., where she finished a number of canvases, reports that several months ago she fractured her right arm. While waiting for it to mend she practiced with her left hand and became so proficient she could wield the brushes equally well with it as with her right. So Mrs. Palmblad is now one of our few ambidextrous artists.

Lombard must be a pretty nice place to live in. We learn that the folks are being invited by the Spectator to plant lilacs "to make this our town, known the world over for its beauty and culture of lilacs." They have organized a Lilac league to help householders with their planting. We'll have to drive out and give Lombard the once-over in our campaign to uncover Chicago's prettiest suburb.

* *

TOM O'DEA of the Alexander Lumber company says you can't hang your guests on a nail when you ask them to stay all night after the week-end party, and we believe every right thinking host will subscribe to his sentiments. It certainly would be cruel and unusual, and can you imagine a worse hangover?

* *

Alfred Barron is back from a trip to Oklahoma, where he visited the city of Anteler, which is governed by American Indians—mayor, chief of police, and all the other officials—and whose population is 85 per cent Indian. It is regarded as the most law-abiding town in Oklahoma.

Rev. Grover Whimsett Installed at Glen Ellyn

The Rev. Grover C. Whimsett was installed Sunday as minister of the Glen Ellyn Presbyterian church. Dr. Roy Ewing Vale, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Oak Park, delivered the sermon and pastors of three other suburban churches conducted other parts of the ceremony.

POSTER MODEL

MISS MARY LOUISE BOWEN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Miss Mary Louise Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Bowen, 224 South Wesley avenue, Oak Park, was recently selected as the subject for the silhouette of the poster being used in the western suburbs in the national Girl Scout drive for funds.

70 Crippled Children Are Rotary Guests

Seventy crippled boys and girls of the orthopedic department of J. Sterling Morton High school, Cicero, are cherishing seventy souvenir pencils and many more than seventy happy recollections of "swings and slides and thrilling rides" and a jolly dinner that they enjoyed at Medinah Country club, where they were guests of the Cicero Rotarians recently.

This was the second annual affair of this kind sponsored by the Cicero Rotary club. John Carlander, chairman of the committee in charge, arranged for the thirty-one automobiles, driven by Rotarians, that transported the children from the school building to Medinah club and back to their respective homes in the evening. The entire afternoon was given over to sports under the supervision of instructors from the high school.

Rotarians Join Children at Dinner.

Some fifty members of the Cicero Rotary club interspersed themselves among the children at the dinner tables. Joseph House, president of the club, spoke briefly on the principles of Rotary. He referred to H. V. Church, superintendent of J. Sterling Morton schools, who is called the "daddy of the crippled children's department," as "the man who made it possible for these children to have special school attention." Supt. Church outlined the institution of the orthopedic department and spoke of the inspiration members of the Rotary club had given him in his work of establishing such a department.

Special Program for Children.

A special program was given by the children. While Joseph Hanzel played his saxophone, Henry Weigman, who has the use of neither his arms nor his legs, painted gay little little dancers on a canvas with a brush held between his teeth. Other students participating in the program were: Matthew Clabaugh, Ardys Elder, Joseph McCall, Loretta Bettin, George Kohout, Raymond Mehren, Adaline Paradowski, Elbert Derrick, Jimmy Micolast, Geraldine Langlois, Bobby O'Connor, Larayne Napoliton, Bernice Lasdauskas, and Frank Stransky.

Members of the Rotary committee were: John Carlander, chairman; Ben Braun, Dr. J. McLallen, Joseph House, N. F. Fultz, John Nepil, the Rev. Stuart Pratt, and George Wilde.

Here's What High School Youths Carry in Pockets

The Marshall News, newspaper of Marshall High school, puzzled by the question, "What do high school boys carry in their pockets?" conducted a recent investigation. The answer was: Girl's pictures, dancing club tickets, big, bad knives, and old street car transfers. Two youths displayed photographs of their favorite teachers.

STRONG FORCES SEEKING DEFEAT OF FRANK REID

Drys Are Discontent with His Record.

Congressman Frank R. Reid's present term, his fourth, may be his last, according to the political experts of his home territory. Although the primary in which he must seek renomination if he desires to remain in

FRANK A. M'CARTHY.

FRANK R. REID.
[Keehne Photo.]

Washington is six months away, potent influences already are planning his defeat.

The Eleventh district is known as the Aurora district, so called because it includes the congressman the city in which resides; but it stretches from the Wisconsin line all the way to the Indiana line, its four counties, McHenry, Kane, Du Page, and Will, bordering Lake and Cook counties to the west and south.

The population of those four counties makes it one of the big districts of the state and from each of them come reports that general opinion holds he will be beaten next April if there is a concerted movement in that direction. Companion reports are that such a movement is expected and even now may be taking shape.

Not Battler, Drys Assert.

Although Mr. Reid was elected in 1922, 1924, 1926 and 1928 as a dry, the drys of the district, and particularly those of his own county of Kane, are dissatisfied with him. They say he votes with them when a record test is made, but he does not battle for their cause or aid it except by his vote when it comes to a showdown.

That man is B. S. Pearsall, butter and dairy products magnate, a resident of Elgin and several times a millionaire. He not only is dry but ardently so. In politics he always has been on the side of reform. He was one of the financial supports in the election of State's Attorney Carbary. He was a battling reform alderman a quarter of a century ago.

Mr. Pearsall is in Europe and is not expected to return until about Thanksgiving day. At that time, it is believed, he will say definitely whether he will run against Reid and his decision will be the signal for the opening of the battle, for it will have some effect on the decision of other potential candidates of considerable political strength.

Boom for Chauncey Reed.

There are at least two of these. One is Chauncey W. Reed of Naperville, state's attorney of Du Page county, who in that office has made a record for law enforcement against strong drink, although he is not considered a dry. He is a young, active service man and a good sized boom for him was launched during the recent state convention of the American Legion at Rock Island.

State's Attorney Reed is now on his honeymoon. When he left he planned a six weeks' stay, so that he will be back on the scene slightly in advance of the decision awaited from Mr. Pearsall.

The same is said to be true of State Representative Frank A. McCarthy of the Fourteenth senatorial district, a resident of Elgin. He was one of the big men of the last session of the assembly in which, as in former sessions, he was the spokesman for the milk producers, who are numerous in his rection. This is considered a big asset.

SUNDAY MOVIES AND CENSORSHIP UP IN LA GRANGE

Pick Rather than Delete, Is Pastor's Plan.

A board of censorship to chose rather than delete motion pictures formally proposed at a meeting of the board of trustees by Dr. E. A. Thompson, pastor of the First Congregational church, has the support of prominent La Grange citizens, including Mrs. E. E. Gore, president of the La Grange League of Women Voters, Mrs. H. J. Gibson, president of the Woman's club, and Robert C. Fletcher, president of the high school board of education.

"With the opening of the new La Grange theater we are faced not so much with the problem of weeding out undesirable portions of a picture as in choosing the type of play suitable for the families of the town," declared Dr. Thompson.

"We propose the drafting of an ordinance by the trustees to choose members for a censorship board which will be endowed with police powers. We want to avoid the cheap, mushy type of picture so often imposed upon the theater going public.

"I believe such a board, with broad vision and purpose, can be a real asset to such a community as La Grange."

A. C. Dallach, owner of the La Grange theater building, expressed approval of the pending ordinance.

"The community is mainly concerned with the type of performance offered. I earnestly suggest appointment of a board of censors, representatives of all factions, and endowed with police power to prohibit the showing of undesirable films."

The question of seven day movies, which will be brought to a referendum vote Oct. 25, has aroused the protesting voice of La Grange Methodists, who object to Sunday performances.

MARRIED 50 YEARS

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT ADLER

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Adler, 3322 Grenshaw street, are celebrating today the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. Their eldest son, Abraham, is celebrating his twenty-fifth anniversary today.

DEDICATION OF JEFFERSON PARK CHURCH TODAY

Dr. O. S. Davis to Preside at Formal Service.

The new Jefferson Park Congregational church and community house, Giddings street near Milwaukee avenue, will be dedicated this morning at 11 o'clock, the Rev. Lewis A. Convis, pastor, preaching the sermon. This afternoon the formal dedication service will be held with Dr. Ozora S. Davis, former president of the Chicago Theological seminary, preaching, and Siegfried E. Gruenstein presiding at the organ.

The community house will be dedicated Tuesday night with a sermon by Dr. Robert W. Gammon, secretary of the Congregational Educational society. Dedication week will close with a banquet on Friday night, when Dr. J. A. Jenkins, president of the Union Theological college, will be the speaker. The banquet will be in honor of the Woman's guild. Mrs. Oscar Kohl, president, will speak in behalf of the former guild presidents.

Addresses of Greeting.

Addresses of greeting will be brought from Harry Jensen, worshipful master of Providence Masonic lodge; S. R. Rappold, vice president of the Jefferson Park Business Men's association, and from the Rev. John G. Graham, pastor of the Cragin Congregational church.

The present building was planned nearly four years ago. A campaign for the raising of funds resulted in the securing of over $60,000 in pledges. The auditorium of the present church will seat about seven hundred and there are facilities for caring for a Sunday school of equal number.

Dedication Book Interesting.

An interesting feature of the elaborate dedication book which the church has published is a page of old photographs of people who now are members of the church who attended either as members or as Sunday school scholars the old original church on Milwaukee avenue. Many of the pictures—some of which were taken nearly half a century ago—show the changing style of dress of the various periods. Among those whose photographs appear in this list are: Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Schuhr, Mrs. M. Hansen, Mrs. Emma Helmke, Charles and Miss Luella Moisley, Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, Mrs. William Deitcher, T. E. Bourne, Mrs. Kate Bourne, Mrs. Henry Moisley, Mrs. Clara Lowell, Mrs. Henry Wulff, Mrs. Cady K. Wright, Mrs. L. Alting, Mrs. Emma Meyers, and Milton D. Smith.

Berwyn Paving Projects Up to Board on Oct. 14

Several paving projects are scheduled to be taken up at a meeting of the Berwyn board of local improvements on Oct. 14. These include the alley north of Ogden avenue and the alley south of 34th street, from the west line of Clarence avenue to the east line of Wesley avenue; the alley north of Ogden avenue from the east line of Home avenue to the west line of Clinton avenue; the alley south of Windsor avenue from the east line of Scoville avenue to the west line of Gunderson avenue, and the alley south of Windsor avenue, from the east line of Wesley avenue to the west line of Clarence avenue. Ald. Charles Nadherny is secretary of the board.

AUSTIN BAPTIST CHURCH HOLDS SPECIAL SERVICE

Rounds Out Dedication Ceremony Today.

A week of special services held in connection with the dedication of the new Bible school building of the Austin Baptist church, Pine avenue and Ferdinand street, will be concluded today. At 10:30 o'clock this morning the newly elected church officers are to be installed; at 6:30 o'clock this evening there will be a joint meeting of the young people's societies, with Edwin Phelps, general secretary of the national Baptist organization, as speaker; and at 7:30 o'clock "The Pageant of the Holy Grail" will be given under the direction of Miss Nelle Wiley.

The new building which has been built and equipped at a cost of about $150,000 contains a large assembly hall with stage, also to be used as a gymnasium, a ladies' parlor, a men's club room, departmental assemblies and class rooms, a pastor's study, a church and Bible school office and a kitchen. The new unit adjoins the main building on the north.

Otto Delivers Address.

Dedicatory week began last Sunday in the assembly hall of the new building. Dr. Benjamin Otto of the Chicago Baptist executive council delivered the chief address at the service at 2:30 o'clock. The service of dedication was conducted by the minister, Dr. York A. King, and the congregation; the prayer of dedication was offered by Deacon E. S. Osgood, and a special dedication hymn, written by C. A. Osgood, a member of the church, was sung. In the morning at 10:30 o'clock and again at 7:30 o'clock in the evening the Rev. Austin K. De Blois, D. D., of Philadelphia, preached. Music for all services was furnished by the chorus choir of the church conducted by Harry W. Weidner, with Mrs. Anna Hinshaw Shideler, soloist, and Miss Jessie Adams, organist.

A banquet was given Monday evening for the primary, junior and intermediate departments of the Bible school, followed by motion pictures, music and games. Other events on the evening's program were a concert by the Austin Commandery band at 7:30, a general meeting at 8:15 o'clock at which the greetings of various community organizations were given, and a one act play presented by the young people's society at 9 o'clock. The general meeting was called "Dedication to Community Service."

Sketch by Women's Society.

On Tuesday evening there was a "Dedication to Denominational Interests" with an address by Mrs. H. B. Goodman, former president of the Northern Baptist convention, followed by a missionary sketch by the women's society. At 3:15 o'clock that afternoon a meeting was held for members and the parents of the cradle roll and beginners' departments. Mrs. George Whittle of the Chicago Graded union gave the talk. The Bible school orchestra, led by Tony Milkau, was heard at 7:30 o'clock.

The outstanding feature for Wednesday was the annual church banquet at 6:30 o'clock, followed by a business meeting. Dr. Harold Stanley Stewart of the First Baptist church of Oak Park was the speaker. This day was given over to "Dedication to Kingdom Enterprise."

Charles S. Peterson Speaks.

A stereopticon lecture on the Holy Land was presented on Thursday evening by Dr. Herbert Whitney Virgin of the North Shore Baptist church, preceded by a miscellaneous program. This day was devoted to "Dedication to Christian Education."

The annual banquet of the men's Bible class took place on Friday, the principal talk being given Charles S. Peterson, city treasurer, who spoke on "The World's Fair of 1933." Musical numbers were presented by a quartet from the Olivet Baptist church. This day was named for "Dedication to Good Fellowship."

Du Page County Police to Try Radio System

Plans have been drawn up by Sheriff Lawrence Hattendorf for a system of radio transmitters and receiving sets for the use of banks and police stations in Du Page county. The project is to be taken up by the county board next Wednesday.

Berwyn, Sept. 23.—I found a pair of quaint wrought iron candle holders in a neighboring gift shop some time ago—a particular type for which I had been searching many months. They were on a sale counter of odds and ends and had been reduced from $18.50 to $2.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Having just finished furnishing a small cosy room, I found that I needed a radio to add the finishing touch. I had in mind a certain set but the exchequer had been reduced to a most distressing condition; in fact, I had the price of about one of the parts. Imagine my surprise when one day I went into a local radio bargain house and found just the set I wanted, priced at $2.50. And it was a five tube set at that.

Westmont, Sept. 23.—When I came home from France I needed clothes. I "fell for" a particular $75 suit in a west side store. Whew! I decided I'd have to wait and save up. A month later this firm had a big sale and I got my suit for $29.50.

Report Cites Demand for Adult Education.

Holding that education is not an affair of the schools that ends with a diploma, but a process that must continue throughout life—a process in which a man's school days are only an incident—the department of adult education is stressed in the annual report, just issued by Philip L. Seman, general director of the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard.

"Adult education," says Director Seman, "is voluntary; it is individual in respect to capacity, aims and environment; it constitutes a wise use of adult leisure time; it requires freedom in all respects—freedom to accept, freedom to reject. It carries an obligation to open-mindedness, and in the broadest and finest sense it is individual growth."

Director Seman refers to the statement of a leading college president that adult education is one of the most significant impulses and ideas of this generation.

Bigger Opportunity Seen.

The Jewish People's institute, according to the report, finds that it has an opportunity to do adult education work of a more intensified nature, largely because the restriction of immigration has become so definite a part of the national policy that for a time there was an impression that the elementary school would fall off in numbers and eventually eliminate itself. This falling off of numbers in the elementary school has not taken place, and there seems to be no abatement in the number of persons seeking this instruction.

The newcomers find themselves more subject to the influences of Americanization, which in turn, compels them to re-orientate themselves more quickly than was the case when large bodies of immigrants came to the United States and one might permit one's self less contact with the general body of Americans, the report continues.

The Jewish People's institute, a community of schools for education and for the advancement of general knowledge and recreation, is a pioneer in the adult education movement of the country.

For its community of schools, for its large membership, and for the general public of Chicago, the institute has provided a library of some 10,000 volumes of special classification to which the 1929 report also refers. The library is devoted to two main objects—the supply of information on topics of social interest, and to Judaica. It is said that there is not a book of merit in the field of social sciences and its related aspects in literature, philosophy, psychology, and history that is not to be found on the shelves. Equally as complete is its Judaica library.

In fact, there is said to be no Jewish library in the central states at all comparable to the Herman Schur library at the institute, and that neither the public library nor the university libraries can compete in the selection or completeness of this library in matters Judaica. Hence it is the mecca of Jewish scholars who know of it.

1,000,000 Attendance Yearly.

President Jacob M. Loeb's message contained in the 1929 report says that the aggregate attendance at the institute for the year of over a million people presents a vision of a tremendous activity—educational, physical, and social.

Julius Rosenwald is first vice president of the institute, now in its twenty-fifth year; Charles Shaffner is second vice president; Mrs. M. L. Rothschild, third vice president; Alfred Decker, fourth vice president; Mrs. Julius Stone, secretary; B. J. Schiff, financial secretary; Samuel Phillipson, treasurer.

The directors are: Joseph Block, David Blum, Clarence L. Coleman, Gen. Abel Davis, James Davis, Alfred Decker, Barnett Faroll, Morris E. Feiwell, Edwin G. Foreman Jr., Harry Goldstine, C. J. Gordon, Mrs. L. E. Halperin, Mrs. Walter E. Heller, Walter M. Heymann, Gustav Hochstadter, Irvin Jacobs, Henry A. Klein, Henry R. Levy, Benjamin F. Lindheimer, I. B. Lipsoh, Allan M. Loeb, Jacob M. Loeb, Victor Loewenthal, Frank G. Marshall, Joseph Michaels, William Nussbaum, M. L. Ottenheimer, Samuel Phillipson, Samuel P. Platt, Theodore Regensteiner, Julius Rosenwald, Maurice Rothschild, Mrs. M. L. Rothschild, Toby Rubovits, B. J. Schiff, Henry C. Schwab, Charles Shaffner, Hubert S. Silberman, Mrs. Albert Stein, Mrs. Julius Stone, Arthur W. Straus, Earl Weil, Isidor Weil, John Wineberg, Dr. A. B. Yudelson.

ROSARY GIRLS COMPETE FOR TENNIS TITLE

Who will be tennis queen at Rosary college this year? This question is holding the interest of the entire student body of the institution, as the tournaments begun several days ago draw to a close. The title is to be bestowed on the winner some time in the near future. Miss Alice McGrail is in charge of the tournament.

Hockey is also attracting scores of students, from the enthusiastic freshman to the seasoned senior player. Games are to be staged between the various classes. A series of hiking trips is also on the recreational program at the college this year.

Miss Helen Hauser Heads Aurora Class

The German Club of East High School, Aurora, has named its officers for the current scholastic year. Miss Helen Hauser is president, Miss Marion Fricke, vice president, Miss Dorothea Klebe, secretary, and Miss Doris Swinehammer, treasurer. The officers of the Spanish club, also elected recently, are: President, William Arle; vice president, Miss Helen Couve; secretary, Miss Leona Dittman; treasurer, Miss Charlotte Thompson.

Jerome Gale to Head Harrison High Club

The newly organized Third and Fourth Periods Senior Accounting club of Harrison Technical High school has chosen officers for the year. The president is Jerome Gale; secretary, Max Sushinsky; treasurer, Herman Schneiderman, and the sergeant at arms, Raymond Haydock.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

In the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE last Sunday appeared an article stating that the Madison-Kedzie association, which indorsed the elevated highway proposed by the west park board, included 125 business men in the neighborhood of Madison street and Crawford avenue. This was an error. All members of the association are located in the district at Madison street and Kedzie avenue.

LEGION CORPS STARTS BOXING SHOWS FRIDAY

Yarmo-De Vere Series to Continue All Winter.

Commencing Friday, and every Friday night thereafter during the winter months, amateur boxing, sanctioned by the A. A. U., will be held at 3216 West Roosevelt road, under the auspices of the drum and bugle corps of Yarmo-De Vere post, No. 459, of the American Legion. Morton Levitton is the matchmaker, and many well known referees, including Dave Miller, will officiate. One of the motives in staging this fistic series is the development of talent for the coming A. A. U. and Golden Gloves tourneys.

Dr. S. C. Bromberg, past commander of Edison Park post, No. 541, and Leo S. Miller of Logan Square post attended the national convention of the legion which opened last Monday, as delegates from the ninth district. Edward Samuelson of Albany park and John Fitzmorris of John P. Conley post were alternates.

New officers are now in charge of Portage Park post, No. 183. J. Leslie Hansen is commander. Other new officers are: Carl Anderson, senior vice commander; Edward Johnson, junior vice commander; Elmer C. Siewert, finance officer; new directors to serve two years, Jack Keating, William Johnson, past commander, Robert P. Well, George Schelkopf, and C. A. Hill; to serve one year, Jack Whitford; Walter Heidenson, historian; George Schelkopf, adjutant; Earl Derx, service officer, and Robert Well, publicity chairman.

Portage Park unit, No. 183, American Legion auxiliary, met Friday evening for its first business session under the new officers. Mrs. Marjorie Schelkopf, the new president, and Mrs. Josephine Freeman, past president, gave their delegates' reports on the Rock Island state convention.

Lieut. Otto Staehli post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold an open meeting with a special program tomorrow evening at 4619 Milwaukee avenue. Philip Mendelssohn is the commander. Veterans from posts throughout the city are expected. A buffet supper is to be served.

At the last meeting of Naval post, No. 372, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Commander, Norm C. Olsen; senior vice commander, Charles Reynolds; junior vice commander, P. F. Brautigan; finance officer, P. K. Crawford; post surgeon, Dr. M. E. Healy; sergeant-at-arms, P. J. Mitchell; adjutant, George G. Speir; directors, K. E. Carroll and Herb Klein. Included in Naval post's schedule of winter activities is bowling. The post's own league will inaugurate its 1929-30 season tomorrow night. Membership in the league is open to all Naval post members.

Clark B. Kelsey, former adjutant of the American Furniture Mart Legion post, was elected commander at a post luncheon held Tuesday in the sun parlor of the Furniture Club of America. Kelsey succeeds Wilson J. Killough. George McEwen was elected vice commander to succeed Frank S. Whiting. Other officers elected were: Adjutant, William F. Sullivan; finance officer, L. W. Foulk; judge advocate, James Mills, and sergeant-at-arms, Allen Bashara.

OAK PARK C. OF C. ASKS CENSORSHIP OF ADVERTISING

Restaurants Want to Stay Open All Night.

The board of directors of the Oak Park Chamber of Commerce has decided to include in the bylaws a clause which will prevent its members from advertising in publications not having the approval of the chamber's advertising committee. This action was taken because of the prevalent advertising solicitations in the village. The object, according to the chamber, is not to discriminate against all advertising, but to weed out the legitimate from that which is unworthy of the expenditures necessary. Officials of the chamber expect to save merchants several thousand dollars a year in this manner.

A survey made last week by the retail affairs committee of the chamber indicated that most restaurants of the village are desirous of remaining open all night. The survey was made at the request of the village board, and following its completion a report was forwarded to the members.

Plans have been made by members of the South Oak Park council of the chamber to effect greater coöperation among merchants of the district. A meeting of the council was held in the offices of the Suburban Trust and Savings Bank building last Monday. F. C. Ogden is now chairman of the council. The following committee was appointed to interview President Cryster of Oak Park regarding the interests of South Oak Park business men in the matter of police portection for the district: J. R. Cessna and J. B. Allen. A membership committee was also chosen, the personnel being B. L. Chadwick and J. Stewart. The council plans to appoint two men each month to act on the membership committee.

Boy Scout Camp Site to Be Dedicated Today

Dedication of the camp site of the Boy Scout troop No. 345 of Our Lady Help of Christians school, scheduled for last Sunday, will take place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Because of inclement weather the ceremony was postponed until today. Anton J. Cermak is to present the site, which is located in the forest preserve north and east of dam No. 2, Des Plaines, to the Rev. J. P. O'Reilly, pastor of the church. The troop will be under the direction of Commissioner M. P. Jones, scoutmaster, and the drum and bugle corps will be led by Commissioner John Gallivan. The troop committee is made up of William J. Campbell, chairman, James W. McNichols, James McCullough, George R. Kelly, and Charles Rank. The Rev. R. Ashenden is chaplain for the troop.

ELECT 23 GIRLS TO CLUB COUNCIL AT OAK PK. HIGH

Rosh Hashona—Happy New Year—5690 (1929-1930)

OCTOBER 5th and 6th Is The Jewish New Year

Yesterday and today mark the beginning of the 5690th year in the Hebraic lunar calendar. The Jewish New Year, or Rosh Hashona, is a holiday of deep moral and religious significance for all Jews—days on which every Hebrew takes inventory of his moral status, implores forgiveness for his shortcomings and invokes guidance. According to the Jewish teaching, on these two days it is incribed by the Divine Hand who shall be born and who shall pass on, who shall prosper and who shall suffer during the year to come. It is a holiday of solemnity and sacredness, of introspection and consecration, and yet one of joyous and optimistic hope for the future.

Religion is the great rock upon which civilization rests. Emerson said "what greater calamity can fall upon a nation than the loss of worship!" The hundreds of thousands of Jews whose New Year has called them to worship are an integral part of Chicago's citizenry and life. We join in wishing them the golden greeting of the season—"Loshono Tovo Ticosavo"—"May You Be Inscribed for a Happy New Year!"

is bound to follow in the way of development of automobile traffic facilities. I do not believe the slight increase in taxes to pay for it will be felt at all, and will certainly prove small compared to the benefits which will accrue.

"Supporters of a proposition of this kind are probably more open to economic arguments than any other kind, but let them not forget that its value as a life saving measure is extremely important.

"I am convinced that everything about the project is healthful and in line with progress and growth. The opposition can urge nothing against it except that it will cost money, and such an argument is unsound," he concluded.

Merchant Denies Trade Loss.

Ed Shalek, former president of the West Side Kiwanis club and merchant located at 3223 West Madison street, declared that business men who oppose the project because it will "carry away prosperity" have no basis for their contention. In fact, Mr. Shalek believes, the removal of thousands of through drivers from the streets will be a genuine aid to business.

"The superhighway is valuable for the very reason that it removes many through drivers from surface business streets such as Madison," he said, "and leaves the thoroughfare free for the local driver. My business comes from the man who is driving directly to my store, and not the motorists speeding past who are interested only in getting to destinations, they have in mind.

"It is particularly desirable that women drivers shopping in our district are not subjected to the dangers brought by the motorists in a hurry. These motorists choke up the streets so that one desiring to park or go slowly is handicapped.

"The only argument advanced against it is that it brings a tax increase, and that is the only line along which people might be misled by the opposition. For that reason, the point that the return on the investment will come soon and in full measure cannot be too strongly stressed."

Leaders Boost Elevated Drive

ROSARY COLLEGE MARKS FEAST OF PATRON TODAY

Faculty, students, and friends of Rosary college will join today in celebrating the feast of the patroness of the college, Our Queen of the Holy Rosary. The formal program sponsored by the Rosary college auxiliary will begin at 2:30 p. m. on the campus and will be continued later in the afternoon in the chapel.

MRS. WILLIAM HARDY. [McNutt Photo.]

Busses will be at the Wisconsin avenue elevated station between 1:30 and 2:15 p. m. to accommodate those who wish to attend the celebration. The feast is an annual celebration dating back more than four hundred years, commemorating one of the decisive battles of the world, when the defeat of the Mohammedans made Europe safe for Christendom.

The celebration will begin with a procession from the cloister walk to the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes, recently completed on the college campus. A recital of the rosary will be held on the way to the shrine, which will be blessed by the Rev. W. P. McIntyre, O. P., chaplain of the college.

Procession to Chapel.

Following this ceremony, the assembly will form a procession to the chapel. Exercises there will be opened by a solo by Arthur de St. Aubin, "Veni Creator." The Rev. Leo C. Gainor, principal of the Fenwick High school for boys, will give the sermon, "Our Lady of the Rosary." This will be followed by "Ave Maria" sung by Miss Genevieve Kennedy.

Rosary Sunday, which will be honored with this solemn celebration commemorates the naval battle of Lepanto, won Oct. 6, 1517, by the Christian forces who were fighting the Mohammedans. The Catholic faith attributes the victory to the three days' continual prayer of the rosary which preceded the battle, and the celebration derives its name from this fact.

Fifteen Hundred Women in Auxiliary.

The Rosary college auxiliary, which joins the college in celebrating the feast, consists of 1,500 women, who have made the interests of the college their own. The society was formed in July, 1920, to assist the college, and especially to aid in furnishing and maintaining the chapel.

Mrs. William Hardy of River Forest was founder of the auxiliary. The present presiding officer is Mrs. Lee Cupp, 5337 West Madison street, Chicago, and Mrs. Edward Hines of Evanston is the honorary president. Other officers are Mrs. Lawrence Harvey, 4730 West End avenue, Chicago, first vice president and chairman of the membership committee, and Mrs. William S. Hefferan, 4631 Harvard avenue, Chicago, second vice president and chairman of the program committee.

PROSECUTOR'S AID TEACHES ROMAN LAW AT LOYOLA UNIVERSITY

Loyola university's school of law began courses in Roman law last Monday with Frank Mast, LL.B., as instructor. Prof. Mast, an assistant state's attorney in the felony court, Roosevelt road and State street, was at one time counselor for the Lithuanian legation at Washington, D. C., a position he held for several years.

Prof. Mast's course at Loyola university will consist of an historical summary of the origin and development of Roman law, including the Institutes of Justinian, the digests and the commentaries, and an application of the theory of Roman law to the problems of the common law.

FIGHTER OF '71 BLAMES BLAZE ON BOSSY'S IRE

Claims Cow Resented the Second Milking.

Mg fire. The members of our company were worn out from fighting the Oct. 8 fire when we saw those burning clapboards flying over the city from the southwest. The strong gale carried the burning boards half a mile high.

"The alarm was turned in from the city hall. We went to Jefferson and Polk streets. The whole south side of the river was on fire. People were driving away with their worldly goods. Everything was in an uproar. Mike Keely was in the pop business at Harrison and Clinton streets. His wares —some new temperance drink he had gotten out—were in the street and the stuff furnished a bit of refreshment in the midst of the hot flames.

Futile to Fight Flames.

"We gave all the energy we had in trying to ward off the fiery monster that fed on the dry buildings. That same night we went to the south side. The Grand Pacific had just been built. It was supposed to be fireproof, but it might as well have been a carpenter's bench covered with shavings. While the flames were fierce they were not so high, but it was no use fighting them.

"We worked on the south side of the river until the next day at noon, finishing up at a location about where Wacker drive now joins Michigan avenue and where there was a three story building. No food, no rest—just smoke and fire.

"The vicinity of the Illinois Central depot, South Water street and the lake, was packed with freight that the owners hoped to get hauled away. Chicago became just a scene of waste. There were coal yards that burned for six months.

Lost Everything.

"We young fellows in the department—for we were young then, you know—had lost everything along with the rest of the folks. I did go back to our fire station to get my watch before it was too late. There is another member of that old company still surviving—Lieut. Albert N. Pendleton, who has been at Henrotin hospital for 14 years.

"Well, I stayed with the department until 1886—sixteen years. Then I went railroading. I remained in Chicago until 1901 and then until 1919 I ranched out in Montana. Ten years ago I came back to the old town that had grown up. It had grown up more than we old timers thought it would, and it's my opinion that it will continue to grow at a bigger pace than most of the present day folk think it will.

Never Such Another.

"No, there'll never be such another fire in Chicago. The city is underlined with water, the skyscrapers are fireproof and the fighting equipment is the best to be had. Still, I can't help but think sometimes of those three horses at old Engine 13—the pair of blacks pulling the engine who knew as much about fires as the firemen did, and the dapple gray mare that pulled the hose carriage.

"I may be past 80, but I can still do a good day's work, I'm thankful to say. Yesterday, out at the park, I kicked a football. My philosophy of life is 'labor and read good books." If I was young again I'd go into the air service. One of the these days I'll be checking out; most of the boys who fought the big Chicago fire with me are gone."

FISHERMEN'S CLUB OF CICERO ENDS WEEK'S CEREMONY

A men's meeting devoted to music and prayer under the auspices of the Cicero Fishermen's club last night closed the week's celebration dedicating the new building of the First Congregational church of Cicero, 52d avenue and 24th street.

The dedication ceremony began last Sunday and continued throughout the week with a special feature each night. The Rev. Melvin Trotter, noted Grand Rapids evangelist, officiated at the ceremony and spoke at each of the nightly meetings.

A parade from the old building to the new $135,000 structure, led by Pastor William McCarrell, opened the event, which included Sunday school programs, young people's rallies and a series of musical features. The First Congregational church was organized in 1913 with about 15 members, according to the Rev. Mr. McCarrell, and has constantly grown until it was necessary to build the new church to accommodate 1,000 residents of Cicero.

O'NEILL VS. BARR TO BE HOTTEST SENATE BATTLE

Preliminaries Are Setting Pace for State.

Chicago and its suburbs have ringside seats for the most exciting fight now in the cards for the next legislative primary, the battle of State Representative Lottie Holman O'Neill to wrest from that veteran, Senator Richard J. Barr, his seat in the upper chamber of the general assembly.

RICHARD J. BARR.

Nowhere else in the state is there anything like such a fight forecast. Those who love a good scrap are praying that it will remain a "two man" affair; that there will be no added starters to confuse the lines; and the two contestants are said to be telling their friends that they want nothing better than a straightaway contest to a finish without complications.

Mrs. O'Neill, the first woman member of the Illinois assembly, lives in Downers Grove, in Du Page county, which borders Cook county on the west. Senator Barr, who already has served twenty-seven years, resides in Joliet. That is in Will county, lying below Du Page and extending around the southern end of Cook. Together thy constitute the Firty-first district. Both are heavily Republican and the winner of the nomination of that party is considered as good as elected.

Preliminaries Set Pace.

The primary is not until next April, but heavy preliminaries for this go are already in progress, setting the pace for the rest of the state.

Even those who predict a tough—if not an impossible—tussle for Mrs. O'Neill give her credit for immense courage. Her first election to the lower house came in 1922. Since then she has been reelected three times for the regular two year term. In her four regular sessions she has won recognition as a scrapper for her pet measures.

Barr is considered a giant in the assembly. For several terms now he has been recognized as the boss of the senate, a place that he continued to hold, although sidetracked at the wish of Gov. Emmerson this year from his old honor of the presidency pro tempore.

And Mrs. O'Neill isn't known as a giant killer. While she did win a place in the lower house four times running, members of that chamber have two practical advantages that do not occur in connection with contests for senate seats. First, each of the friends of a candidate for the house may cast as many as three votes for him. A supporter of a senatorial aspirant can give hi monly one vote. Second: the senatorial district committee of each party may limit its nominees for the house to two, or even one. If the Democrats nominate only one in the Forty-first district and the Republicans only two, the primary settled the election except for the rare danger of an independent candidacy.

"Plumping" a Doubtful Factor.

In her four successes Mrs. O'Neill admittedly was the beneficiary of extensive cumulative voting or "plumping," the women of her district particularly giving her their three votes for the lower house. Since this three-vote power may be used to give one vote to each of three candidates, or one and one-half votes for each of two candidates, or three votes for one candidate, it is impossible to compute with mathematic accuracy the actual number of voters who marked for her in any of her four primaries or elections, and therefore to some extent might be expected to go along with her against Senator Barr. But some wiseacres contend that the returns show that Barr consistently has had more of the district's voters supporting him than she has had behind her.

Barr's Influence a Factor.

The next question that the district experts are mulling over in the cool of the autumn evenings is whether any great majority of those who supported Mrs. O'Neill for the lower house will carry on when it means an immense, direct loss to the district if Barr is retired and replaced by a senator who cannot be expected to exert anything like his influence at the state house. This, it is argued, would be especially true if his successor were to be a woman.

For many years Barr has been able to get for the counties of his district more than their normal share of state administration favor.

To accomplish these results for his district, his critics charge he played in with the administration during the eight years of Len Small in the state house. While Small may have held off some moves for which he could not win Barr's advance approval, it is said that the Joliet senator never attempted to array his strength in the senate against any Small legislative project.

This cooperation and sympathy with the man defeated by Emmerson last year, including his support of Small in the primary, probably will constitute a considerable part of Mrs. O'Neill's campaign material; but the whispered answer of the Barr supporters will be that he did it to get things for the district and that he got them.

Possible Third Entrant.

The one possibility of a third entrant in this race is said to be the fact that State's Attorney Hjalmar Rehn of Will county is none too friendly toward Barr and is said to have been urged to back a candidate for the senate against him.

But there is one complication in the O'Neill-Barr contest that is considered already a factor. Last year at the Republican national convention at Kansas City Mrs. O'Neill was the Deneen choice for national committeewoman to succeed Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, then the nominee for the post of congressman-at-large to which she was elected in November. Mrs. McCormick was a large factor in breaking a caucus deadlock which resulted in the election of Mrs. Bertha Baur to the committeeship with Deneen's consent.

Fast February, in the early days of this year's session of the legislature, Mrs. O'Neill issued a press statement attacking Speaker Shanahan because he refused her the chairmanship of the committee on education, which she had requested. She charged that his decision was dictated by Mrs. McCormick and Gov. Emmerson, and she attacked Mrs. McCormick in strong terms.

LIONESS

[Photo by Thomas.]

Chiefly because of the work she has done to bring the atmosphere of home into an institution where crippled youngsters are working their way toward health, or at least toward a happier adjustment in a world of more fortunate brothers and sisters, Mrs. Frank Johnson of Glen Ellyn has been made an honorary member of the Lions' clubs of the state. Mrs. Johnson is the only Illinois woman who can claim this distinction. The institution where her efforts have been expended to such remarkable advantage for the last fifteen years is the County Home for Convalescent Children at Prince Crossing, one and a half miles north of West Chicago. On Oct. 10 the home will entertain the Du Page county Lions at an annual dinner and musical.

STRONG FORCES SEEKING DEFEAT OF FRANK REID

Drys Discontent with His Record in Congress.

but an even bigger one, politicians say, is the fact that as a member of the legislature he voted against Illinois' approval of the eighteenth amendment.

McCarthy an Emmerson Ally.

Representative McCarthy was one of the speakers—and proved himself an effective stumper—who traveled the state with the state ticket last fall and stands unusually well with the Emmerson forces. As far back as 1920 he showed remarkable strength as congressional timber when he ran against a veteran, Ira C. Copley, and lost out by only 1,761 votes.

If Congressman Reid and Mr. Pearsall, two drys, both go into the fight, district leaders say McCarthy's legislative record, particularly his vote on the eighteenth amendment, coupled with his known attitude toward the De King slaying in Aurora, would give him a big chance for success. But his only statement is that he is "watching developments."

District observers attach maximum importance this time to the wet and dry issue, largely because the Anti-Saloon league favor is about the only block of votes that has stuck by Congressman Reid.

But much of the campaign material against the incumbent, it is said, will be the same as that used two years ago when in the primary, with a total Republican vote of 87,928 he barely won a majority, his margain over half of the total vote cast being only 1,381.

Lucrative Thompson Connection.

The principal material against the congressman then was his close association wth Mayor Thompson of Chicago and his consequent profit as one of the city hall's $100 a day experts in legal matters. It is the same material with the added point that Mr. Reid's compensation has been mounting steadily until his pay on special vouchers for the current year probably will exceed $15,000—more for "part time" work than is received by any of the city department heads or even by Gov. Emmerson for full time.

This increase in pay is due to the fact, say the politicians, that Congressman Reid's value to the Thompson scheme of things became greater when the Chicago mayor launched into his publicity campaign on flood relief and control. The Aurora representative is chairman of the house committee on flood prevention and joined hands heartily with Mr. Thompson, submitting to his domination, it is said in Washington, in matters before his committee.

Congressman Reid, being attached to the city law department pay roll in 1917 for an amount undisclosed be, cause the records are not available, has been paid substantial sums almost every year that Thompson has been in office. The total of his receipts found on the records now is $35,973 and of that amount $11,450 was charged for his services during the first eight months of 1929. His present duties are said to be in connection with the 10 cent elevated fare case, which has been continued from time to time.

$24,050 in Two and One-Half Years.

His closest previous approach to that figure was $6,550 for the nine months of 1927 remaining when Mayor Thompson began his present term. The payments to him in 1928 are shown as $6,050. Therefore his total for the last two years and a half of this administration is $24,050. The figure of $11,450 for this year shows that he claimed pay for 114 days' work plus half a day somewhere.

For some time Congressman Reid was reported to be in doubt whether he would seek another term. Recently this has been replaced by reports that he is considering running for the United States senatorship with the support of Mayor Thompson, entering the race now limited to Senator Deneen and Ruth Hanna McCormick.

But politicians consider this merely "war talk," intended as a belligerent notice to the friends of Senator Deneen and Mrs. McCormick that if they don't leave him in peaceful possession of the congressional field in his district he will make trouble for them.

BOYS AND PETS WIN BIGGEST PHOTO PRIZES

With "Pals," showing Donald Olsen and his dog, Lady, E. Olsen, 531 Belleforte avenue, Oak Park, this week won the first prize of $5 in The Tribune's contest for amateur photographers of the west side. The second prize of $3 was awarded to J. F. Hickey, 5104 West Monroe street, for "Contemplation," showing Tommy McDonald and Tabby. Tommy's home is in Peosta, Ia., and he was in Chicago on a visit recently. "Posing" won the third prize of $2 for Mrs. E. Marchand, 1217 South 16th avenue, Maywood. The picture shows, left to right: Virginia Bexfield, Lloyd Slottag, and Junior Slottag. An extra prize of $2 was awarded to John P. Staniec, 1110 North California avenue, for a picture of his sister, Julia, busy at a game of solitaire.

Human interest pictures, pictures that tell a story, and action pictures are the new subjects for camera fans to try their trigger finger at and win a prize in the photo contest of the Metropolitan section.

Children and grownups at play and at work, caught unawares by the amateur fan or posed in a scene that tells its own story—pictures taken around the home.

The Tribune will pay $5 for the best picture taken by an amateur. It will pay $3 for the second best and $2 for the third. All pictures must be taken in the Chicago area.

Address entries to Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section of The Tribune. The name and address of the photographer should be printed plainly on the back of the print, as well as the names of all persons in the picture.

The contest is open only to amateurs and the editor will be the final judge. Theme, treatment, and clearness of the print will be taken into consideration. No pictures will be returned.

Harrison High School Teachers Are Moved

Four teachers of Harrison Technical High school were recently transferred to other schools. Miss Marguerite Plummer, who was at the Harrison branch, has been assigned to Fenger High; Harold Billings has gone to Austin High; Mrs. Mary L. MacK. Comstock has been sent from the main building to the branch, and Mrs. Joyce Neal, formerly at the branch, is now at Crane.

York High Gives Reception.

Senior, junior and sophomore classes of York Community High school, Elmhurst, gave an informal reception to the freshmen, parents and faculty Thursday evening. The gathering took place in the auditorium.

$750,000 PAVING WORK HEARING DUE ON FRIDAY

Property Owners Given a Chance to Object.

Paving jobs in west side wards, estimated to cost property owners more than $750,000, will be taken up by the board of local improvements at a large public hearing in the city hall next Friday morning. Scores of property owners are expected to attend the session, which will be the third this fall. North and south side projects which the board also desires to have approved brings the total proposed expenditure for improvements to well over $1,500,000.

The largest west side project under consideration will be the proposed paving and widening of Ashland avenue between Roosevelt road and 22d street, part of the long delayed widening of that street across the entire city. Improvement of this section will cost $143,000, to be borne partly by property owners under a special assessment and partly by the city as a public benefit, and will be completed when the city finds funds to pay its share.

Approved in June.

The project was approved at a former hearing, in June, but is back for consideration on petition of property owners who want to change the specifications from asphalt to concrete. It will probably be approved after the board consents to the change.

Property owners on Milwaukee avenue between Halsted and Division streets will be asked to approve the proposed paving of that street at a cost of $201,000.

Paving jobs on the following streets will also be taken up: A system, at a cost of $75,500, including Byron street between Narragansett and Melvina avenues, Melvina avenue between Byron street and Berenice avenue, and Mobile avenue between Byron and Addison streets.

Other Improvements.

A system including Nagle avenue between Raven street and Milwaukee avenue and Haft and Hermione streets between Nagle and Milwaukee avenues, at a cost of $59,000; Berwyn avenue between Leclaire and Laramie avenues and Leamington avenue between Berwyn and Elston avenues, at a cost of $25,000.

Albion avenue between Natoma and Newcastle avenues, costing $17,800; Leonard avenue between Central and Miltimore avenues, costing $16,000; Slocum street between Menard and Marmora avenues, costing $15,500; Leclaire avenue between Foster and Berwyn avenues, costing $13,000.

GLENBARD HIGH SHOWS INCREASE IN ENROLLMENT

The autumn schedule at Glenbard Township High school, Glen Ellyn, is now in full swing with an enrollment of 720 students, according to an announcement made at the school last week. This number represents an increase of 121 students over the enrollment last June.

Spanish is the only new course being offered this year. Sewing has become very popular among the students, last year's registration in this course being nearly tripled.

Rehearsals are progressing for members of the orchestra of 30 pieces and the bands of 40 in preparation for the year's musical program. The glee clubs of the school are also making ready for the year's schedule.

The faculty of the school numbers 28, besides the principal, F. L. Biester.

Du Page Valley Teachers Draw Up Constitution

A final draft of the constitution of the Du Page Valley Teachers' association was completed at a meeting of the executive and constitutional committees at York Community High school of Elmhurst Thursday afternoon. This will be presented for ratification at the annual meeting, to be held at Wheaton Oct. 25.

MARSHALL HIGH STUDENT GROUPS PICK OFFICERS

Theodore Cohen President of Honor Club.

Several student organizations at Marshall High school have recently chosen officers for the current year.

Theodore Cohen was elected president of the Honor club of Marshall High school at a meeting held in the social hall of the school. He will be assisted this year by the following officers: Vice president, Morry Worshill; secretary, Miss Betty Rosenthal, and treasurer, Bernard Sang. A welcome was extended the new members at the meeting.

An election was also held by the Spanish club at its first meeting. Felix Dali was named president; Arnold Wolensky, vice president; Miss Lillian Factor, secretary, and Meyer Borowsky, sergeant at arms.

Orchestra Club Officers.

The Orchestra club of the school elected officers at the initial assembly, with the following results: President, Harold Miller; vice president, Zadock Goldenstein; secretary, Irving Sokolow, and treasurer, Vincent Sage.

Another musical organization, the Treble Clef club, has announced its staff of officers for this year. The president is Miss Geraldine Ogus, and she will be assisted by the following: Vice president, Miss Edna Fox; secretary, Miss Frieda Freedman; treasurer, Miss Eunice Bistroff; librarian, Miss Bertha Korogodsky, and publicity manager, Miss Edith Halperin.

Chemists of the school have their own organization, the Chemistry club. The officers recently chosen for the current year are: President, Harry Kupersmith; vice president, Maurice Cowan; secretary, Miss Pearl Morson; treasurer, Tobie Simon, and sergeant at arms, Israel Feurseig.

Big Brothers Elect.

Election of officers took place at the first meeting of the Big Brothers club of the school. The personnel is made up entirely of senior boys who assist younger students in difficulties which may arise. The sponsor is Dean Edwin C. Hansen. Officers chosen at the meeting are: President, Leo Brettschneider; vice president, Bernard Novak; treasurer, Charles Tucker; and sergeant-at-arms, Hyman Feigenberg.

One of the chief purposes of the club is to effect a better relationship between pupils and teachers.

Heads De Paul Ball

MISS SOPHIE THOMAS.

Miss Sohpie Thomas, 4319 West 21st place, is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for a dance sponsored by the members of the staff of The DePaulia, weekly newspaper of DePaul university, Friday evening, Oct. 18, in the Oriental room of the Knickerbocker hotel. More than 400 persons are expected to attend the affair.

FIREWORKS BOOM AS PORTAGE PARK OPENS FESTIVAL

Parade Starts Fall Shopping Event.

With a display of fireworks and a parade of floats and automobiles, the two week fall festival of Portage Park was ushered in last week by the business men of the northwest community.

Centering at the "six corners" at Milwaukee and Cicero avenues and Irving Park boulevard, the festival embraces a double purpose; to open the fall shopping season and to celebrate the establishment of two new commercial enterprises in the district.

Two New Stores Opening.

The features of the celebration will be the opening of the new five story store and office building of the Klee Brothers company, clothiers, at Milwaukee and Cicero avenues, and the store and apartment block bounded by Milwaukee, Cuyler and Belle Plaine avenues, being completed by Michael Ficht.

The committee in charge, headed by V. E. Jones, has announced that the entertainment and features arranged indicate that the festival will be the finest celebration ever staged in the community. Numerous contests and special events are being held by the merchants, who formed an organization for the express purpose of advertising the shopping center by means of the festival. The coöperation of all residents of the area has also been enlisted in making the event more than a community affair.

Members of Committees.

The committees in charge are as follows:

Entertainment: Mr. Dedic.

Advisory: Ralph Davis, chairman; Peter Cleven, Oscar Carlson, Mr. Carlson, and Mr. Slade.

Finance: Fred Mayer, chairman; Al Slade, Art Thompson, John J. Dedic, and Mr. Jones.

Publicity: Milton Klee, chairman; J. J. Derx, R. B. Hart, Frank W. Barber, and B. J. Green.

Mr. Slade is secretary of the general committee and Mr. Mayer is treasurer. Elaborate street and store front decorations have been erected to add to the festival spirit and attract visitors to the community.

WIELDS GAVEL

MISS DORIS BROCKMEYER.

Class officers have been elected by the seniors, the juniors and the sophomores of Nazareth academy, La Grange. The seniors have elected Miss Doris Brockmeyer president, Miss Mary Jane Sullivan, secretary, and Miss Mary Fraher, treasurer. The officers chosen by the junior class are: President, Miss Adeline Ostrowski; secretary, Miss Evelyn Helms; and treasurer, Miss Mary Joy Pilkington. The sophomore officers for the year are: President, Miss Harriet Eckmann; secretary, Miss Anna Marie Schoen; and treasurer, Miss Helen Dillon.

A revelation in tone quality and furniture craftsmanship

RADIO at first was just an electrical novelty. Popular demand forced its development as a musical instrument. To-day, it must be in addition, a beautiful piece of furniture—a fitting companion to the artistic furnishings which distinguish the better American homes.

A truly up-to-the-minute receiver, then, is the Peck & Hills Radio, embodying all the qualities demanded by discriminating radio buyers. Tone is assured by the master design of the chassis, the vital part of radio. The quiet elegance and distinction of the console make it a thing of beauty.

To achieve tone brilliance, the Peck & Hills Radio engineers have spared no efforts. They have eliminated nothing essential. The volume is full and clear—without distortion. The tuning is sensitive to the highest degree—a slight turn of the dial moves completely off one station and to another. For the DX fan it will bring in distant signals clearly and a turn of the volume control brings them to program strength. Extra power is well under control in the push-pull amplification using two type 245 tubes. Matched dynamic speaker completes the ensemble mechanically—and the beautiful walnut cabinets in an array of masterful designs, make the whole perfect.

QUIN RYAN SET TO BROADCAST WORLD SERIES

New Booths Are Ready at Wrigley Field.

Quin Ryan will begin the broadcast of the first Chicago world's series since the advent of radio on Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. Microphones have been installed in the new glass broadcasting booth at Wrigley field, which will be used for the first time as the series opens. The booth is situated in the most advantageous position possible and will be in constant telephone connection with the score board.

Quin Ryan has been broadcasting baseball games constantly since the city series of 1924. He and Graham McNamee were selected as the radio reporters on the national chain broadcasts to announce the Pittsburgh-Washington world's series in 1925 by Baseball Commissioner Judge K. M. Landis. Quin Ryan, and consequently W-G-N, have broadcast more baseball games than any other announcer and station on the air.

Broadcast Every Day.

For the last three seasons there has been a baseball broadcast from W-G-N every day during the season. During the last season there have been the daily play-by-play broadcasts made from the Chicago parks and, in addition, minute telegraphic reports broadcast as they were dispatched from the out of town parks.

After the first two games the scene of action will be removed to Philadelphia. The broadcast from there will be made in coöperation with the National Broadcasting company.

Football Series Near.

On Saturday, Oct. 12, W-G-N will begin its greatest series of football broadcasts. The officials at the University of Wisconsin have agreed to postpone the season opening kickoff until the fourth game of the world's series is completed. The Wisconsin-Northwestern game will be reported yard by yard by Quin Ryan.

ARCTURUS BLUE A.C. LONG LIFE TUBES

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

SWEET are the uses of the radio station. Lecturing last week in Wisconsin we heard the story of a broadcasting station in a nearby town that rented fifteen minutes per day to a radio comedian. The comic fellow sang his songs and delivered his monologue, and then announced that his program was broadcast "through the courtesy" of a certain clothing manufacturer.

He said he would be glad to meet his many friends of the radio audience and would welcome them in the studio. When the listeners flocked to the studio, they found the walls draped with all kinds of men's suits and before they got out many of them had been sold a new suit—with two pairs of pants.

ANNOUNCER Pat Barnes tells the story of the fellow who just bought his first radio set and boasted that it was so good that he could get three stations at once.

MUSICIANS are eager for jobs in the radio studios. For one thing, they do not have to dress for the performances. No more of the stiff postures in the formal attire of the symphony concert or the theater orchestra pit. No more glare of the spotlight, and no more monotony of same music night after night in the musical shows.

Many radio orchestras have pictures taken in the garb they would have the audience believe they work in. We have seen motley groups of boys posing as forest rangers, railroad conductors, gypsies and whatnot, but in reality the majority are glad to doff their coats, vests and collars and feel at ease. The only hardship imposed upon them is the rule of silence, and instructions for shortening or expanding a program are flashed to them on a blackboard.

Down east in some studios the announcers are required to wear dinner jackets!

DO YOU RADIO listeners remember 'way back when——

The late Charlie Erbstein used to chuckle—and sing "Christopher Columbo" and "The Spanish Bull Fight"—and plead for cigarets for the soldiers?

The forerunner of radio at Comiskey park was the installation of the horns all about the grandstands, through which the batteries and pinch hitters used to be announced?

Two of the finest harmony teams on the air [both since dissolved] were Tommy Malie and Jack Little, and George Little and Larry Shay? And remember both teams wrote a lot of good songs, such as the former's "Jealous" and the latter's "Too Tired"?

George Hay, "the Solemn Old Judge," came up from Memphis to do such fine and homey announcing for the new station WLS?

Everybody had a crystal set—and a "cat's whisker"—and the aerial running around the picture molding on the wall?

Monday night was designated as "silent night," when all of the Chicago stations would shut down at 7 o'clock, in order that listeners might tune distant broadcasters more clearly?

The whole town listened to the seemingly endless Democratic convention in New York, with the series of roll calls invariably starting with "Twenty-four for Underwood"?

The Loos brothers, Billy and Ernie, were heavy radio favorites in Chicago?

Cigar stores and other shops gave away "applause cards" for the listeners' use in writing comments to radio stations?

Entire theatrical productions used to be broadcast from the stage in Chicago theaters. "Blossom Time" and "White Cargo" were broadcast by the old KYW, and "The Student Prince" and DeWolf Hopper's production of "The Mikado" by W-G-N. Then the Actors' Equity started an agitation and demanded that every player in the company be paid for a whole extra performance—one-eighth of a week's salary—if any part of a show were put on the air; so the broadcaster desisted from putting microphones in theaters, even if the managers desired it for publicity's sake?

Station W-G-N broadcast its Amateur Nights, and Spelling Bees, and Old Fashioned Favorite Song contest?

The chain announcers in New York used to enumerate all of the stations through which the program was being broadcast, and conclude the show by giving their own initials?

The papers used to publish weird diagrams and "hookups" for the early listeners who made their own sets?

Most radio singers were chanting the million verses of "How do you do, Everybody, how do you do"?

The Duncan Sisters were wont to broadcast almost every night, during their long runs of "Topsy and Eva," featuring the songs, "Rememberin'," and "I Never Had a Mammy"?

The long since dispersed staff of KYW consisted of "Sen" Kaney, Sally Menkes, Herbie Mintz, Art Linick, Bobby Brown, Lee Sims, Steve Trumbull, Frank Clark, Grace Wilson and the "Harmony Girls," Edith Carpenter and Grace Ingram?

A famous oatmeal company used to sell five dollar sets made out of their cardboard oatmeal cartons?

The Edgewater Beach station was WJAZ and the Drake hotel station was WDAP?

This announcer was "Uncle Walt" and the children's period was "Skeezix Time"?

It was seriously proposed to lay a government tax on all radio receiving sets and accessories, the funds to be distributed to the radio stations for their maintenance?

Radio stations, when starting in business, tried to get call letters which were abbreviations of the owner's name—as in the case of W-G-N, "World's Greatest Newspaper," and WEBH, "W-Edgewater Beach Hotel," and KTHS, "Kum to Hot Springs," and others?

The members of the family used headphones and sat around the receiver as though it were an ouija board?

[With apologies to Harvey Woodruff, the original "Way Back Wheneer"].

DILL ACCUSES RADIO ARBITERS OF FAVORITISM

Says Chain Organizations Control Programs.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—The federal radio commission was brought to task on the senate floor recently by Senator C. C. Dill [Dem.] of Washington, who is one of the most vigorous promoters of radio legislation in congress, for its apparent favoritism for chain broadcasting systems as against the independent stations. Interrupting a debate on tariff, the western senator warned the radio commission that unless it changed its policy the public will demand that the United States government take over and control all broadcasting stations.

Senator Dill roundly criticized the commission for its continual postponement of putting into effect general order No. 43, which would prohibit the broadcasting of the same program from stations not more than 300 miles apart. This order, which was originally promulgated on Sept. 8, 1928, has been delayed several times because it would practically prohibit chain broadcasting in many localities except for an hour each night. The last postponement was made on Oct. 1, when its effective date was moved up until Dec. 31.

Control in Hands of Few.

"The radio commission has been granting wave lengths, power, and time in a manner that is tending to put the control of an effective radio service in the hands of a few great organizations," Senator Dill said. "The forty cleared channels established in this country today are fast driving out the independent use of radio in an effective manner—forty cleared channels, with thirty-eight of the forty cleared channel stations on chains. These channels were cleared for the purpose of giving the people radio service all over the country on those channels—and they have placed those channels in the very best places on the dial, in spite of the fact that they heterodyne and cause harmonics beyond the limits of their own channels.

"The commission, under the law, has specific power over these chain stations. Nearly a year ago they issued an order which, if they had carried it out, would go far to remedy this situation, but every time the date for the enforcement of the order arrives they postpone it, and they have postponed it again and again."

Hits Proposed Mergers.

"Efforts to weaken the radio law in its monopoly features are being made all over this country today in the form of propaganda," he continued. "They want to repeal sections 13 and 17 of the radio law, so that the International Telephone and Telegraph company can buy the Radio corporation's interoceanic stations, and they want to pay $40,000,000 worth of stock for them.

"Mr. Behn said they were worth $25,000,000 when he was on the stand before our committee last June. Those stocks are selling today for more than $100,000,000; and, if it is permitted, there will be $75,000,000 of water to begin with upon which cable and telephone rates must be made high enough to pay dividends."

Angora Deserts Pastor for W-G-N Organ Music

A clergyman in Somonauk, Ill., is fond of cats. His large Angora, Rags, sits purring and blinking contentedly at his feet as the pastor prepares the message for his flock. However, he is thinking seriously of beginning a suit for alienation of affections. As soon as Larry Larsen, organist at W-G-N, Chicago, begins to play Rags is roused. Listening, he walks leisurely to the loud speaker and curls up, again contentedly, before it.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB PROGRAM ON AIR TONIGHT

The first broadcast of the Chicago Sunday Evening club's twenty-third season goes on the air tonight with Bishop Charles P. Anderson, for thirty years bishop of the Episcopal church in the Chicago diocese, giving the principal address. R. Floyd Clinch, a trustee of the club, and Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, moderator of the Presbyterian Church of America, will take part while President Clifford W. Barnes will preside. WMAQ will carry the program.

The club already has received requests from listeners in over twenty states and Canada, asking that information regarding these weekly services be sent to them.

Bishop Anderson, who is now vice chairman of the House of Bishops, and therefore the second ranking churchman in the Episcopal denomination of America, has chosen for his subject "Chicago Day," and the general theme of the meeting will be civic in character.

Edgar Nelson, director of music, states that the choir of 125 contains more solo material than in any previous season. Music students from all parts of the country are enrolled in this choir. Tonight they will sing "Hail Bright Abode," by Wagner, "Bless Our Land," by Cherubini, "Ho Every One That Thirsteth," by Martin. A new contralto soloist, Miss Eva Horadesky, will sing "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain," by Harker. Mark Love and Mabel Sharp Herdien will have solo parts.

ACOUSTICS EXPERTS SOUGHT.

A broad knowledge of electricity and acoustics is necessary for a new side line that has sprung up in the many sided radio business. That is the installation and maintenance of large sound amplifiers and public address systems in hotels, auditoriums, theaters and schools. Experts in this sort of work are in considerable demand, according to engineers.

WHITE HOUSE STUDIO ACOUSTICS PERFECT, ENGINEERS DECLARE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It was discovered when President Hoover broadcast for the first time from the recently restored presidential studio in the east wing of the White House that the acoustics here were what is termed in the broadcasting world as "brilliant."

President Hoover never spoke with a better acoustical background than he did that night, according to radio engineers.

Nor was the natural tone of voice sacrificed, as is often the case when a voice comes through too clearly.

CHICAGO ANNUAL RADIO SHOW TO COME OCT. 21-27

Chicago's Radio show will open for its eighth annual session on Monday, Oct. 21, and continue through Sunday, Oct. 27.

So complete is this year's exhibition that the facilities of the Coliseum, where the show will be held, will be severely taxed.

In a demonstration of television citizens of the central west will be accorded the first view of the most advanced status of radio's smaller sister.

There will be a "Radio Queen," the winner of an essay contest on the subject, "What My Radio Means to Me." Thousands of letters have been received by the management of the show. The woman whose essay is judged the best exposition on the utility of her radio set will be brought to Chicago as the guest of the radio show.

People who take excellence for granted naturally turn to the new all-electric screen grid

Eveready Radio

THE PRECISION INSTRUMENT

THERE ARE many fortunate people in this world to whom good taste is second nature. They live pleasantly, yet not ostentatiously. They dress well, yet without extremes of style. Every possession of theirs bespeaks an admirable and tempered attitude toward living.

And quite naturally these are the people who are buying the new Eveready Radio. For there, too, just as in their houses, their clothes, yes, even their friends, they take excellence for granted . . . a radio which brings the smartest dance-orchestra into their living-room . . . which takes them to the sidelines of the big games . . . which places them ten feet from the speaker's table . . . this is the sort of reception they expect, and get—from this remarkable radio receiver.

But such people—those who are buying the new Eveready Radio—look for something more in their material possessions. They want permanence. This radio receiver is built to last. It is precision-built. Each part is put together with as much care as if an aviator's life depended on the winding of a coil. The assumption is that Eveready Radio users want a fine instrument, as fine in its way as all their other material possessions.

Mystifying technical names, new accoutrements, devices and mechanisms bore the buyers of this radio. They know they have the best. They know that improvements will be added from time to time as the large scientific organization which makes this receiver tests and uncovers their merits. But they leave the details to the experts. That is their attitude towards radio . . . houses . . . motor-cars . . . life in general.

And so, if you are interested in effects and take the causes for granted, if you order your life according to this principle and to the point, you will want the new Eveready Radio. See it. Hear it. Note how beautiful the cabinetwork is. Ask for the explanation, if you like, of its "weather-proof" principle; but remember that the effect is this—even on muggy nights the reception is remarkably clear.

★ Features of the New Eveready

THE NEW EVEREADY contains eight tubes, including rectifier. Uses three of the new screen grid tubes. Last audio stage is push-pull, using two 245-type tubes. Power-detection and resistance-coupling preserve original tonal purity and fidelity.

Special built-in electro-dynamic speaker of Eveready design.

Insulation is used only for insulating—not to bear the weight of parts. Original fine adjustments, made in laboratory are not affected by weather-changes. Unyielding metal used to preserve accurate alignment of parts.

BUSINESS MEN OF ASHLAND AV. ASK BOND APPROVAL

Point Out Losses for Last Ten Years.

Property development and renting on Ashland avenue, between Division street and Diversey parkway, have been practically at a standstill since negotiations for widening the street were launched ten years ago. Owners have feared to build pending the completion of the improvement and have been unable to obtain tenants on long term leases. Many buildings were vacated upon order of the city from three to five years ago when officials believed the improvement at hand, and have been vacant ever since.

These facts were pointed out by H. A. Brown, president of the Squire-Dingee company, Ashland avenue and Cortland street, in urging the passage of the $19,000,000 bond issue which will be on the ballot Nov. 5. The entire sum, if the issue is approved by the voters, will be used to pay property owners' judgments against the city, awarded them for condemnation of property which the city took for the widening, and for damages incurred by the latter's failure to complete the improvement.

Awaiting Action 10 Years.

"We have a judgment against the city for part of our property which must be taken to widen the street," he said, "and for the corner of our plant which must be cut off. We have been awaiting action on the improvement for ten years and have been unable to build or improve our factory until Ashland avenue is widened.

"We are inconvenienced further by the fact that the subway under the Chicago and North Western railroad along our property was begun years ago and our switch track was destroyed. A smaller track has been constructed, but we have suffered because our original track was removed many years before the street is actually widened. We must do without a track of the proper length until the improvement has been completed.

Unable to Do Anything.

"The Thomas J. Kane Coal company across the street has suffered along this line perhaps more than we have, and their case is typical of many. Mr. Kane has desirer to improve his coal yard for many years, but is unable to do a thing until the street is completed.

"As far as renting is concerned," Mr. Brown continued, "property which we own adjacent to our plant was vacated at the request of city authorities in 1926 on the ground that the land would be needed immediately for the widening project. Three years have passed, the building is unoccupied, and the improvement is still in the future.

Many Like Cases.

"Many similar cases will be found both in stores and manufacturing buildings all along the street," he concluded. "We feel that if the bond issue is passed and our ten year old judgments are paid, the way will be clear finally for completion of the project, and business will again be able to move along. It is certain, however, that until these judgments, which the long suffering property owners are certainly entitled to, are paid, Ashland avenue will never be finished."

J. J. Krause, vice president of the Home Bank and Trust company, 1200 North Ashland avenue, said yesterday that the bank as well and many other business houses have suffered because the street has not been widened.

A new bank building was recently completed on a building line 27 feet from the existing curb while the building next to the new structure on the north is only about 10 feet from the curb. The bank will thus be hidden from view of passersby until the street is widened and the old building which now protrudes is set back to the new building line.

Unable to Rent.

The bank, which is actually only a few feet south of Milwaukee avenue, one of the principal arteries on the northwest side, is located on property which is valuable because of its strategic position at the triple corner of Ashland avenue, Division street and Milwaukee avenue. It will not have the benefit of its full value, however, until Ashland avenue is widened, and the bank is visible from Milwaukee avenue, according to Mr. Krause.

Property owners on the entire street who were forced to build on a setback building line while abutting structures extended to the sidewalk are unable to rent and obtain a return on their investments until all buildings are back to the new line.

Business men who are urging the passage of the bond issue point out that its use, according to the wording of the proposition, is confined to paying judgments and the money cannot be used for any other purpose by the city administration.

What is Tri-toned Radio?

Every musical instrument has three distinct characteristics: 1. Pitch, by which we distinguish the note as being high or low; 2. Intensity, or loudness; and, 3. Tone, or character by which we distinguish the sound of one musical instrument from another. In Grebe Radio you have re-production that gives you perfect blending of all three characteristics without unnatural over-emphasis of any part of the scale.

What Price Fashion . . . ?

Even in this year of 1929 there are still some people who think that fashion is a matter of price—and that to be smartly dressed is to be expensively dressed.

Then, on the other hand, there is the group of moderns that know that correct dressing is largely a matter of good taste and that a $5 hat is often much more becoming than one that costs three times $5.

Then, on the other hand, there is the make up the majority of the customers of Madigan Brothers. They are people of taste and breeding, people of social background that can afford to be careful in their spending. Such people appreciate the fact—you can be fashionwise and thrifty at Madigans.

FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO THEY BATTLED CHICAGO FIRE

Firefighters of the period of the Chicago fire of 1871, which occurred fifty-eight years ago this week, are shown in these pictures. Old engine company No. 8, located then as now in Archer avenue near State street, is shown above at the left. The center picture above is of engine company No. 16, then and now located at 31st and Dearborn streets. The third man from the left of those seated is Frank Butterfield, and the other members of the company are unidentified. The members of engine company No. 9, then at 26th street and Cottage Grove avenue, are shown above at the right. They have been identified by one of their own number, George A. Leady, who now lives at 5530 South Bishop street. Seated, left to right: Mr. Leady, engineer; Joseph Herger, engineer; James Walsh, captain; Charles Curtis, lieutenant; Matt Mershon, driver. Standing: James Riley, driver; J. Fogelstrom, pipeman; Chris Goodwin, pipeman; James Cudahy, pipeman. Below, at the left, is Mr. Leady as he appears today (Frank Fournier photo). The other picture is of engine company No. 21, then at 14 Taylor street and now at 3444 Rhodes avenue.

MRS. O'LEARY'S BOSSY RUINED HIS NIGHT OFF

Geo. Leady Recalls Great Fire.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

The great Chicago fire, the 58th anniversary of which will take place on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, spoiled George Leady's night off.

"It was about eleven o'clock that Sunday night," says Mr. Leady, "when a policeman called at my house on South Park avenue and 27th street and said the whole city was on fire. My wife, whom I had married just the year before, didn't see me again for three days."

Mr. Leady, who lives at 5530 South Bishop street, is one of the nine surviving veteran firemen who fought in the historic blaze of 1871 that licked up 18,000 buildings, cost nearly 300 lives, and left 100,000 persons homeless. He and his wife, who is still living, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary nine years ago.

A Chicagoan 84 Years.

Mr. Leady, born in Chicago 84 years ago, in a house at Harrison and State streets, is the son of a Chicago fireman. George Leady joined the department in 1867 and remained in the service until 1907. During those forty years he fought many a blaze, including the World's Fair fires, but his memories are keenest concerning what was perhaps the most devastating conflagration in history.

"Well," recalls Mr. Leady, "when the policeman told me we were in for something out of the ordinary in the way of fires, I took a car as far as Taylor street and went into the No. 21 house and asked where my Engine company, No. 9 was. I was told it was over on the west side. There was no fire on the south side then. I found my company working on the mill at Canal street. The flames had jumped over from the burning barns and houses to the southwest and it was awful hot. Burning shingles and bits of lumber were flying through the air.

Another Version.

"The cause of the fire? You mean about Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicking over the lantern because she was being milked a second time to provide milk for punch? Well, there've been so many versions, but the fellows who were around while we were fighting the fire that night said the thing had started because of someone's cigar or pipe ashes—I don't believe there were any cigarets then—catching fire to the hay in the barn on De Koven street.

"The wind was so strong, the mill didn't last long. Then for a time we worked on a warehouse on Polk street. Later, we fought the flames in a school house on Harrison street. Then we were ordered to a church at Wabash and Congress.

"Between Michigan and Wabash avenues there was a brick house, and we concentrated on the frame house next to it. By doing so we saved the brick house. There were two girls living in that brick house that my wife and I knew—Emma and Christine Pohle. They're living now in Pittsburgh."

"No," corrected Mrs. Leady, "in Fort Wayne."

"We were ordered to the Goodrich dock and worked there until 11 o'clock next morning," continued Mr. Leady. "No. 9 and No. 13 were the last two companies to leave. The men on No. 13 were badly overcome. I helped them hitch up their horses. The horses acted fine, but the sparks striking their backs made them nervous and hard to hitch.

"We didn't have much to stop the

CHEER PLAN FOR 200 FOOT DRIVE ACROSS S. SIDE

Hyde Park Club Hears 55th St. Proposal.

A 200 foot superhighway on 55th street, from the lake to the western city limits, is a dream that Robert Seth Lindstrom, 5345 Kimbark avenue, a member of the Hyde Park Kiwanis club, has kept to himself, half hoping that some day it might come true.

At a meeting of the organization last week, however, he gave voice to that dream and was surprised to learn that the Hyde Park business men gathered there not only believed as he did but greeted the proposal with enthusiasm.

In order to construct the highway, Mr. Lindstrom said, it would be necessary to widen 55th street from Cottage Grove avenue to Lake Park avenue to 200 feet; widen the stretch of boulevard running through Washington park to 200 feet; eliminate the parkway running down the center of Garfield boulevard from South Park way to Western avenue, and widen and pave 55th street from Western avenue to the city limits.

Undaunted by Obstacles.

With these considerable obstacles pointed out, the enthusiasm of the listeners did not abate, and so Mr. Lindstrom continued to outline his dream.

"First," he told them, "we would try to obtain the construction of the highway by making the improvements which I have just pointed out. When that is done we could attempt to obtain an elevated highway. The double decked roadway would then be the longest, the widest, and the finest in the country."

The lower level, according to Mr. Lindstrom, would be used for street car, bus, and heavy traffic, while the upper level would be used for automobiles. His plans include the extension of the street car line from Cottage Grove avenue west through Washington park and west on Garfield boulevard to the city limits.

Extension of the street car line is necessary, he asserted, because there is now no through east and west car line between 47th street and 63d street.

Outlet for Outer Drive.

The contemplated highway, Mr. Lindstrom pointed out, would serve as an outlet for traffic at the south end of the outer drive, which is now being completed. If the highway were constructed, southwest motorists with business in the loop would be able to travel over the outer drive to where it meets with the highway and then west on the highway to the section in which he lives without having to stop once for traffic lights.

C. W. Hoff, president of the University State bank, 55th street and Ridgeland court, declared that a superhighway would be of inestimable value to the community. It would not only bring thousands of persons from the southwest territory to the outer drive, Jackson park and the new fine arts building, but it would also serve as an outlet for southeastern motorists to the west.

M. N. Lovewell, assistant engineer of the south park commission, stated that the commissioners would not oppose any general improvements. He pointed out that a definite need for the extension of the car line first would have to be shown, but the park board would probably not be against extending the project through Washington park if public welfare would benefit by such action.

Arche Club to Hear Rev. John T. Stone

"National Ideal" will be the subject of an address by the Rev. John Timothy Stone at a meeting of the Arche club next Friday at the Hotel Shoreland, 55th street and South Shore drive. Mrs. Milton Howard Mack, president, will be chairman of the meeting.

BRIDGE PAGEANT UNIFIES FOLK OF MANY NATIONS

Shows So. Chicago a Melting Pot.

The recent celebration that marked the opening of the new 106th street bridge meant something more than the fact that a $1,500,000 structure—the last word in bridge building—had come to span the Calumet river and link south side arteries with Indiana highways by a direct route. Important as was the dedication of the bridge that replaced its inadequate predecessor after a construction period of two years and a day, the event was also significant in that it provided a holiday which served to cement, as perhaps no similar occasion in the past, the district's great variety of nationalities in the bond of community spirit.

Residents of South Chicago, the east side and South Deering laid aside routine affairs for what, through the nature of the dedicatory parade, was a gala event emphasizing Americanization. By means of floats there was portrayed more vividly than in any book of history the whole pageant of Chicago's progress from the days when Pere Marquette and Louis Joliet explored the Mississippi valley in Indian canoes to the present time.

The float bearing the queens of thirty nationalities was a feature which could hardly have been arranged in any other section of America, for in many instances the girls had been born in the countries whose peasant costume they wore.

Nationalities' Queens.

The girls appearing in this spectacle and the countries they represented were as follows:

Miss America, Miss Amber Johnson; Miss Calumet, Miss Dorothy Murray; Lithuania, Miss Katherine Simkus; Serbia, Miss Zorka Grahovac; Denmark, Miss Evelyn Madsen; Germany, Miss Edith Klopsch; Croatian, Miss Mary Bachich; Slovenian, Miss Mayme Sanko; Grecian, Miss Sophia Stamos; Italian, Miss Bernice Bartolomeo; Czecho-Slovakian, Miss Elise Vodak; Dalmatian, Miss Mildred Perkich; Moravian, Miss Emily Lejko; Swedish, Miss Virginia Schupp; Mexican, Miss Angelina Carrillo; Polish, Miss Sophie Kopozunski; Norwegian, Miss Leora Johnson; Swiss, Miss Mary Slym; Belgian, Miss Odile Deneve; Irish Free State, Miss Frances King; Austrian, Miss Josephine Secrest; Holland, Miss Deborah Cornelisse; Irish, Miss Marion Brady; Luxemburg, Miss Eleanor Flick; English, Miss Valarie Collins; Hungarian, Miss Laura Steller; French, Miss Kathryn E. Creuts; Jewish, Miss Rose Berss; Roumanian, Miss Anna Gima; Scotch, Miss Jean Campbell; Magyar, Miss Gizella Butcher; Bulgarian, Miss Rose Szabo; Tyrolean, Miss Gertrude Ellinghausen.

Mrs. Mina Marie Rosenbach, Miss Helen Bending, and Mrs. Amy Brooke were hostesses for the thirty-three queens.

Long before the arrival of the colorful parade residents of the Calumet region affected by the new concrete bridge were on the scene waiting for the pageant forming at 87th street and Commercial avenue to appear.

Heart of Industrial Area.

The district is the center of waterway commerce, railroad transportation, steel making and allied industries, and the new bridge formed an elevation from which the evidences of these industries was spread out in panorama. The bridge itself was decorated, as were the streets along the line of march. In the waters beneath the bridge the U. S. S. Wilmette

Returns from World Tour; $1.50 Per Day

One day clad in dungarees and sweating among the "black gang" in a steamer's engine room, the next evening enjoying himself in the ship's salon, John Marshall, 23 year old University of Chicago graduate, spent twenty-one months of extremes in a trip around the world which ended last Tuesday night when he arrived in Chicago from New York.

Though a stowaway de luxe with dinner jacket, sports clothes, and knickers packed away, Marshall spent less than $1.50 a day in an itinerary zigzagging for 70,000 miles.

After receiving his Ph.B. in social science at the university in December, 1927, Marshall hitch-hiked his way across the continent to San Francisco and clambered aboard the Malolo, bound for Honolulu, by an unwatched gangplank. He confided his predicament to Richard Barthlemess, who was enjoying his honeymoon on board, and was befriended by the motion picture actor throughout the voyage. Honolulu he made the springboard for rambles through the South seas, Australia, and the East Indies. In the Fiji islands he was the guest of Ratupope, the most important chief in the region.

Reported Killed in China.

The likelihood of adventure in China lured him 1,000 miles up the Yangtze river on the M. V. I'Tu, a British gunboat, which became a target for Chinese troops near Ichang. Marshall was wounded in the hand by a bullet swerving off the side of the vessel. He was later reported killed when reports of the death of a missionary at the hands of bandits were confused with an account of his own adventures.

After returning to Shanghai, he made for the Manchurian war area, narrowly escaping death in Hailar when a nationalist sentry, who mistook him for a Russian, swung the butt of his rifle across Marshall's hip, and when the student resisted, pressed the point of his bayonet against Marshall's coat. An officer intervened and Marshall was released.

Bums a Flight to London.

At Manchuli he mingled with a group of 400 Russians who were being deported in ox carts by the Chinese troops and crossed the Siberian border. Equipped with a soviet pass, he found no difficulty in making his way about Chita, Baikal lake, and the eastern Siberian region and finally reached Moscow. At Berlin, the German Lufthansa, impressed with his offer of publicity, piloted him to England in one of its planes.

Throughout his trip he was overwhelmed with the hospitality of acquaintances who were struck by his story. He now plans to write a book recounting his experiences. He is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

FATHER PEREZ' EVENING SCHOOL STARTS CLASSES

Classes of the Father Perez Community Evening school, which is sponsored by the Father Perez council, Knights of Columbus, started Monday evening in the council's clubhouse, 67th and May streets. The one hour class with which the 24 week course was inaugurated was that in problems of modern foremanship.

The schedule of classes includes public speaking for Tuesdays, business arithmetic for Wednesdays, elementary commercial law for Thursdays, and composition of business letters for Fridays. All classes are held from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m.

John Bain, well known south side banker and a member of the south park commission, donated $1,200 to the project, while the members of the Calumet council, Knights of Columbus, voted a fund which will be used to pay the tuition of five young men.

CIVIC OPERA CLUB OF SOUTH SHORE SEEKS MEMBERS

Mrs. William J. O'Brien, 6845 Crandon avenue, will be chairman of the membership drive of South Shore Civic Opera club, starting tomorrow. Residents of the community from 67th to 83d streets and from Stony Island avenue to the lake, are eligible for membership to the club.

The club, organized during the summer, already has a membership of about one hundred. Three hundred members is the maximum desired. Juniors from the seventh grade up through the senior high school are admitted to the programs without charge.

The first program of the club was held two weeks ago and the next is scheduled for Oct. 28. The membership drive is being held in conjunction with music week and civic opera week.

Gala Opening for 71st Street Paving Monday

Seventy-first street, from Cottage Grove avenue to Stony Island avenue, will be open to south side motorists tomorrow. City and county officials as well as members of sixteen local civic organizations will take part in the ceremonies which will mark the dedication and opening of the new street.

At 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon a ribbon will be cut at 71st street and Stony Island avenue, and at 3:30 o'clock another ribbon will be cut at 71st street and Cottage Grove avenue. At 5 o'clock a parade will form at 71st and State streets, and will march on 71st street to Jeffery avenue. The parade will consist of a long line of decorated automobiles entered by the merchants of the community.

Plans Better Business Drive.

In connection with the opening of the new street, members of the Chatham Chamber of Commerce and members of the South Woodlawn Chamber of Commerce will stage a better business drive, which will start tomorrow and continue throughout the week.

According to Eugene Mooney, president of the South Woodlawn organization and chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the street opening parade, members of both organizations hope to acquaint residents in the territory with the quality of the neighborhood stores. He pointed out that the merchants in the community can furnish the people in that section with every home or personal need.

Streets to Be Decorated.

Streets throughout the Eighth ward will be decorated with flags and bunting, while placards placed in the windows of the neighborhood stores will tell the residents of the section about the drive. Sales will be held by the local merchants. Max Frank, one of the leading merchants in the community, is chairman of the committee in charge of the drive. He is assisted by Harry Dorrigan and Jack Waxman.

The opening of the new street tomorrow will mark the successful culmination of a three year battle on the part of the members of the Stony Island Business Men's association, headed by William J. Hubrich, president, to obtain the widening and paving of the thoroughfare.

Mr. Hubrich pointed out that the widening of 71st street will open a new traffic artery from Western avenue to the lake and will relieve congested traffic conditions on many of the other cross town streets.

Fourth Ward Rezoning Up Before Committee

Property in two parts of the Fourth ward would be rezoned according to ordinances submitted to the city council recently by Ald. B. A. Cronson. The west side of Indiana avenue between 48th street and the alley south of 47th street, and the east side of South Parkway between 48th street and a line 400 feet south of 47th street would be changed from apartment to commercial districts. The ordinances will be taken up by the city council committee on buildings and zoning.

O'NEILL VS. BARR TO BE HOTTEST SENATE BATTLE

Preliminaries Set Pace for State.

Chicago and its suburbs have ringside seats for the most exciting fight now in the cards for the next legislative primary, the battle of State Representative Lottie Holman O'Neill to wrest from that veteran, Senator Richard J. Barr, his seat in the upper chamber of the general assembly.

RICHARD J. BARR.

Nowhere else in the state is there anything like such a fight forecast. Those who love a good scrap are praying that it will remain a "two man" affair; that there will be no added starters to confuse the lines; and the two contestants are said to be telling their friends that they want nothing better than a straightaway contest to a finish without complications.

Mrs. O'Neill, the first woman member of the Illinois assembly, lives in Downers Grove, in Du Page county, which borders Cook county on the west. Senator Barr, who already has served twenty-seven years, resides in Joliet. That is in Will county, lying below Du Page and extending around the southern end of Cook. Together they constitute the Fifty-first district. Both are heavily Republican and the winner of the nomination of that party is considered as good as elected.

Preliminaries Set Pace.

The primary is not until next April, but heavy preliminaries for this go are already in progress, setting the pace for the rest of the state. Only the odd numbered of the fifty-one districts in the state elect senators next year. Sixteen of the twenty-six are in Cook county, where only restrained organization battling is looked for. In the downstate odd numbered districts there is no promise of a thrill approaching a political death grapple except the woman vs. man match in the Forty-first.

Even those who predict a tough—if not an impossible—tussle for Mrs. O'Neill give her credit for immense courage. Her first election to the lower house came in 1922. Since then she has been reelected three times for the regular two year term. In her four regular sessions she has won recognition as a scrapper for her pet measures, the chief of which has been the women's eight hour bill, but many of her fellow members were amazed when Lottie announced recently that she was ready to tackle Dick Barr.

Barr is considered a giant in the assembly. For several terms now he has been recognized as the boss of the senate, a place that he continued to hold, although sidetracked at the wish of Gov. Emmerson this year from his old honor of the presidency pro tempore. He also is considered a figure in state politics, he and his brother, George, having been discovered with Will county in their pockets in several campaigns.

Senate Race Harder Than House.

And Mrs. O'Neill isn't known as a giant killer. While she did win a place in the lower house four times running, members of that chamber have two practical advantages that do not occur in connection with contests for senate seats. First, each of the friends of a candidate for the house may cast as many as three votes for him. A supporter of a senatorial aspirant can give hi monly one vote. Second, the senatorial district committee of each party may limit its nominees for the house to two, or even one. If the Democrats nominate only one in the Forty-first district and the Republicans only two, the primary settled the election except for the rare danger of an independent candidacy.

In her four successes Mrs. O'Neill admittedly was the beneficiary of extensive cumulative voting or "plumping," the women of her district particularly giving her their three votes for the lower house. Since this three-vote power may be used to give one vote to each of three candidates, or one and one-half votes for each of two candidates, or three votes for one candidate, it is impossible to compute with mathematic accuracy the actual number of voters who marked for her in any of her four primaries or elections, and therefore to some extent might be expected to go along with her against Senator Barr. But some wiseacres contend that the returns show that Barr consistently has had more of the district's voters supporting him than she has had behind her.

Barr's Influence a Factor.

The next question that the district experts are mulling over in the cool of the autumn evenings is whether any great majority of those who supported Mrs. O'Neill for the lower house will carry on when it means an immense, direct loss to the district if Barr is retired and replaced by a senator who cannot be expected to exert anything like his influence at the state house. This, it is argued, would be especially true if his successor were to be a woman.

For many years Barr has been able to get for the counties of his district more than their normal share of state administration favor. An outstanding example of this is the new Stateville penitentiary with its extensive pay roll and substantial purchasing. But an even more notable proof of the senator's ability is pointed out in the roads built in his territory. He not only had a big mileage for the home folks included in both the $60,000,000 and $100,000,000 bond issue plans, but he also contrived to have them built while other districts were awaiting for the fulfillment of concrete promises.

Charge He Played with Small.

To accomplish these results for his district, his critics charge he played in with the administration during the eight years of Len Small in the state house. While Small may have held off some moves for which he could not win Barr's advance approval, it is said that the Joliet senator never attempted to array his strength in the senate against any Small legislative project.

That Barr could have wrecked the Small legislative program more than once is conceded by his closest friends and they also admit that it was his adroitness that frequently saved administration measures when the hostiles went after them hot and heavy.

This coöperation and sympathy with the man defeated by Emmerson last year, including his support of Small in the primary, probably will constitute a considerable part of Mrs. O'Neill's campaign material; but the whispered answer of the Barr supporters will be that he did it to get things for the district and that he got them.

Another line of attack from Mrs. O'Neill probably will be directed at the public utilities. She already has predicted that these interests will spend a large sum to retain Barr in the senate and to defeat her because of her advocacy of measures favored by labor.

Possible Third Entrant.

The one possibility of a third entrant in this race is said to be the fact that State's Attorney Hjalmar Rehn of Will county is none too friendly toward Barr and is said to have been urged to back a candidate for the senate against him. So far as is known the Rehn forces have not agreed to back Mrs. O'Neill, but the political sages say that the entry of a Rehn choice would aid her materially.

But there is one complication in the O'Neill-Barr contest that is considered already a factor. Last year at the Republican national convention at Kansas City Mrs. O'Neill was the Deneen choice for national committeewoman to succeed Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, then the nominee for the post of congressman-at-large to which she was elected in November. Mrs. McCormick was a large factor in breaking a caucus deadlock which resulted in the election of Mrs. Bertha Baur to the committeeship with Deneen's consent.

Fast February, in the early days of this year's session of the legislature, Mrs. O'Neill issued a press statement attacking Speaker Shanahan because he refused her the chairmanship of the committee on education, which she had requested. She charged that his decision was dictated by Mrs. McCormick and Gov. Emmerson, and she attacked Mrs. McCormick in strong terms. Later both Speaker Shanahan and Mrs. McCormick said the latter had not had a word to say about Mrs. O'Neill's committee assignments.

Thus, while she never has gone through the formality of joining his organization, Mrs. O'Neill is considered a supporter of Deneen in his contest with Mrs. McCormick, who has announced herself as a candidate for the United States Senate. This may, it is said, have the effect of swinging Senator Barr into somewhat more open support of Mrs. McCormick than otherwise might have been expected from a man careful to keep his own lines free from tangles.

Whether the Emmerson forces will take a hand in Will and DuPage counties has not been disclosed. It is understood that Gov. Emmerson wanted to see Barr retired as president pro tem of the state senate in order that the public might be convinced that the state house had changed hands. But so far as is known there has been no real breach between the governor and the senator.

While the governor, it is said, might have a freer hand in the legislature if Barr were gone, the gossip goes on to say that he recognizes that Barr's policy always has been to "go along with the adminstration in power," and for that reason it is believed he will not actively aid an effort to oust him. Reëlection of Barr, it is pointed out, is almost certain to insure the retention of a friendly control of the senate.

On the other hand, there is the memory of Mrs. O'Neill's attack on the governor while he was asserting and reiterating his hands-off policy toward strictly legislative matters. Therefore—as well as for other reasons—it is said, he will not seek to promote Representative O'Neill to the senatorship. While he may not object to his friends taking sides, say those who know him, it is expected he will take no personal part in the fight.

$600,000 PAVING, SEWER JOBS UP TO BOARD FRIDAY

Give Property Owners Chance to Protest.

The city council chambers will again be visited by scores of south side property owners Friday morning when the board of local improvements will seek approval of more than $600,000 of paving, sewer, and sidewalk improvements at the third large public hearing this fall. In addition to the south side projects, the board will consider $1,127,400 of improvement contracts in other parts of the city.

Residents who would be assessed to bear the cost of the improvements have been notified to appear and make themselves heard if they object to the board's plans.

Plan to Widen Damen Avenue.

The largest project to be considered will be the paving and widening of Damen avenue between 33d street and Pershing road, the portion directly south of the river over which a bridge is under construction. The cost has been placed at $143,000, part of which would be borne by the city as a public benefit. The proposed roadway is 48 feet wide while the existing street is 30 feet.

The following system of streets in Chicago Lawn would be paved at a cost of $87,000: Knox and Kilpatrick avenue, between 53d street and Archer avenues; Keating avenue, between 53d street and 253 feet south, and 53d street, between Cicero avenue and the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad.

Drexel Project Up.

Drexel avenue would be paved between 55th street and 58th street at a cost of $52,500; Western avenue, paved and widened to 70 feet between 54th and 56th streets, costing $50,500; a system in Beverly Hills including Longwood drive from Weston place to Hopkins place, and Hopkins place, Howland avenue, and Hunt avenue between Longwood drive and Pleasant avenue, costing $49,000; and Racine avenue between 113th place and 115th street, costing $22,500.

A sewer with the main line in 98th street between Avenue N and Avenue G and having short branches in the surrounding blocks would cost $56,500; a sewer for the district at 52d street and Sayre avenue would cost $45,500; sewerage in Normandy avenue between 63d street and the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad, $9,000; and a large sewer system with the main line in Rutherford avenue, between 51st street and Archer avenne, $75,000.

Sidewalks on Ashland avenue between 35th strteet and the south branch of the river would cost $18,297.

Club Board to Meet.

The board of directors of the South Side Woman's club will hold a meeting at 1:30 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon at the Windermere East hotel, 1642 East 56th street. Mrs. M. D. Bernstein is president of the club.

PROSECUTOR'S AID TEACHES ROMAN LAW AT LOYOLA UNIVERSITY

Loyola university's school of law began courses in Roman law last Monday with Frank Mast, LL.B., as instructor. Prof. Mast, an assistant state's attorney in the Felony court, Roosevelt road and State street, was at one time counselor for the Lithuanian legation at Washington, D. C., a position he held for several years.

Prof. Mast's course at Loyola university will consist of an historical summary of the origin and development of Roman law, including the Institutes of Justinian, the digests and the commentaries, and an application of the theory of Roman law to the problems of the common law.

$576,300 FOR IMPROVEMENTS ON SOUTH SIDE

Court Approves Paving for Indiana Avenue.

Paving of Indiana avenue between 85th and 95th streets at an estimated cost of $220,000 heads the list of projects in south side wards for which assessment rolls were recently confirmed by the County court. The board of local improvements will advertise for bids on the job within a few days, and the contractor will probably complete the work next spring. An asphalt pavement will be laid.

A total of $576,300 of south side improvement work was confirmed by the court, permitting the board to award contracts on six paving jobs and two sewers constituting that amount.

Additional Projects.

In addition to paving the mile and a quarter on Indiana avenue, the board will award a contract for paving the following streets at a cost of $106,000; Carpenter street between 106th and 107th streets; Aberdeen and May streets between 105th and 107th streets and 106th street between Morgan street and Racine avenue. A sewer will also be installed as part of the work.

Other paving contracts to be awarded include jobs on Maplewood avenue between 63d street and Marquette road and 66th street between Western avenue and Rockwell street at a cost of $82,000; Marshfield avenue between 92d and 93d streets; 92d street between Marshfield and Beverly avenues; 93d street between Ashland and Beverly avenue, costing approximately $38,000; an asphalt pavement on 66th street between Eberhart and South Park avenues, costing $15,800; and paving Loomis street between 89th and 90th streets, costing $22,000.

Sewer Projects Approved.

A sewer in the following streets will cost $82,000: Torrence avenue between 126th and 130th streets; Saginaw, Marquette, Manistee, and Muskegon avenues between 126th and 128th streets; 126th street between Saginaw and Muskegon avenues; 127th street between Torrence and Escanaba avenues, and 128th street between Saginaw and Manistee avenues.

STUDENTS REJOICE AT BREAKING GROUND FOR SCHOOL

Students of Parker Junior High school, 68th street and Stewart avenue, attending the ceremony of breaking ground for their new building suspended their cheering to salute when the national anthem was played.

NEW $1,500,000 PARKER JUNIOR SCHOOL STARTED

5,000 Join in Cheers as Sod Is Turned.

With more than 5,000 school children and community residents cheering and shouting "No more portables!" and with three student bands playing, Walter Hatfield, principal, dug the first spadeful of sod for the new $1,500,000 Parker Junior High school, 68th street and Stewart avenue, Monday afternoon.

For an hour before the ceremony thousands of the students at the four Parker schools and Chicago Normal school, many of them in costume and dressed in their school colors, paraded through the principal streets of the community.

Thousands Carry Posters.

Led by three bands, these thousands of school children carrying posters which told of the new building caused many stores to stop business as the patrons and salespeople rushed to the doors and windows to watch the parade and to listen to the school songs, while many housewives stopped preparing their evening meal long enough to watch the children march.

By the time the pupils arrived at the scene of the celebration a thousand or two of local business men and residents were waiting for the ceremony to start. After the pupils had formed a human circle about 50 deep around the speakers' stand, the crowd became quiet as one of the bands struck up "The Star Spangled Banner" and the ceremonies began.

Speeches and Speeches.

Speeches were made by Joseph F. Gonnelly, district superintendent in charge of junior high schools; Theophilus Schmid, chairman of the board of education building committee; Ald. James Coyle; William Balmer, ward committeeman; Foster Nims, representative of the local business men; Mrs. M. H. Ranstead, former president of the Parker Junior High school Parent-Teacher association, and Mrs. Ralph Lidster, the present president. Mr. Hatfield acted as chairman and introduced the speakers.

The plans and specifications for the new structure call for the most modern in style and equipment, and, according to Mr. Schmid, the new school will be one of the finest in the city. It will be completed, he said, by next September.

The building will be of stone finish and will conform in architecture to the other buildings on the Chicago Normal school campus. The structure will be four stories high and will contain a basement. It will have accommodations for more than 2,000 students.

Arrangements of Building.

The basement of the new school will house the mechanical equipment, while the first floor will contain an auditorium, printing shop, metal shop, electric shop, six classrooms, principal's office, lunchroom, and kitchen. On the second floor will be two cooking rooms, eleven class rooms, swimming pools, girls' locker rooms, and showers.

The third floor will be made up of special music rooms, typewriting rooms, two special commercial rooms, two mechanical drawing rooms, seven class rooms, library, boys' gymnasium, girls' gymnasium, office for physician and nurse, and office for dentist and nurse. The fourth floor will contain the band and orchestra rooms, four art rooms, four science rooms, and five classrooms.

ENGLEWOOD WOMEN TO OPEN SEASON WITH MUSICAL TOMORROW

A musical and reception will mark the opening of the new season for the members of the Englewood Women's club tomorrow afternoon at the Englewood Masonic temple, 6731 Yale avenue. The special guests will be Mrs. R. M. McClure, president of the Third congressional district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Charles S. Deneen, Mrs. Henry Huck, and Mrs. James P. Archibald, president of the Young Women's auxiliary.

MRS. W. P. BLACKFORD. [Mayo Photo.]

The Parisian ensemble, composed of Philip Warner, pianist; Alan Carter, violinist; Charles Kaminsky, cellist, and Benjamin Butler, bass viol, will furnish the music during the reception and social hour and will assist with the program. John Dwight Semple, tenor, formerly a member of the Chicago Civic Opera company, will be the soloist. His accompaniment will be played by Charles Lurvey.

ITALIAN CLASS NEW FEATURE AT FENGER SCHOOL

A class in Italian, the first in the history of the school, was opened last week at Fenger High school, 11220 Wallace street, with an enrollment of 40 students.

The class, which was formed in response to numerous requests for instruction in Italian from both parents and pupils of the high school, is to be taught by Miss Congetta Change.

There are, besides Miss Change, four new teachers this year: Miss Nora Verhoeden, English; Miss Marguerite Plummer, commercial department; Gerhard Nagel, geometry and chemistry; and James H. Smith, physiology, treasurer, Miss Dorothy Moss.

Woodlawn Mothers Hold Fall Meeting

Members of the Woodlawn Mothers' round table held their first fall meeting Wednesday in the social rooms of the First Presbyterian church, 64th street and Kimbark avenue. Mrs. B. G. Leake, who is entering her second year as club president, was chairman of the meeting. Other officers of the organization are: Vice president, Mrs. J. T. Frame; second vice president, Mrs. C. I. Palmer; recording secretary, Mrs. L. E. Philbrook; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. M. Garlington, and treasurer, Mrs. W. H. Wimpress.

BOY SCOUTS PLAN CITY-WIDE DRIVE FOR MEMBERSHIPS

Uniforming Improvement, Another Object.

Plans for the citywide achievement campaign of Boy Scouts were outlined by Scout Executive E. Urner Goodman and Field Director Theodore Shearer at a recent meeting of the 46 Scoutleaders of the southwest district at the Hamilton park field house.

The campaign, which is similar to the Scout round-up of last year, is to have as objectives increase in Scout membership, improvement in uniforming and appearance, and participation in the troop rating plan. A new inducement for Scouts to advance in rank is the advancement coup button to be given all Scouts who pledge to advance during the campaign and who fulfill their pledges. A membership coup button will reward those Scouts who recruit new members, and all new tenderfoot Scouts will receive gold tenderfoot pins.

Troops as a whole will receive recognition of their participation in the campaign in the form of an Indian coup stick given by the Chicago council.

Scout executives of the southwest district who signified their intention of supporting the campaign were R. M. Bennett of the troop organization committee, Field Executive Fred B. Frizell, and Scoutmaster H. E. Palm. Mr. Palm and Mr. Frizell were among the new officers of the district Scoutleaders' association elected at the meeting. Mr. Palm is president; Mr. Frizell, secretary, and other officers are H. C. Johnson, vice president; C. G. Arnold, treasurer, and E. H. Goebel, R. S. Thomas, William Schumacher, and D. B. Smythe, directors.

Parker Sophomore Girls Entertained by Reserves

The girls of the sophomore class at Parker Senior High school were recently guests of the girl reserves at a "hello" party. Games and stunts were on the program and girl reserve songs were sung. The organization, which is headed by Miss Ethel Stratton, dean of girls, is headed by Miss Georgia Schmitt, who as president is assisted by Miss Amie Burnham, vice president; Miss Mary Louise Ragel, secretary, and Miss Dorothy Turner, treasurer.

Plan Fathers' Night at Fort Dearborn School

Fathers' night will be celebrated Friday evening in the Fort Dearborn school assembly, 90th and Throop streets, by the parent-teacher association. Dr. D. P. MacMillan of the board of education will speak on "The Present Day Need for Child Guidance." Following a talk by G. H. Wilkinson, principal, W. J. C. Woodruff will sing a solo and lead the community in songs.

Make them short and snappy, writing on only one side of the paper, and print your name and address plainly.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—One Saturday about a year ago, while I was doing some shopping in the 79th and Halsted streets district, I noticed that a great number of people were coming out of a local furniture store laden with brooms. So I, too, went in and purchased one for 13 cents. I have been using it continually ever since and though it could no longer be classified as new it still sweeps well. Any housewife will agree that this is an unusual bargain.

Chicago Heights, Sept. 23.—A tapestry table cloth for my dining room table was my best neighborhood bargain. It was just exactly what I wanted—not always a characteristic of bargains—and had been reduced from $17.50 to $7.50.

Fireman Leady Recalls Great Blaze.

fire with, finally, because as the thing grew beyond control we lost our hose going from one place to another. In some ways the horse drawn engines were better than those of today, but, generally speaking, those of today are worth three of the old kind.

Picked Hazelnuts at 12th Street.

"I always thought Chicago would be a big city, but certainly it is a wonderful town that has risen from the ashes. Why, I used to pick hazelnuts at 12th street near the river. Right after the fire, though, Chicago was dead for a while.

"How do I feel? Well, I'd like to see the next World's Fair. You think I will? Well, I don't know. I was out painting the garage today. Still, at 84—This picture of Engine No. 9 taken in the old days? I can remember every one but the one seated at the far right. It's on the tip of my tongue, too. I wonder —"

"That's Matt Meschon," recognized Mrs. Leady.

"Matt, that's right."

Leady to Attend Smoker.

Mr. Leady expects to attend the smoker celebrating the 58th anniversary of the great fire to be held this afternoon at the Great Northern hotel. The event will be given by the Retired Firemen's association in honor of the nine surviving veterans of the Chicago fire department who fought in the historic blaze.

The other eight surviving veterans of the 1871 fire—"71-ers," Mr. Leady calls them—are Isaac M. Adler, 7419 Paxton avenue, 89; Thomas J. Canty, 1113 West Madison street, 83; James Duff, Leavenworth soldiers' home, 80; Frederick W. Gund, 4938 North Winchester avenue, 79; Alfred W. ### Vanderpoel Principal Is Honored by P.-T. Group

A farewell reception and tea were given for Miss Catherine Burke by members of the Vanderpoel Parent-Teacher association and of the Vanderpoel Art association Friday afternoon at the school.

Miss Burke, who was principal of the school for more than fifteen years, resigned recently, and her many old friends and pupils took this opportunity to express their affection and gratitude for her part in the development of the school.

In charge of arrangements for the tea was Mrs. Harry Keeler, chairman. Assisting her were Mrs. John Campbell, Mrs. William Church, Mrs. Ralph Conghenour, and Mrs. Frank O. Shoemaker, president of the association. Mrs. Victor Munnecke and Mrs. Holland Flagler were delegated to select a gift for Miss Burke.

Marguerite Rolston Sorority's New Head

New officers were elected at a recent meeting of the Gamma chapter of the Theta Beta Delta sorority. The new officers of the organization are: President, Miss Marguerite Rolston; vice president, Miss Loretta Sutton; secretary, Miss Mary Kenny, and treasurer, Mrs. Vivian Seip.

Ellis, Lake Park Avenues to Be Closed to Trucks

Ellis and Lake Park avenues between 35th and 39th streets will be reserved for passenger vehicles, according to an ordinance passed recently by the city council. The ordinance, which was sponsored by Ald. Robert R. Jackson [3d] prohibits heavy trucks from using the streets.

CALUMET HIGH P.-T. DISCUSSES WORK AT HOME

Parents, Teachers, and Pupils Contribute.

A discussion of that ever present problem, "Shall We Have Home Work or Shall We Not," held the attention of members of the Calumet High school Parent-Teather association at their first fall meeting Wednesday afternoon in the civic room of the school building, 8131 South May street.

Varying viewpoints were presented by two parents, two teachers, and two pupils. On the affirmative side were Mrs. Fred Woodruff and Howard F. Colt, and Mrs. Nettie Williams and Mrs. Francis Donovan upheld the negative.

70 Piece Symphony Orchestra.

Also on the program was Capt. Morris of the R. O. T. C. freshman and senior bands, who asked that a committee of parents of band members be formed to provide transportation for the bands on concert tours.

James Thatcher, the new orchestra leader, also spoke, stating his reasons for believing that Calumet High school can produce a 70 piece symphony orchestra which will equal any in the city.

Mrs. Woodruff Presides.

Mrs. Fred Woodruff, first vice president, presided at the meeting in place of Mrs. Robert C. White, president of the association, because of the recent death of Mrs. White's son, who was a junior at the school.

Officers of the association, besides Mrs. White and Mrs. Woodruff are: Howard Becholdt, second vice president; Mrs. Arthur Blocki, secretary; Mrs. William H. McCormick, treasurer; Mrs. H. Jack, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Arthur Wesley, program chairman; Mrs. H. Freese, publicity chairman; Mrs. Gideon Anderson, social chairman; and Mrs. Nicholas Shrmeyer, membership chairman.

Friends Honor Klomhauses on Silver Anniversary

In celebration of their silver wedding anniversary, fifty friends and relatives gave a surprise party for Mr. and Mrs. Peter Klomhaus of 7849 Normal boulevard Saturday evening. The gathering was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bishton, 11720 South Halsted street. A chest of silver was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Klomhaus. Mrs. C. Klomhaus, mother of Mr. Klomhaus, who celebrated her ninety-second birthday last Sunday, was a guest.

111TH ST. Y.M.C.A. READY TO PLAY ITS OWN SERIES

Every New Member Will Count as Run.

A young world's series is announced by the 111th street Y. M. C. A. in connection with a big membership campaign for the same time the Cubs are fighting the Athletics.

Every new and renewal member brought in during the period Oct. 5 to 15 counts as a run and those paying their memberships in full count as home runs.

Three box seats at the world's series games in Wrigley park, provided the Cubs and Athletics meet for a second time in Chicago, are offered by Ald. Sheldon Govier as prizes to the local players bringing in the most "runs." Two new league baseballs autographed by Cub stars will be given the best batters each night of the series.

Nine Star Players.

Ald. Govier has accepted the place of Commissioner of Baseball Landis for the "Y" teams. Tom Waller McCarthy is manager of the Cubs team in this series, and Jim Snyder Mack is manager of the Athletics. Nicholas Wiersema Klein is umpire at home plate and A. A. Andersen Moriarity is base umpire.

Under each manager are nine "star players" for his team. Both "star pitchers" have a string of other pitchers under him. Over a hundred players will thus compete in the contest.

The player who brings in the most runs each day will, according to announcement, be crowned "home run king" and have his picture taken in uniform and put up for all to admire. The Thure Johnson loving cup will be presented to the player who brings in the most runs during the series. The championship pennant will hang over the side in the lead each night.

The games at which scores will be reported will be held Oct. 8, 9, 11, 14, and 15. Every participant in this world's series from the commissioner down to each player has signed a contract to appear and play every game scheduled.

Here Are "Star" Players.

Among the "star players" will be: Athletics—Frank Johnson, 11231 Wallace street [Pitcher Groves]; Eugene Dykstra, 10610 Lafayette avenue [Pitcher Walberg]; Tunis Dekker, 10744 Lafayette avenue [Pitcher Earnshaw]; William Walsh, 252 West 112th street [Catcher Mittox]; Ralph Flattum, 110 West 112th street [Shortstop McNair]; Harry Wallin, 11218 Parnell avenue [Third Baseman Miller]; J. L. Hellapd, 10940 Michigan avenue; Edward Menke, 41 West 112th place [Left Fielder Simmons]; Dr. R. C. Libberton, 11431 Michigan avenue [coach]; Al Martinelli, 4 East 111th street [First Baseman Foxx]; E. Combs, 4 East 111th street [Center Fielder Lebourveau]; Ed Poole, 11245 Normal [Second Baseman Morse].

Cubs—Kenneth Selby, 11141 Union avenue [Pitcher Root]; John Dekker, 2 West 111th place [Pitcher Bush]; Karl Burg, 235 West 110th street [Pitcher Blake]; Carl J. Ryden, 12037 La Salle street [Catcher Gonzales]; Dr. Yampolsky, 9944 State street [Second Baseman Hornsby]; H. Doerr, 11519 South Irving avenue [Third Baseman McMillan]; Pops Madderom, 4 East 111th street [Center Fielder Wilson]; Fred Saurbier, 4 East 111th street [First Baseman Tolson]; R. T. Rau, 10956 Michigan avenue [Right Fielder Heathcote]; Victor Beckman, 11311 Normal avenue [Right Fielder Stephenson]; E. F. Redding, 910 West 111th street [Shortstop English].

BIG THREE OF WORLD SERIES

Roseland is to put on a world series at the same time as the feature at Wrigley field and Shibe park. Ald. Sheldon W. Govier (9th) is playing the part of High Commissioner Landis. Jim Snyder represents Connie Mack and Tom Waller impersonates Joe McCarthy in connection with a membership campaign for the 111th Street Y. M. C. A.

SOUTH HAMLIN GROUP FIGHTS SCHOOL CHANGES

Parents of children attending the Peck, Tonti, and Hubbard schools are invited to attend this month's meeting of the South Hamlin Avenue Property Owners' association at the Lawn Masonic hall, 63d place and Homan avenue, tomorrow evening at 8 p. m. in order to register a formal protest against the shortened school hours and inconvenient arrangements to which it is declared their children are being subjected. These conditions will again be brought to the attention of the board of education to compel a speedy remedy of the situation.

A new name for the association will also be considered at this meeting. According to William F. Stelzer, president, the growth of the association and the expansion of its activities are no longer adequately expressed in the old title, and a more suitable one should be devised.

The campaign for the restriction of the community to Caucasians only is to be presented this fall. Block captains will canvas the district from Kedzie to Crawford avenues, between 55th and 67th streets for the purpose of securing sufficient support to legally restrict the entire territory.

Mr. Stelzer and other members of the board of the association urge that people living adjacent to the Grand Trunk railway attend the meeting, since their interests will also be considered by the association.

Officers of the association, besides Mr. Stelzer, are: Peter Theis, vice president; William A. Steinbrink, secretary; Gottlieb Rebau, financial secretary; and Emil Malquist, treasurer.

Robert Stryzek, Joseph Kuehner, and Charles Windish, are trustees of the association. Miss Carrie Krause is librarian, and James Potocki is sergeant-at-arms. Chairmen of committees include: John F. Salewski, streets and alleys; Albert Weganast, publicity; Peter Wolf, public service; and John W. Wallace, block captains.

HEADS NEW P.-T.-A.

MRS. EUGENE C. HELLAND.

Mrs. Eugene C. Helland, 935 West 111th street, district chairman of the Child Welfare magazine and president of the youngest parent-teacher group in the city, that at Fenger High school, presided over last week's meeting at the school.

Safety Loading Zones for State St. at 69th

An ordinance directing the commissioner of public works to install safety loading zones on State street between 69th and 71th streets was passed recently by the city council. The measure was presented by Ald. O. E. Northrup [19th].

BEVERLY HILLS WOMAN'S CLUB IN ALL DAY SESSION

C. L. Morgan to Address Group on Art.

The Beverly Hills Woman's club will hold its first all day meeting of the season Wednesday at the Church street fieldhouse, 102d place and Church street. The morning will be devoted to a discussion of modern architecture under the auspices of the art department, of which Mrs. J. M. Van Valkenburgh is chairman. Charles L. Morgan, authority of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects on modern art, will speak on the relation of art to the office building and home.

The garden department is to have charge of the afternoon program. Mrs. Harry E. Wulfing, chairman of the department, will preside, and Mrs. Frederick Fisher, president of the Garden Club of Illinois, will give an illustrated lecture on planting for continuous bloom.

After the meeting there will be a social hour in charge of Mrs. George Morris. Miss Lucienne Bose, harpist, will furnish the music.

Mrs. Ralph S. Couchenour is president of the Beverly Hills Woman's club, and other officers include: Mrs. Reid M. Bennett, first vice president; Mrs. Rees J. Roberts, second vice president; Mrs. F. F. Harrison, third vice president; Mrs. O. C. Bruhlman, recording secretary; Mrs. D. Milton Woods, treasurer; Mrs. W. L. Marsters, corresponding secretary.

Other chairmen of committees, in addition to Mrs. Wulfing, garden department chairman, are: Mrs. Oscar Shanks, program chairman; and Mrs. Helen T. Harrison, press chairman.

STATELY HOMES ARE CAPITAL OF SURGERY IN U. S.

College Opens Convention in Chicago Oct. 14.

Members of the American College of Surgeons who attend the annual convention in Chicago Oct. 14 to 18 will tour the three old residences which, with the John B. Murphy memorial, make up the national headquarters of the college.

The home of S. M. Nickerson, second president of the First National bank of Chicago, at Erie and Cass streets; the old John V. Clark home, on the southwest corner of Rush and Erie; and the old R. Hall McCormick home, at the northwest corner of Rush and Erie. These three form the executive home, the clinical laboratory, and the offices for the publication of the college's official organ.

The old McCormick residence has been remodeled and will be used temporarily until a new building, necessitated by the larger program of activities of the organization, is provided.

Plan Medical Museum.

Room also will be required for a museum, in which will be housed medical specimens which are required for the scientific study of the various diseases, such as cancer, of which no certain method of cure is as yet known.

The new building has not been planned nor has the architect been chosen, but a suggested design has been made, typifying the general character of the required structure. When completed, it will center the research of an organization comprising the outstanding surgeons of the western hemisphere.

The American College of Surgeons is not a college in the usual sense of the word, but an organization automatically limited numerically by the high standards requisite to the outstanding surgeons and surgical specialists of this half of the world. At present it comprises about nine thousand members. It corresponds to the Royal College of Surgeons of England, Scotland, and Ireland, though, since it is generally considered in medical circles that the greatest surgeons are in America, the Royal college suffers by comparison.

The fellows of the college are individual in their working interest in their organization, and not only have worked but financed their own activities and contributed a permanent endowment fund.

Founded by Dr. Martin.

Dr. Franklin H. Martin is president and founder of the college, and Walter R. Carr, the only nonprofessional connected with it, manages the physical properties.

Dr. Martin and his wife, Mrs. Isabelle Hollister Martin, are the owners of the Surgical Publishing company and the journal, Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics, now the official organ of the college. They have announced it is their intention to bequeath the journal and all its assets to the college.

The Nickerson residence, now used as executive headquarters, was once known as "Nickerson's Marble Palace." A bronze tablet at the front entrance testifies that the homestead was purchased and presented to the American College of Surgeons by citizens of Chicago in order to induce the college to make this city permanent headquarters. Among the donors were J. Ogden Armour, E. B. Butler, Charles L. Hutchinson, Cyrus H. McCormick, James E. Patten, Julius Rosenwald, and Edith Rockefeller McCormick.

The John B. Murphy memorial, which has been pronounced by critics as one of the most impressive monumental buildings in the world, was erected through subscriptions from more than two thousand of Dr. Murphy's admirers to the total amount of $550,000. More than half of the amount came from fellows of the college, as individuals. When the building was dedicated in 1926 it was turned over to the American College of Surgeons, of which Dr. Murphy was a founder.

P.-T. SPEAKER

The fall activities of the Frank Gunsaulus Parent-Teacher association open next Friday with talks on child welfare by Mrs. L. A. Kopecky and Mrs. Dan Pagenta at the school, 4400 South Sacramento avenue.

On the program, too, will be Mrs. Helen Matyka, 3649 West 22d street, who is coach for Gunsaulus and has charge of special music and art work.

Projects for the year planned by the group include equipping a rhythm band, curtains for the building; stage equipment, and a play, "Clubbing Husband."

This year's officers are: President, Mrs. Grace Gentine, 4525 South Sawyer avenue; vice president, Mrs. William Newman; second vice president, Mrs. A. Hauser; third vice president, Miss Anne McNichols; recording secretary, Mrs. Marjorie Van Matre; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Henry St. Germaine; treasurer, Mrs. Kenneth Greene; and press chairman, Mrs. John Greener.

KIMBARK NAMED FOR FOE OF LAKE FRONT GRABBERS

Honors 1st South Park Commissioner.

This article is the seventeenth of a series on the origins of the names of streets and suburbs of the south side.

One of the three original south park commissioners, who with them were responsible for locating Jackson park, Washington park and the Midway where they are now, Seneca D. Kimbark, is remembered in the name of a street in that section, Kimbark avenue, which runs from 1300 East 47th street south to 94th street.

He came to Chicago in 1853 from New York state, where he was born in 1832, and connected with the firm of E. G. Hall & Co., wholesale iron merchants, becoming junior partner, then senior partner, and finally sole owner.

Made Business Thrive.

His business acumen is testified to by the fact that the company which did a $250,000 business when he joined it thirty years later, in spite of the Chicago fire, which taxed it heavily, did a $1,500,000 business.

In Moses and Kirkland's "History of Chicago," 1895, is written in connection with his choice in 1869 of the faraway park sites: "He possessed at once the intimate knowledge of the city's needs and an abiding faith in Chicago's future. His fellow commissioners were Chauncey T. Bowen and James H. Rees. . . . Some hostile criticism was incurred from those who considered the site chosen as being entirely too far south, but Chicago's history has demonstrated the wisdom of the commissioners' action."

Grasping Policy Roused Him.

The controversy raging during his lifetime over the ownership of the lake front and the alleged grasping policy of certain corporations roused him to action, opposing every form of encroachment on the territory which he believed belonged to the people.

STRONG FORCES SEEKING DEFEAT OF FRANK REID

Drys Discontent with His Record in Congress.

Congressman Frank R. Reid's present term, his fourth, may be his last, according to the political experts of his home territory. Although the primary in which he must seek renomination if he desires to remain in

FRANK A. M'CARTHY.

Washington is six months away, potent influences already are planning his defeat.

The Eleventh district is known as the Aurora district, so called because it includes the city in which resides; but it stretches from the Wisconsin line all the way to the Indiana line, its four counties, McHenry, Kane, Du Page, and Will, bordering Lake and Cook counties to the west and south.

The population of those four counties makes it one of the big districts of the state and from each of them come reports that general opinion holds he will be beaten next April if there is a concerted movement in that direction. Companion reports are that such a movement is expected and even now may be taking shape.

Not Battler, Drys Assert.

Although Mr. Reid was elected in 1922, 1924, 1926 and 1928 as a dry, the drys of the district, and particularly those of his own county of Kane, are dissatisfied with him. They say he votes with them when a record test is made, but he does not battle for their cause or aid it except by his vote when it comes to a showdown.

That man is B. S. Pearsall, butter and dairy products magnate, a resident of Elgin and several times a millionaire. He not only is dry but ardently so. In politics he always has been on the side of reform. He was one of the financial supports in the election of State's Attorney Carbary. He was a battling reform alderman a quarter of a century ago.

Mr. Pearsall is in Europe and is not expected to return until about Thanksgiving day. At that time, it is believed, he will say definitely whether he will run against Reid and his decision will be the signal for the opening of the battle, for it will have some effect on the decision of other potential candidates of considerable political strength.

Boom for Chauncey Reed.

There are at least two of these. One is Chauncey W. Reed of Naperville, state's attorney of Du Page county, who in that office has made a record for law enforcement against strong drink, although he is not considered a dry. He is a young, active service man and a good sized boom for him was launched during the recent state convention of the American Legion at Rock Island.

State's Attorney Reed is now on his honeymoon. When he left he planned a six weeks' stay, so that he will be back on the scene slightly in advance of the decision awaited from Mr. Pearsall.

The same is said to be true of State Representative Frank A. McCarthy of the Fourteenth senatorial district, a resident of Elgin. He was one of the big men of the last session of the assembly in which, as in former sessions, he was the spokesman for the milk producers, who are numerous in his section. This is considered a big asset but an even bigger one, politicians say, is the fact that as a member of the legislature he voted against Illinois' approval of the eighteenth amendment.

McCarthy an Emmerson Ally.

Representative McCarthy was one of the speakers—and proved himself an effective stumper—who traveled the state with the state ticket last fall and stands unusually well with the Emmerson forces. As far back as 1920 he showed remarkable strength as congressional timber when he ran against a veteran, Ira C. Copley, and lost out by only 1,761 votes.

If Congressman Reid and Mr. Pearsall, two drys, both go into the fight, district leaders say McCarthy's legislative record, particularly his vote on the eighteenth amendment, coupled with his known attitude toward the De King slaying in Aurora, would give him a big chance for success. But his only statement is that he is "watching developments."

District observers attach maximum importance this time to the wet and dry issue, largely because the Anti-Saloon league favor is about the only block of votes that has stuck by Congressman Reid.

But much of the campaign material against the incumbent, it is said, will be the same as that used two years ago when in the primary, with a total Republican vote of 87,928 he barely won a majority, his margain over half of the total vote cast being only 1,381.

Lucrative Thompson Connection.

The principal material against the congressman then was his close association wth Mayor Thompson of Chicago and his consequent profit as one of the city hall's $100 a day experts in legal matters. It is the same material with the added point that Mr. Reid's compensation has been mounting steadily until his pay on special vouchers for the current year probably will exceed $15,000—more for "part time" work than is received by any of the city department heads or even by Gov. Emmerson for full time.

This increase in pay is due to the fact, say the politicians, that Congressman Reid's value to the Thompson scheme of things became greater when the Chicago mayor launched into his publicity campaign on flood relief and control. The Aurora representative is chairman of the house committee on flood prevention and joined hands heartily with Mr. Thompson, submitting to his domination, it is said in Washington, in matters before his committee.

Congressman Reid, being attached to the city law department pay roll in 1917 for an amount undisclosed be, cause the records are not available, has been paid substantial sums almost every year that Thompson has been in office. The total of his receipts found on the records now is $35,973 and of that amount $11,450 was charged for his services during the first eight months of 1929. His present duties are said to be in connection with the 10 cent elevated fare case, which has been continued from time to time.

$24,050 in Two and One-Half Years.

His closest previous approach to that figure was $6,550 for the nine months of 1927 remaining when Mayor Thompson began his present term. The payments to him in 1928 are shown as $6,050. Therefore his total for the last two years and a half of this administration is $24,050. The figure of $11,450 for this year shows that he claimed pay for 114 days' work plus half a day somewhere.

For some time Congressman Reid was reported to be in doubt whether he would seek another term. Recently this has been replaced by reports that he is considering running for the United States senatorship with the support of Mayor Thompson, entering the race now limited to Senator Deneen and Ruth Hanna McCormick.

But politicians consider this merely "war talk," intended as a belligerent notice to the friends of Senator Deneen and Mrs. McCormick that if they don't leave him in peaceful possession of the congressional field in his district he will make trouble for them.

MISS DOROTHY TANNER.
[Russell Photo.]

Miss Dorothy Tanner of 7537 East End avenue, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Inos B. Tanner, has left Chicago to enter the University of Kentucky at Lexington, where she intends to specialize in journalism. Miss Tanner is a graduate of St. Xavier's academy and secretary of Sigma Theta sorority. During her senior year she was editor of the St. Xavier News.

SOPHOMORE GIRLS AT PARKER HIGH TO HELP AGED

The Sophomore Girls' club of Parker Senior High school has "adopted" an old ladies' home this year and are planning to make those who live there all sorts of personal gifts and to visit them frequently. Scrapbooks are to be made for the Soldiers' hospital and members of the club are collecting old covers of Literary Digests from their friends.

At a recent meeting under the sponsorship of Miss Jessie Potter, zoology teacher, officers of the club were elected, including: Miss Lillian Fuqua, president; Miss Rita Cusack, vice president; Miss Bernice Ferguson, secretary, and Miss Katherine Chilton, treasurer.

WENTWORTH P.-T. PLANS A STUDY OF PRE-SCHOOL CHILD

A new project of the Wentworth School Parent-Teacher association is the pre-school child study circle, recently organized by Mrs. L. H. Shipley, 915 West 70th street. The circle will hold its first meeting Tuesday in the school assembly hall, 70th and Sangamon streets, and Mrs. Shipley urges that all mothers of small children attend.

An adolescent study group, which is now being organized, will meet for the first time the following Tuesday, according to Mrs. A. W. Becker.

SOCIAL, DANCE FOR NEWCOMERS AT MORGAN PARK

A jolly occasion was the social held Friday evening to welcome freshmen and newcomers into the social activities of Morgan Park High school.

A dance, to which all members of the Student association were invited, was held in the gymnasium, and music was furnished by James Repp and his Rhythm Kings, including Roger Boylan, John Hanna, Billy Stapleton, Christopher Murray, and William Reed. Representing the faculty as guest host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hartle.

Miss Grace Graver was chairman of the social committee supervised arrangements for the dance, and assisting her were Miss Marjorie George and John Handbury of the senior class, Miss Alice Patton and Dick Hudson, juniors, and Miss Mary Jane Goodspeed, a freshman.

Mount Vernon School P.-T. to Meet Thursday

The Parent-Teacher association of Mount Vernon school will hold its monthly meeting Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the school building, 105th and Morgan streets. Mrs. Holland Hagler, 9762 Vanderdoel avenue, member of the state board of the Parent-Teacher association, will be the speaker. Following the meeting refreshments will be served under the supervision of Mrs. C. E. Arthur, social chairman. A board meeting Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. J. Troughton, 1207 West 104th street, will precede the regular meeting.

LAST RITES FOR A. GUSTAF BLOOM HELD TUESDAY

Lived on South Side for Thirty Years.

Last rites for A. Gustaf Bloom, 58 years old, who died after a long illness at the St. Luke's hospital Tuesday morning, were held from his daughter's home, 8223 South May street, Thursday afternoon. He was buried at Oak Hill cemetery.

Mr. Bloom, who was born in Sweden, lived on the south side of Chicago for more than thirty years. He was an automobile dealer on the southwest side for more than fifteen years, having established his headquarters at 77th and Halsted streets. He gave up the agency about five years ago.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elisabeth Bloom; a daughter, Mrs. Harry G. Moreen, and two sons, Harold G. and Conrad E.

H. J. HOLZBAUR FUNERAL RITES HELD WEDNESDAY

Funeral services for Herman J. Holzbaur, 63 years old, who died after a two year illness Sept. 28 at the German Evangelical Deaconess hospital, were held from the chapel, 63d street and Harvard avenue, Wednesday afternoon. He was buried at Forest Home cemetery.

Mr. Holzbaur, who was born in Germany, lived on the south side for more than 43 years. He was employed as an engineer for the American Railway express for more than 20 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Holzbaur; a son, Walter H., and two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Eisenlohr and Mrs. Louise Eisenlohr.

BOARD APPROVES $96,000 PAVING FOR 123D STREET

Paving of 123d street between Halsted street and Ashland avenue at a cost of $96,000 was ordered recorded as approved by Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, following a public hearing recently despite the objection of property owners that the value of their holdings did not warrant an expenditure of money for an improvement.

After the board had voted the project safely through the hearing, however, residents promised to file a petition within 30 days to stop the improvement. Another paving job, eight water supply pipe systems, and a sewer project were approved at the hearing without objections.

Loretto Aid Plans Tea.

A reception and tea will mark the opening of the new season for the Loretto Woodlawn auxiliary tomorrow afternoon in the parlors of Loretto academy, 65th street and Blackstone avenue. Mrs J. P. McGraw, president, is in charge of arrangements.

ECONOMY IN COAL

No matter how cheap you buy it, poor coal is dear at any price. It gives little heat, leaves lots of waste—clinkers, slate, unburned chunks that weigh heavy when you buy it but gives you nothing but trouble and grief when you use it. Our Pocahontas Mine Run is the very best quality that money can buy. It is wonderful Coal. We have several carloads of this Quality Coal on track now and can give prompt service. A revelation in tone quality and furniture craftsmanship

RADIO at first was just an electrical novelty. Popular demand forced its development as a musical instrument. To-day, it must be in addition, a beautiful piece of furniture—a fitting companion to the artistic furnishings which distinguish the better American homes.

A truly up-to-the-minute receiver, then, is the Peck & Hills Radio, embodying all the qualities demanded by discriminating radio buyers. Tone is assured by the master design of the chassis, the vital part of radio. The quiet elegance and distinction of the console make it a thing of beauty.

To achieve tone brilliance, the Peck & Hills Radio engineers have spared no efforts. They have eliminated nothing essential. The volume is full and clear—without distortion. The tuning is sensitive to the highest degree—a slight turn of the dial moves completely off one station and to another. For the DX fan it will bring in distant signals clearly and a turn of the volume control brings them to program strength. Extra power is well under control in the push-pull amplification using two type 245 tubes. Matched dynamic speaker completes the ensemble mechanically—and the beautiful walnut cabinets in an array of masterful designs, make the whole perfect.

QUIN RYAN SET TO BROADCAST WORLD SERIES

New Booths Are Ready at Wrigley Field.

Quin Ryan will begin the broadcast of the first Chicago world's series since the advent of radio on Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. Microphones have been installed in the new glass broadcasting booth at Wrigley field, which will be used for the first time as the series opens. The booth is situated in the most advantageous position possible and will be in constant telephone connection with the score board.

Quin Ryan has been broadcasting baseball games constantly since the city series of 1924. He and Graham McNamee were selected as the radio reporters on the national chain broadcasts to announce the Pittsburgh-Washington world's series in 1925 by Baseball Commissioner Judge K. M. Landis. Quin Ryan, and consequently W-G-N, have broadcast more baseball games than any other announcer and station on the air.

Broadcast Every Day.

For the last three seasons there has been a baseball broadcast from W-G-N every day during the season. During the last season there have been the daily play-by-play broadcasts made from the Chicago parks and, in addition, minute telegraphic reports broadcast as they were dispatched from the out of town parks.

After the first two games the scene of action will be removed to Philadelphia. The broadcast from there will be made in cooperation with the National Broadcasting company.

Football Series Near.

On Saturday, Oct. 12, W-G-N will begin its greatest series of football broadcasts. The officials at the University of Wisconsin have agreed to postpone the season opening kickoff until the fourth game of the world's series is completed. The Wisconsin-Northwestern game will be reported yard by yard by Quin Ryan.

ARCTURUS A-C BLUE LONG LIFE TUBES

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

SWEET are the uses of the radio station. Lecturing last week in Wisconsin we heard the story of a broadcasting station in a nearby town that rented fifteen minutes per day to a radio comedian. The comic fellow sang his songs and delivered his monologue, and then announced that his program was broadcast "through the courtesy" of a certain clothing manufacturer.

He said he would be glad to meet his many friends of the radio audience and would welcome them in the studio. When the listeners flocked to the studio, they found the walls draped with all kinds of men's suits and before they got out many of them had been sold a new suit—with two pairs of pants.

ANNOUNCER Pat Barnes tells the story of the fellow who just bought his first radio set and boasted that it was so good that he could get three stations at once.

MUSICIANS are eager for jobs in the radio studios. For one thing, they do not have to dress for the performances. No more of the stiff postures in the formal attire of the symphony concert or the theater orchestra pit. No more glare of the spotlight, and no more monotony of same music night after night in the musical shows.

Many radio orchestras have pictures taken in the garb they would have the audience believe they work in. We have seen motley groups of boys posing as forest rangers, railroad conductors, gypsies and whatnot, but in reality the majority are glad to doff their coats, vests and collars and feel at ease. The only hardship imposed upon them is the rule of silence, and instructions for shortening or expanding a program are flashed to them on a blackboard.

Down east in some studios the announcers are required to wear dinner jackets!

DO YOU RADIO listeners remember way back when——

The late Charlie Erbstein used to chuckle—and sing "Christopher Columbo" and "The Spanish Bull Fight"—and plead for cigarets for the soldiers?

The forerunner of radio at Comiskey park was the installation of the horns all about the grandstands, through which the batteries and pinch hitters used to be announced?

Two of the finest harmony teams on the air [both since dissolved] were Tommy Malie and Jack Little, and George Little and Larry Shay? And remember both teams wrote a lot of good songs, such as the former's "Jealous" and the latter's "Too Tired"?

George Hay, "the Solemn Old Judge," came up from Memphis to do such fine and homey announcing for the new station WLS?

Everybody had a crystal set—and a "cat's whisker"—and the aerial running around the picture molding on the wall?

Monday night was designated as "silent night," when all of the Chicago stations would shut down at 7 o'clock, in order that listeners might tune distant broadcasters more clearly?

The whole town listened to the seemingly endless Democratic convention in New York, with the series of roll calls invariably starting with "Twenty-four for Underwood"?

The Loos brothers, Billy and Ernie, were heavy radio favorites in Chicago?

Cigar stores and other shops gave away "applause cards" for the listeners' use in writing comments to radio stations?

Entire theatrical productions used to be broadcast from the stage in Chicago theaters. "Blossom Time" and "White Cargo" were broadcast by the old KYW, and "The Student Prince" and DeWolf Hopper's production of "The Mikado" by W-G-N. Then the Actors' Equity started an agitation and demanded that every player in the company be paid for a whole extra performance—one-eighth of a week's salary—if any part of a show were put on the air; so the broadcaster desisted from putting microphones in theaters, even if the managers desired it for publicity's sake?

Station W-G-N broadcast its Amateur Nights, and Spelling Bees, and Old Fashioned Favorite Song contest?

The chain announcers in New York used to enumerate all of the stations through which the program was being broadcast, and conclude the show by giving their own initials?

The papers used to publish weird diagrams and "hookups" for the early listeners who made their own sets?

Most radio singers were chanting the million verses of "How do you do, Everybody, how do you do"?

The Duncan Sisters were wont to broadcast almost every night, during their long runs of "Topsy and Eva," featuring the songs, "Rememberin'," and "I Never Had a Mammy"?

The long since dispersed staff of KYW consisted of "Sen" Kaney, Sally Menkes, Herbie Mintz, Art Linick, Bobby Brown, Lee Sims, Steve Trumbull, Frank Clark, Grace Wilson and the "Harmony Girls," Edith Carpenter and Grace Ingram?

A famous oatmeal company used to sell five dollar sets made out of their cardboard oatmeal cartons?

The Edgewater Beach station was WJAZ and the Drake hotel station was WDAP?

This announcer was "Uncle Walt" and the children's period was "Skeezix Time"?

It was seriously proposed to lay a government tax on all radio receiving sets and accessories, the funds to be distributed to the radio stations for their maintenance?

Radio stations, when starting in business, tried to get call letters which were abbreviations of the owner's name—as in the case of W-G-N, "World's Greatest Newspaper," and WEBH, "W-Edgewater Beach Hotel," and KTHS, "Kum to Hot Springs," and others?

The members of the family used headphones and sat around the receiver as though it were an ouija board?

[With apologies to Harvey Woodruff, the original "Way Back Whener"].

DILL ACCUSES RADIO ARBITERS OF FAVORITISM

Says Chain Organizations Control Programs.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—The federal radio commission was brought to task on the senate floor recently by Senator C. C. Dill [Dem.] of Washington, who is one of the most vigorous promoters of radio legislation in congress, for its apparent favoritism for chain broadcasting systems as against the independent stations. Interrupting a debate on tariff, the western senator warned the radio commission that unless it changed its policy the public will demand that the United States government take over and control all broadcasting stations.

Senator Dill roundly criticised the commission for its continual postponement of putting into effect general order No. 43, which would prohibit the broadcasting of the same program from stations not more than 300 miles apart. This order, which was originally promulgated on Sept. 8, 1928, has been delayed several times because it would practically prohibit chain broadcasting in many localities except for an hour each night. The last postponement was made on Oct. 1, when its effective date was moved up until Dec. 31.

Control in Hands of Few.

"The radio commission has been granting wave lengths, power, and time in a manner that is tending to put the control of an effective radio service in the hands of a few great organizations," Senator Dill said. "The forty cleared channels established in this country today are fast driving out the independent use of radio in an effective manner—forty cleared channels, with thirty-eight of the forty cleared channel stations on chains. These channels were cleared for the purpose of giving the people radio service all over the country on those channels—and they have placed those channels in the very best places on the dial, in spite of the fact that they heterodyne and cause harmonics beyond the limits of their own channels.

"The commission, under the law, has specific power over these chain stations. Nearly a year ago they issued an order which, if they had carried it out, would go far to remedy this situation, but every time the date for the enforcement of the order arrives they postpone it, and they have postponed it again and again."

Hits Proposed Mergers.

"Efforts to weaken the radio law in its monopoly features are being made all over this country today in the form of propaganda," he continued. "They want to repeal sections 13 and 17 of the radio law, so that the International Telephone and Telegraph company can buy the Radio corporation's interoceanic stations, and they want to pay $40,000,000 worth of stock for them.

"Mr. Behn said they were worth $25,000,000 when he was on the stand before our committee last June. Those stocks are selling today for more than $100,000,000; and, if it is permitted, there will be $75,000,000 of water to begin with upon which cable and telephone rates must be made high enough to pay dividends."

ON W-G-N TUESDAY

Mario Chamlee, noted lyric tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company, who will be heard Tuesday evening, Oct. 8, at 8 p. m. over W-G-N.

Angora Deserts Pastor for W-G-N Organ Music

A clergyman in Somonauk, Ill., is fond of cats. His large Angora, Rags, sits purring and blinking contentedly at his feet as the pastor prepares the message for his flock. However, he is thinking seriously of beginning a suit for alienation of affections. As soon as Larry Larsen, organist at W-G-N, Chicago, begins to play Rags is roused. Listening, he walks leisurely to the loud speaker and curls up, again contentedly, before it.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB PROGRAM ON AIR TONIGHT

The first broadcast of the Chicago Sunday Evening club's twenty-third season goes on the air tonight with Bishop Charles P. Anderson, for thirty years bishop of the Episcopal church in the Chicago diocese, giving the principal address. R. Floyd Clinch, a trustee of the club, and Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, moderator of the Presbyterian Church of America, will take part while President Clifford W. Barnes will preside. WMAQ will carry the program.

The club already has received requests from listeners in over twenty states and Canada, asking that information regarding these weekly services be sent to them.

Bishop Anderson, who is now vice chairman of the House of Bishops, and therefore the second ranking churchman in the Episcopal denomination of America, has chosen for his subject "Chicago Day," and the general theme of the meeting will be civic in character.

Edgar Nelson, director of music, states that the choir of 125 contains more solo material than in any previous season. Music students from all parts of the country are enrolled in this choir. Tonight they will sing "Hail Bright Abode," by Wagner, "Bless Our Land," by Cherubini, "Ho Every One That Thirsteth," by Martin. A new contralto soloist, Miss Eva Horadesky, will sing "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain," by Harker. Mark Love and Mabel Sharp Herdien will have solo parts.

ACOUSTICS EXPERTS SOUGHT.

A broad knowledge of electricity and acoustics is necessary for a new side line that has sprung up in the many sided radio business. That is the installation and maintenance of large sound amplifiers and public address systems in hotels, auditoriums, theaters and schools. Experts in this sort of work are in considerable demand, according to engineers.

WHITE HOUSE STUDIO ACOUSTICS PERFECT, ENGINEERS DECLARE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It was discovered when President Hoover broadcast for the first time from the recently restored presidential studio in the east wing of the White House that the acoustics here were what is termed in the broadcasting world as "brilliant."

President Hoover never spoke with a better acoustical background than he did that night, according to radio engineers.

Nor was the natural tone of voice sacrificed, as is often the case when a voice comes through too clearly.

CHICAGO ANNUAL RADIO SHOW TO COME OCT. 21-27

Chicago's Radio show will open for its eighth annual session on Monday, Oct. 21, and continue through Sunday, Oct. 27.

So complete is this year's exhibition that the facilities of the Coliseum, where the show will be held, will be severely taxed.

In a demonstration of television citizens of the central west will be accorded the first view of the most advanced status of radio's smaller sister.

There will be a "Radio Queen," the winner of an essay contest on the subject, "What My Radio Means to Me." Thousands of letters have been received by the management of the show. The woman whose essay is judged the best exposition on the utility of her radio set will be brought to Chicago as the guest of the radio show.

Arctic Flyer Scientists to Use Radio in Search

WASHINGTON.—A license to use the radio channels between 333 and 399 kilocycles for use in the million dollar aerial search of the barren northwest near the Arctic circle for Col. C. D. McAlpine and his party of seven explorer-geologists has been granted by the federal radio commission to the Curtiss flying service of New York. The radio equipment is to be operated on the amphibian plane bearing the numbers NC4453. The license is good for only 30 days, and the call letters are KHEB.

TOM, DICK, HARRY TO SING SANDERS' NEW SONG HIT

When Quin Ryan's voice introduces the Ozite Cushioneers Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock listeners are going to hear one of the most interesting programs these newcomers have yet presented. Old and new favorites are being offered.

With Tom, Dick, and Harry vocalizing, the Cushioneers offer first that new song by Joe Sanders of the famous Coon-Sanders aggregation, "I Gotta Great Big Date." The trio, who are fast proving one of the features of these programs, are also to sing "Break Away."

Lawrence Salerno, soloist, is to sing "My Mother's Eyes."

Radio May Set Watch If You Forget About It

The experiments of the Elgin National Watch company of Elgin, Ill., in the use of radio to regulate timepieces will be continued as the application for a renewal of license has been granted by the federal radio commission. At a recent hearing it was explained that the Elgin research men expected to devise a means of setting watches by radio while they are in the owners' pockets.

People who take excellence for granted naturally turn to the new all-electric screen grid

Eveready Radio
THE PRECISION INSTRUMENT

THERE ARE many fortunate people in this world to whom good taste is second nature. They live pleasantly, yet not ostentatiously. They dress well, yet without extremes of style. Every possession of theirs bespeaks an admirable and tempered attitude toward living.

And quite naturally these are the people who are buying the new Eveready Radio. For there, too, just as in their houses, their clothes, yes, even their friends, they take excellence for granted . . . a radio which brings the smartest dance-orchestra into their living-room . . . which takes them to the sidelines of the big games . . . which places them ten feet from the speaker's table . . . this is the sort of reception they expect, and get—from this remarkable radio receiver.

But such people—those who are buying the new Eveready Radio—look for something more in their material possessions. They want permanence. This radio receiver is built to last. It is precision-built. Each part is put together with as much care as if an aviator's life depended on the winding of a coil. The assumption is that Eveready Radio users want a fine instrument, as fine in its way as all their other material possessions.

Mystifying technical names, new accoutrements, devices and mechanisms bore the buyers of this radio. They know they have the best. They know that improvements will be added from time to time as the large scientific organization which makes this receiver tests and uncovers their merits. But they leave the details to the experts. That is their attitude towards radio . . . houses . . . motorcars . . . life in general.

And so, if you are interested in effects and take the causes for granted, if you order your life according to this principle and to the point, you will want the new Eveready Radio. See it. Hear it. Note how beautiful the cabinetwork is. Ask for the explanation, if you like, of its "weather-proof" principle; but remember that the effect is this—even on muggy nights the reception is remarkably clear.

★ Features of the New Eveready

THE NEW EVEREADY contains eight tubes, including rectifier. Uses three of the new screen grid tubes. Last audio stage is push-pull, using two 245-type tubes. Power-detection and resistance-coupling preserve original tonal purity and fidelity.

Special built-in electro-dynamic speaker of Eveready design.

Insulation is used only for insulating—not to bear the weight of parts. Original fine adjustments made in laboratory are not affected by weather-changes. Unyielding metal used to preserve accurate alignment of parts.

REV. ADDIS DRAKE ELECTED RECTOR OF ST. AMBROSE'S

Succeeds Rev. F. J. Tromp in Chicago Heights.

Announcement is made by Bishop Charles P. Anderson of the appointment of the Rev. E. Addis Drake as pastor of St. Ambrose's Episcopal church, Chicago Heights. He succeeds the Rev. Francis J. Tromp, who was recently elected rector of Calvary church, Chicago.

REV. E. ADDIS DRAKE. [Wallager Photo.]

The Rev. Mr. Drake has been for the past year curate of the Church of the Atonement, Edgewater. He came to Chicago from the Canal Zone, where he was canon of St. Luke's cathedral, Ancon, and rector of St. Alban's parish, Paraiso. He also had charge of Episcopal church work at a leper colony in the Canal Zone.

The Rev. Mr. Drake is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and the General Theological seminary, New York.

Church Started in 1902.

St. Ambrose's church to which the Rev. Mr. Drake goes as priest in charge is located at Fifteenth street and Chicago road, Chicago Heights. It was started on Feb. 23, 1902, in response to a petition circulated by Mr. Albert Bunting and signed by sixteen church people. The first services were conducted by the Rev. James M. Johnson, then a student of Western Theological seminary, in Palmers Hall.

There was no church furniture available at this first service, but an altar was improvised, a Bible and several church hymnals produced and St. Ambrose church was launched on a long and profitable period of work. On the following Sunday the first finance committee was appointed, its members being: Albert Bunting, J. M. Street, San L. Lee, George Munn, and J. R. Selsam.

During the following summer services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Higbee of Momence with the help of Mr. Johnson. When fall came the Rev. W. H. Mitchell took charge of the mission.

Year of Hardship.

The next year was one of hardship for the struggling church. There was no regular pastor or fixed meeting place. But in June, 1903, the Rev. J. M. Johnson took charge and brought new life to the church. The boys' choir was organized and it has continued to the present time. Among the first members of this choir were Norman Gilbert, who was killed in the world war, George Cussick, William Cussick, Herbert Bunting, and Howard Lemere. Mr. Loughborough was choirmaster during the first few years.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson also organized a church school which has continued to train the young people for more than twenty-five years. During the next three years the church in use now was built.

Woman's Guild Active.

The Woman's Guild-Auxiliary is another organization which has been connected with the church for many years and has been a great help to it. Mrs. Albert Bunting was its first president. Other of the early members include Mrs. Clayton, Mrs. Heartwell, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Fogg, Mrs. Stowell, Mrs. Newell, and Mrs. Buckingham.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson left the church in 1906. He was succeeded in turn by the Rev. J. H. Hard, the Rev. C. A. Cummings, the Rev. Frank Wilson, the Rev. Mr. Argus, the Rev. Mr. Louis Parker, the Rev. Mr. Parkinson, and the Rev. R. H. Fairchild. All of these men worked faithfully at St. Ambrose's church and helped to develop it to the high place which it now holds among the churches of the diocese.

At the present time J. T. Gorrell is lay reader. Other officers are W. J. W. Gilbert, clerk; Leighton Yentzer, treasurer; Dr. William Cusick, W. J. W. Gilbert, Dr. J. H. T. Gorrell, Philip Hawley, Frederick Law, W. J. Mathews, R. O. Wells, Leonard Yates, and Leighton Yentzer, members of the finance committee.

David C. Nelson, president of the organization, was chairman of the meeting.

Board Begins Study of 95th St. Improvements

The board of local improvements has begun a study for the improvement of 95th street between Cottage Grove avenue and State street and between Commercial and Ewing avenues. A recommendation that the study be made was submitted to the city council recently by Ald. William A. Roman [10th] and referred to the board.

MOTHERS' STUDY CLUB ORGANIZED IN MORGAN PARK

A large and active membership is being solicited this year by the Parent-Teacher association of Morgan Park High school and all parents of students at the school are urged to apply for membership to Mrs. Michael Boylan, 1759 West 94th street, membership chairman.

Many new members were enrolled Thursday afternoon at the first meeting of the association this season. A musicale and tea were given under the auspices of the board of managers, including Mrs. Harvey G. Ellerd, president; Mrs. C. A. Berger, first vice president; Mrs. George Morris, second vice president; William Schoch, principal of the school, third vice president; Mrs. H. J. Bogg, recording secretary, Mrs. Bruce Bort, corresponding secretary, and Robert Maystack, treasurer.

Mrs. Ellerd has recently been elected president of the association to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. W. K. Sawyer, 2129 West 109th street.

A new activity of the association this year is the Mothers' Study club, which met for the first time Thursday in the hour preceding the regular association meeting. Mrs. Vernon C. Beebe, 10918 South Irving avenue, who conducted the hour, urged that all mothers join the club.

NEXT YEAR . . . your friends will be enjoying Tri-toned* Radio but YOU can have it NOW!

Many of These Modern Features Are Exclusive With the New Grebe

Screen Grid Tubes—The use of which results in sensitivity never before attained.

New Control for New Power—But in the New Grebe this added power is controlled. Overlapping of stations is eliminated . . . strays are kept out. You get the full tone value made possible by that exclusive Grebe feature—the Equalized Band Pass Filter.

Single Audio Stage Means No Hum—Grebe reception is so strong . . . so pure in tonal characteristics . . . that only a single audio stage is needed. Hum and microphonic noises are eliminated.

Large Diameter Speaker . . . an Original Grebe Idea—Full tone range is effectively accomplished by special large diameter electrodynamic speaker . . . so successfully introduced by Grebe.

For Superb Reproduction of Phonograph Records—You can play your favorite phonograph records by a mere turn of the tuning dial. This automatically connects the phonograph pick-up with specially wound transformer.

Cabinets Designed for Lasting Beauty and Acoustic Perfection—The New Grebe is obtainable in a wide choice of selected walnut and mahogany lowboy and highboy models. Furniture of characteristic beauty and dignity, expertly designed for acoustic properties. In a word, Grebe craftsmanship.

In the New Grebe, just announced, you find something you have long sought . . . but never before discovered . . . Tri-toned* radio. Music . . . with all that the word suggests . . . comes to you in its full, natural beauty. Distant and local stations . . . stations from all points on your dial . . . now get through to your home the full measure of tonal splendor.

The secret? Screen Grid tubes, of course. Yet Screen Grid tubes alone are not enough. In this one radio . . . which is setting next year's standards of design and re-production . . . you find combined with Screen Grid that exclusive Grebe development . . . the "Equalized Band Pass Filter."

Newer than Screen Grid Tubes

This ingenious device, worked out in the Grebe laboratories, controls the remarkable power of the Screen Grid tubes . . . without in the least subduing it. Outside noise and interference never reach the detector tube. A world of power . . . kept silent.

Radio is not a side-line . . . with Grebe

The craftsmanship which is the secret of Grebe Tri-tone* performance goes back for twenty years. Long before the days of broadcasting Grebe was building fine precision radio instruments . . . many of which did valiant service, during the World War, in the radio rooms of our fleets and those of our Allies. A pioneer in the radio industry, Grebe is still pioneering.

Your Grebe dealer wants you to enjoy this musical treat in your own home. You can arrange for a 48-hour residence demonstration to test the New Grebe as you will. Telephone your dealer . . . today!

*What is Tri-toned Radio?

Every musical instrument has three distinct characteristics: 1. Pitch, by which we distinguish the note as being high or low; 2. Intensity, or loudness; and, 3. Tone, or character by which we distinguish the sound of one musical instrument from another. In Grebe Radio you have re-production that gives you perfect blending of all three characteristics without unnatural over-emphasis of any part of the scale.

HEAR ABOUT ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN MUSICLAND—5:45

Thirsty, Alice drinks a glass of serenade this afternoon before venturing into the land of musical forms. She and the conductor encounter many a notable adventure among the odd inhabitants of musicland. Sprightly classics are played by the W-G-N Symphony which Gaston du Moulin directs, and the announcements are made by Pat Barnes.

JOHNSON & JIROUSEK SPLIT HALF HOUR OF CHOICE CLASSICS

Olda Jirousek is one of the most talented and skillful 'cellists to be heard on the air. Herbert Johnson has spent years developing a phenomenally well marked talent as a pianist. Both have appeared in the largest concert halls in the United States. Both bring their fine talents and their finely developed craftsmanship to two of music's most refined instruments tonight at a joint recital. 8:45.

SNAPPY DANCE TUNES SNAPPED UP BY JEAN GOLDKETTE TONIGHT

Stomping, laughing rhythms have been alloyed with precise craftsmanship. The musicians are eager. On the last syllable of the announcement Jean Goldkette and his W-G-N Dance Orchestra leap into an exhilarating dance tune. The instruments follow the subtle drum throbs precisely and with spirit. Hear 'em today at 1:30, 2:25 and 11.

QUAINT TUNES BY JOHN STAMFORD

John Stamford, tenor, makes the popular melodies mean something. The well known feature announcer sings several pretty tunes this afternoon at 2:15.

HICKEY & JOHNSON HAWAIIAN GUITARS

The modulated melodies of the Hawaiian Guitar snake across the ether as they are plucked from the strings by Hickey and Johnson. Their act today at 1:00.

PAT BARNES & OLD TIMER

Pat Barnes' Sunday Evening Guest is that charming fellow, Old Timer. The two exchange views on current subjects most interestingly. 7:00.

BRIDGE PAGEANT UNIFIES FOLK OF 30 NATIONALITIES

Reveals South Chicago as Melting Pot.

had anchored to lend a naval touch to the proceedings.

The gathered throng had come from one of the greatest schools of the nation for molding conglomerate races into homogenous citizens of the United States. More than twenty national groups, speaking nearly sixty dialects, were represented. That rain interfered with the parade and ceremonies was one of those happenings beyond the committees' control.

Plans for the bridge dedication worked out by the East Side Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the South Chicago Chamber of Commerce and other organizations in the community sought in the parade to emphasize the outstanding feature of the Calumet region—Americanization.

Concerning the history of the bridge, Richard Bogelsack of the East Side Chamber of Commerce, cites that for years an old pontoon did service at the point until it became so rickety that it was almost impossible to swing it open and close it when opened.

Predecessor Fell Into River.

"Although everything possible was done to have the city put up a new bridge," says Mr. Bogelsack, "the community was simply ignored until one day when the bridge was swung open it dropped into the river. Then a ferry was put into service for several years until the city finally decided it had money enough to build a bridge at 106th street.

"A steel center pier structure was then erected which had to be operated by muscle or mule power. The amount of shipping going up the Calumet river increased by leaps and bounds by reason of the various industries along the bank such as the Keystone elevator, Federal Furnace company, Valley Mould company, Wisconsin Steel company, Rock Island freight depot, and By-Products of the Coke corporation.

"From year to year this bridge became a menace rather than a means of assisting transportation along the river. On account of its type of centerpier construction one-half of the navigable channel of the Calumet river was always obstructed and the bridge, being located just at a point where the river made a direct turn, vessels going through the draw continually bumped into it, with the result not only was the bridge out of service a great part of the time, but it soon was in such a bad state of repair that whatever money the city spent on such repairs was practically wasted. Shipping interests became enraged at the delays.

Finally Becomes Reality.

"Again came the necessity of replacing the old ramshackle excuse of a bridge with a modern structure, but we were given the excuse of 'no money.' Finally, when the East Side Chamber of Commerce was organized it went after everybody in city hall circles and had the bridge included in one of the bond issues submitted to the voters. With the assistance of the South Chicago Chamber of Commerce and local labor officials, the bridge became a reality.

Nicholas J. Bohling was general chairman of the 106th street bridge celebration; Charles Hirschfield was assistant chairman; Gideon Ekendahl, secretary; Charles W. Frey, treasurer.

FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO THEY BATTLED CHICAGO FIRE

Firefighters of the period of the Chicago fire of 1871, which occurred fifty-eight years ago this week, are shown in these pictures. Old engine company No. 8, located then as now in Archer avenue near State street, is shown above at the left. The center picture above is of engine company No. 16, then and now located at 31st and Dearborn streets. The third man from the left of those seated is Frank Butterfield, and the other members of the company are unidentified. The members of engine company No. 9, then at 26th street and Cottage Grove avenue, are shown above at the right. They have been identified by one of their own number, George A. Leady, who now lives at 5530 South Bishop street. Seated, left to right: Mr. Leady, engineer; Joseph Herger, engineer; James Walsh, captain; Charles Curtis, lieutenant; Matt Kershon, driver. Standing: James Riley, driver; J. Fogelstrom, pipeman; Chris Goodwin, pipeman; James Cudahy, pipeman. Below, at the left, is Mr. Leady as he appears today (Frank Fournier photo). The other picture is of engine company No. 21, then at 14 Taylor street and now at 3444 Rhodes avenue.

Geo. Leady Recalls Great Fire.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

The great Chicago fire, the 58th anniversary of which will take place on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, spoiled George Leady's night off.

"It was about eleven o'clock that Sunday night," says Mr. Leady, "when a policeman called at my house on South Park avenue and 27th street and said the whole city was on fire. My wife, whom I had married just the year before, didn't see me again for three days."

Mr. Leady, who lives at 5530 South Bishop street, is one of the nine surviving veteran firemen who fought in the historic blaze of 1871 that licked up 18,000 buildings, cost nearly 300 lives, and left 100,000 persons homeless. He and his wife, who is still living, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary nine years ago.

A Chicagoan 84 Years.

Mr. Leady, born in Chicago 84 years ago, in a house at Harrison and State streets, is the son of a Chicago fireman. George Leady joined the department in 1867 and remained in the service until 1907. During those forty years he fought many a blaze, including the World's Fair fires, but his memories are keenest concerning what was perhaps the most devastating conflagration in history.

"Well," recalls Mr. Leady, "when the policeman told me we were in for something out of the ordinary in the way of fires, I took a car as far as Taylor street and went into the No. 21 house and asked where my Engine company, No. 9 was. I was told it was over on the west side. There was no fire on the south side then. I found my company working on the mill at Canal street. The flames had jumped over from the burning barns and houses to the southwest and it was awful hot. Burning shingles and bits of lumber were flying through the air.

Another Version.

"The cause of the fire? You mean about Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicking over the lantern because she was being milked a second time to provide milk for punch? Well, there've been so many versions, but the fellows who were around while we were fighting the fire that night said the thing had started because of someone's cigar or pipe ashes—I don't believe there were any cigarets then—catching fire to the hay in the barn on De Koven street.

"The wind was so strong, the mill didn't last long. Then for a time we worked on a warehouse on Polk street. Later, we fought the flames in a school house on Harrison street. Then we were ordered to a church at Wabash and Congress.

"Between Michigan and Wabash avenues there was a brick house, and we concentrated on the frame house next to it. By doing so we saved the brick house. There were two girls living in that brick house that my wife and I knew—Emma and Christine Pohle. They're living now in Pittsburgh."

"No," corrected Mrs. Leady, "in Fort Wayne."

"We were ordered to the Goodrich dock and worked there until 11 o'clock next morning," continued Mr. Leady. "No. 9 and No. 13 were the last two companies to leave. The men on No. 13 were badly overcome. I helped them hitch up their horses. The horses acted fine, but the sparks striking their backs made them nervous and hard to hitch.

"We didn't have much to stop the

CHEER PLAN FOR 200 FOOT DRIVE ACROSS S. SIDE

Hyde Park Club Hears 55th St. Proposal.

A 200 foot superhighway on 55th street, from the lake to the western city limits, is a dream that Robert Seth Lindstrom, 5345 Kimbark avenue, a member of the Hyde Park Kiwanis club, has kept to himself, half hoping that some day it might come true.

At a meeting of the organization last week, however, he gave voice to that dream and was surprised to learn that the Hyde Park business men gathered there not only believed as he did but greeted the proposal with enthusiasm.

In order to construct the highway, Mr. Lindstrom said, it would be necessary to widen 55th street from Cottage Grove avenue to Lake Park avenue to 200 feet; widen the stretch of boulevard running through Washington park to 200 feet; eliminate the parkway running down the center of Garfield boulevard from South Park way to Western avenue, and widen and pave 55th street from Western avenue to the city limits.

Undaunted by Obstacles.

With these considerable obstacles pointed out, the enthusiasm of the listeners did not abate, and so Mr. Lindstrom continued to outline his dream.

"First," he told them, "we would try to obtain the construction of the highway by making the improvements which I have just pointed out. When that is done we could attempt to obtain an elevated highway. The double decked roadway would then be the longest, the widest, and the finest in the country."

The lower level, according to Mr. Lindstrom, would be used for street car, bus, and heavy traffic, while the upper level would be used for automobiles. His plans include the extension of the street car line from Cottage Grove avenue west through Washington park and west on Garfield boulevard to the city limits.

Extension of the street car line is necessary, he asserted, because there is now no through east and west car line between 47th street and 63d street.

Outlet for Outer Drive.

The contemplated highway, Mr. Lindstrom pointed out, would serve as an outlet for traffic at the south end of the outer drive, which is now being completed. If the highway were constructed, southwest motorists with business in the loop would be able to travel over the outer drive to where it meets with the highway and then west on the highway to the section in which he lives without having to stop once for traffic lights.

C. W. Hoff, president of the University State bank, 55th street and Ridgeland court, declared that a superhighway would be of inestimable value to the community. It would not only bring thousands of persons from the southwest territory to the outer drive, Jackson park and the new fine arts building, but it would also serve as an outlet for southeastern motorists to the west.

M. N. Lovewell, assistant engineer of the south park commission, stated that the commissioners would not oppose any general improvements. He pointed out that a definite need for the extension of the car line first would have to be shown, but the park board would probably not be against extending the project through Washington park if public welfare would benefit by such action.

Arche Club to Hear Rev. John T. Stone

"National Ideal" will be the subject of an address by the Rev. John Timothy Stone at a meeting of the Arche club next Friday at the Hotel Shoreland, 55th street and South Shore drive. The musical program will be furnished by the Parisian Ensemble, which is composed of Alan Carter, violin; Charles Kaminski, 'cello; Philip Warner, piano; Benjamin Butler, bass. Mrs. Milton Howard Mack, president, will be chairman of the meeting.

BRIDGE PAGEANT UNIFIES FOLK OF MANY NATIONS

Shows So. Chicago a Melting Pot.

The recent celebration that marked the opening of the new 106th street bridge meant something more than the fact that a $1,500,000 structure—the last word in bridge building—had come to span the Calumet river and link south side arteries with Indiana highways by a direct route. Important as was the dedication of the bridge that replaced its inadequate predecessor after a construction period of two years and a day, the event was also significant in that it provided a holiday which served to cement, as perhaps no similar occasion in the past, the district's great variety of nationalities in the bond of community spirit.

Residents of South Chicago, the east side and South Deering laid aside routine affairs for what, through the nature of the dedicatory parade, was a gala event emphasizing Americanization. By means of floats, there was portrayed more vividly than in any book of history the whole pageant of Chicago's progress from the days when Pere Marquette and Louis Joliet explored the Mississippi valley in Indian canoes to the present time.

The float bearing the queens of thirty nationalities was a feature which could hardly have been arranged in any other section of America, for in many instances the girls had been born in the countries whose peasant costume they wore.

Nationalities' Queens.

The girls appearing in this spectacle and the countries they represented were as follows:

Miss America, Miss Amber Johnson; Miss Calumet, Miss Dorothy Murray; Lithuania, Miss Katherine Simkus; Serbia, Miss Zorka Grahovac; Denmark, Miss Evelyn Madsen; Germany, Miss Edith Klopsch; Croatian, Miss Mary Bachich; Slovenian, Miss Mayme Sanko; Grecian, Miss Sophia Stamos; Italian, Miss Bernice Bartolomeo; Czecho-Slovakian, Miss Elise Vodak; Dalmatian, Miss Mildred Perkich; Moravian, Miss Emily Lejko; Swedish, Miss Virginia Schupp; Mexican, Miss Angelina Carrillo; Polish, Miss Sophie Koporunski; Norwegian, Miss Leora Johnson; Swiss, Miss Mary Slym; Belgian, Miss Odile Deneve; Irish Free State, Miss Frances King; Austrian, Miss Josephine Secrest; Holland, Miss Deborah Cornelisse; Irish, Miss Marion Brady; Luxemburg, Miss Eleanor Flick; English, Miss Valarie Collins; Hungarian, Miss Laura Steller; French, Miss Kathryn E. Creutz; Jewish, Miss Rose Berss; Roumanian, Miss Anna Gima; Scotch, Miss Jean Campbell; Magyar, Miss Gizella Butcher; Bulgarian, Miss Rose Szabo; Tyrolean, Miss Gertrude Ellinghausen.

Mrs. Mina Marie Rosenbach, Miss Helen Bending, and Mrs. Amy Brooke were hostesses for the thirty-three queens.

Long before the arrival of the colorful parade residents of the Calumet region affected by the new concrete bridge were on the scene waiting for the pageant forming at 87th street and Commercial avenue to appear.

Heart of Industrial Area.

The district is the center of waterway commerce, railroad transportation, steel making and allied industries, and the new bridge formed an elevation from which the evidences of these industries was spread out in panorama. The bridge itself was decorated, as were the streets along the line of march. In the waters beneath the bridge the U. S. S. Wilmette

Returns from World Tour; $1.50 Per Day

One day clad in dungarees and sweating among the "black gang" in a steamer's engine room, the next evening enjoying himself in the ship's salon, John Marshall, 23 year old University of Chicago graduate, spent twenty-one months of extremes in a trip around the world which ended last Tuesday night when he arrived in Chicago from New York.

Though a stowaway de luxe with dinner jacket, sports clothes, and knickers packed away, Marshall spent less than $1.50 a day in an itinerary zigzagging for 70,000 miles.

After receiving his Ph.B. in social science at the university in December, 1927, Marshall hitch-hiked his way across the continent to San Francisco and clambered aboard the Malolo, bound for Honolulu, by an unwatched gangplank. He confided his predicament to Richard Barthlemess, who was enjoying his honeymoon on board, and was befriended by the motion picture actor throughout the voyage. Honolulu he made the springboard for rambles through the South seas, Australia, and the East Indies. In the Fiji islands he was the guest of Ratupope, the most important chief in the region.

Reported Killed in China.

The likelihood of adventure in China lured him 1,000 miles up the Yangtze river on the M. V. I'Tu, a British gunboat, which became a target for Chinese troops near Ichang. Marshall was wounded in the hand by a bullet swerving off the side of the vessel. He was later reported killed when reports of the death of a missionary at the hands of bandits were confused with an account of his own adventures.

After returning to Shanghai, he made for the Manchurian war area, narrowly escaping death in Hailar when a nationalist sentry, who mistook him for a Russian, swung the butt of his rifle across Marshall's hip, and when the student resisted, pressed the point of his bayonet against Marshall's coat. An officer intervened and Marshall was released.

Bums a Flight to London.

At Manchuli he mingled with a group of 400 Russians who were being deported in ox carts by the Chinese troops and crossed the Siberian border. Equipped with a soviet pass, he found no difficulty in making his way about Chita, Baikal lake, and the eastern Siberian region and finally reached Moscow. At Berlin, the German Lufthansa, impressed with his offer of publicity, piloted him to England in one of its planes.

Throughout his trip he was overwhelmed with the hospitality of acquaintances who were struck by his story. He now plans to write a book recounting his experiences. He is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Associated Woodlawn Clubs to Hear Bankers

FATHER PEREZ' EVENING SCHOOL STARTS CLASSES

Classes of the Father Perez Community Evening school, which is sponsored by the Father Perez council, Knights of Columbus, started Monday evening in the council's clubhouse, 67th and May streets. The one hour class with which the 24 week course was inaugurated was that in problems of modern foremanship.

The schedule of classes includes public speaking for Tuesdays, business arithmetic for Wednesdays, elementary commercial law for Thursdays, and composition of business letters for Fridays. All classes are held from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m.

John Bain, well known south side banker and a member of the south park commission, donated $1,200 to the project, while the members of the Calumet council, Knights of Columbus, voted a fund which will be used to pay the tuition of five young men.

CIVIC OPERA CLUB OF SOUTH SHORE SEEKS MEMBERS

Mrs. William J. O'Brien, 6345 Crandon avenue, will be chairman of the membership drive of South Shore Civic Opera club, starting tomorrow. Residents of the community from 67th to 83d streets and from Stony Island avenue to the lake, are eligible for membership to the club.

The club, organized during the summer, already has a membership of about one hundred. Three hundred members is the maximum desired. Juniors from the seventh grade up through the senior high school are admitted to the programs without charge.

The first program of the club was held two weeks ago and the next is scheduled for Oct. 28. The membership drive is being held in conjunction with music week and civic opera week.

Gala Opening for 71st Street Paving Monday

Seventy-first street, from Cottage Grove avenue to Stony Island avenue, will be open to south side motorists tomorrow. City and county officials as well as members of sixteen local civic organizations will take part in the ceremonies which will mark the dedication and opening of the new street.

At 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon a ribbon will be cut at 71st street and Stony Island avenue, and at 3:30 o'clock another ribbon will be cut at 71st street and Cottage Grove avenue. At 5 o'clock a parade will form at 71st and State streets, and will march on 71st street to Jeffery avenue. The parade will consist of a long line of decorated automobiles entered by the merchants of the community.

Plans Better Business Drive.

In connection with the opening of the new street, members of the Chatham Chamber of Commerce and members of the South Woodlawn Chamber of Commerce will stage a better business drive, which will start tomorrow and continue throughout the week.

According to Eugene Mooney, president of the South Woodlawn organization and chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the street opening parade, members of both organizations hope to acquaint residents in the territory with the quality of the neighborhood stores. He pointed out that the merchants in the community can furnish the people in that section with every home or personal need.

Streets to Be Decorated.

Streets throughout the Eighth ward will be decorated with flags and bunting, while placards placed in the windows of the neighborhood stores will tell the residents of the section about the drive. Sales will be held by the local merchants. Max Frank, one of the leading merchants in the community, is chairman of the committee in charge of the drive. He is assisted by Harry Dorrigan and Jack Waxman.

The opening of the new street tomorrow will mark the successful culmination of a three year battle on the part of the members of the Stony Island Business Men's association, headed by William J. Hubrich, president, to obtain the widening and paving of the thoroughfare.

Mr. Hubrich pointed out that the widening of 71st street will open a new traffic artery from Western avenue to the lake and will relieve congested traffic conditions on many of the other cross town streets.

Fourth Ward Rezoning Up Before Committee

Property in two parts of the Fourth ward would be rezoned according to ordinances submitted to the city council recently by Ald. B. A. Cronson. The west side of Indiana avenue between 48th street and the alley south of 47th street, and the east side of South Parkway between 48th street and a line 400 feet south of 47th street would be changed from apartment to commercial districts. The ordinances will be taken up by the city council committee on buildings and zoning.

O'NEILL VS. BARR TO BE HOTTEST SENATE BATTLE

Preliminaries Set Pace for State.

Chicago and its suburbs have ringside seats for the most exciting fight now in the cards for the next legislative primary, the battle of State Representative Lottie Holman O'Neill to wrest from that veteran, Senator Richard J. Barr, his seat in the upper chamber of the general assembly.

RICHARD J. BARR.

Nowhere else in the state is there anything like such a fight forecast. Those who love a good scrap are praying that it will remain a "two man" affair; that there will be no added starters to confuse the lines; and the two contestants are said to be telling their friends that they want nothing better than a straightaway contest to a finish without complications.

Mrs. O'Neill, the first woman member of the Illinois assembly, lives in Downers Grove, in Du Page county, which borders Cook county on the west. Senator Barr, who already has served twenty-seven years, resides in Joliet. That is in Will county, lying below Du Page and extending around the southern end of Cook. Together thy constitute the Fifty-first district. Both are heavily Republican and the winner of the nomination of that party is considered as good as elected.

Preliminaries Set Pace.

The primary is not until next April, but heavy preliminaries for this go are already in progress, setting the pace for the rest of the state. Only the odd numbered of the fifty-one districts in the state elect senators next year. Sixteen of the twenty-six are in Cook county, where only restrained organization battling is looked for. In the downstate odd numbered districts there is no promise of a thrill approaching a political death grapple except the woman vs. man match in the Forty-first.

Even those who predict a tough—if not an impossible—tussle for Mrs. O'Neill give her credit for immense courage. Her first election to the lower house came in 1922. Since then she has been reelected three times for the regular two year term. In her four regular sessions she has won recognition as a scrapper for her pet measures, the chief of which has been the women's eight hour bill, but many of her fellow members were amazed when Lottie announced recently that she was ready to tackle Dick Barr.

Barr is considered a giant in the assembly. For several terms now he has been recognized as the boss of the senate, a place that he continued to hold, although sidetracked at the wish of Gov. Emmerson this year from his old honor of the presidency pro tempore. He also is considered a figure in state politics, he and his brother, George, having been discovered with Will county in their pockets in several campaigns.

Senate Race Harder Than House.

And Mrs. O'Neill isn't known as a giant killer. While she did win a place in the lower house four times running, members of that chamber have two practical advantages that do not occur in connection with contests for senate seats. First, each of the friends of a candidate for the house may cast as many as three votes for him. A supporter of a senatorial aspirant can give hi monly one vote. Second, the senatorial district committee of each party may limit its nominees for the house to two, or even one. If the Democrats nominate only one in the Forty-first district and the Republicans only two, the primary settled the election except for the rare danger of an independent candidacy.

Preliminaries Are Setting Pace for State.

In her four successes Mrs. O'Neill admittedly was the beneficiary of extensive cumulative voting or "plumping," the women of her district particularly giving her their three votes for the lower house. Since this three-vote power may be used to give one vote to each of three candidates, or one and one-half votes for each of two candidates, or three votes for one candidate, it is impossible to compute with mathematic accuracy the actual number of voters who marked for her in any of her four primaries or elections, and therefore to some extent might be expected to go along with her against Senator Barr. But some wiseacres contend that the returns show that Barr consistently has had more of the district's voters supporting him than she has had behind her.

Barr's Influence a Factor.

The next question that the district experts are mulling over in the cool of the autumn evenings is whether any great majority of those who supported Mrs. O'Neill for the lower house will carry on when it means an immense, direct loss to the district if Barr is retired and replaced by a senator who cannot be expected to exert anything like his influence at the state house. This, it is argued, would be especially true if his successor were to be a woman.

For many years Barr has been able to get for the counties of his district more than their normal share of state administration favor. An outstanding example of this is the new Stateville penitentiary with its extensive pay roll and substantial purchasing. But an even more notable proof of the senator's ability is pointed out in the roads built in his territory. He not only had a big mileage for the home folks included in both the $60,000,000 and $100,000,000 bond issue plans, but he also contrived to have them built while other districts were awaiting for the fulfillment of concrete promises.

Charge He Played with Small.

To accomplish these results for his district, his critics charge he played in with the administration during the eight years of Len Small in the state house. While Small may have held off some moves for which he could not win Barr's advance approval, it is said that the Joliet senator never attempted to array his strength in the senate against any Small legislative project.

That Barr could have wrecked the Small legislative program more than once is conceded by his closest friends and they also admit that it was his adroitness that frequently saved administration measures when the hostiles went after them hot and heavy.

This coöperation and sympathy with the man defeated by Emmerson last year, including his support of Small in the primary, probably will constitute a considerable part of Mrs. O'Neill's campaign material; but the whispered answer of the Barr supporters will be that he did it to get things for the district and that he got them.

Another line of attack from Mrs. O'Neill probably will be directed at the public utilities. She already has predicted that these interests will spend a large sum to retain Barr in the senate and to defeat her because of her advocacy of measures favored by labor.

Possible Third Entrant.

The one possibility of a third entrant in this race is said to be the fact that State's Attorney Hjalmar Rehn of Will county is none too friendly toward Barr and is said to have been urged to back a candidate for the senate against him. So far as is known the Rehn forces have not agreed to back Mrs. O'Neill, but the political sages say that the entry of a Rehn choice would aid her materially.

But there is one complication in the O'Neill-Barr contest that is considered already a factor. Last year at the Republican national convention at Kansas City Mrs. O'Neill was the Deneen choice for national committeewoman to succeed Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, then the nominee for the post of congressman-at-large to which she was elected in November. Mrs. McCormick was a large factor in breaking a caucus deadlock which resulted in the election of Mrs. Bertha Baur to the committeeship with Deneen's consent.

Fast February, in the early days of this year's session of the legislature, Mrs. O'Neill issued a press statement attacking Speaker Shanahan because he refused her the chairmanship of the committee on education, which she had requested. She charged that his decision was dictated by Mrs. McCormick and Gov. Emmerson, and she attacked Mrs. McCormick in strong terms. Later both Speaker Shanahan and Mrs. McCormick said the latter had not had a ward to say about Mrs. O'Neill's committee assignments.

Thus, while she never has gone through the formality of joining his organization, Mrs. O'Neill is considered a supporter of Deneen in his contest with Mrs. McCormick, who has announced herself as a candidate for the United States Senate. This may, it is said, have the effect of swinging Senator Barr into somewhat more open support of Mrs. McCormick than otherwise might have been expected from a man careful to keep his own lines free from tangles.

Whether the Emmerson forces will take a hand in Will and DuPage counties has not been disclosed. It is understood that Gov. Emmerson wanted to see Barr retired as president pro tem of the state senate in order that the public might be convinced that the state house had changed hands. But so far as is known there has been no real breach between the governor and the senator.

While the governor, it is said, might have a freer hand in the legislature if Barr were gone, the gossip goes on to say that he recognizes that Barr's policy always has been to "go along with the adminstration in power," and for that reason it is believed he will not actively aid an effort to oust him. Reelection of Barr, it is pointed out, is almost certain to insure the retention of a friendly control of the senate.

On the other hand, there is the memory of Mrs. O'Neill's attack on the governor while he was asserting and reiterating his hands-off policy toward strictly legislative matters. Therefore—as well as for other reasons—it is said, he will not seek to promote Representative O'Neill to the senatorship. While he may not object to his friends taking sides, say those who know him, it is expected he will take no personal part in the fight.

"Mobilizing Religion for International Peace" is the subject of a sermon to be preached by Dean Shailer Mathews of the divinity school of the University of Chicago at this evening's services at the Normal Park Baptist church, 70th street and Stewart avenue.

BOARD APPROVES $96,000 PAVING FOR 123D STREET

Paving of 123d street between Halsted street and Ashland avenue at a cost of $96,000 was ordered recorded as approved by Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, following a public hearing recently despite the objection of property owners that the value of their holdings did not warrant an expenditure of money for an improvement.

After the board had voted the project safely through the hearing, however, residents promised to file a petition within 30 days to stop the improvement. Another paving job, eight water supply pipe systems, and a sewer project were approved at the hearing without objections.

Water pipe systems for the following streets were approved: Anthony avenue, between Jeffery avenue and 87th street, costing $9,754; Longwood drive, between Hopkins place and Weston place; Howland and Hunt avenues, between Longwood drive and Pleasant avenue, costing $6,750; 89th street, between South Park and Indiana avenues, at a cost of $3,462.

Tripp avenue, between 57th and 58th streets, costing $2,247; 121st place, between State street and Michigan avenue, costing $1,675; Carpenter street between 91st street and a line 299 feet south, costing $958; 108th street, between Racine avenue and a line 432 feet east of Throop street, costing $620; Fairfield avenue, between 110th and 111th streets, costing $612.

$576,300 FOR IMPROVEMENTS ON SOUTH SIDE

Court Approves Paving for Indiana Avenue.

Paving of Indiana avenue between 85th and 95th streets at an estimated cost of $220,000 heads the list of projects in south side wards for which assessment rolls were recently confirmed by the County court. The board of local improvements will advertise for bids on the job within a few days, and the contractor will probably complete the work next spring. An asphalt pavement will be laid.

A total of $576,300 of south side improvement work was confirmed by the court, permitting the board to award contracts on six paving jobs and two sewers constituting that amount.

Additional Projects.

In addition to paving the mile and a quarter on Indiana avenue, the board will award a contract for paving the following streets at a cost of $106,000; Carpenter street between 106th and 107th streets; Aberdeen and May streets between 105th and 107th streets and 106th street between Morgan street and Racine avenue. A sewer will also be installed as part of the work.

Other paving contracts to be awarded include jobs on Maplewood avenue between 63d street and Marquette road and 66th street between Western avenue and Rockwell street at a cost of $82,000; Marshfield avenue between 92d and 93d streets; 92d street between Marshfield and Beverly avenues; 93d street between Ashland and Beverly avenue, costing approximately $38,000; an asphalt pavement on 66th street between Eberhart and South Park avenues, costing $15,800; and paving Loomis street between 89th and 90th streets, costing $22,000.

Sewer Projects Approved.

A sewer in the following streets will cost $82,000: Torrence avenue between 126th and 130th streets; Saginaw, Marquette, Manistee, and Muskegon avenues between 126th and 128th streets; 126th street between Saginaw and Muskegon avenues; 127th street between Torrence and Escanaba avenues, and 128th street between Saginaw and Manistee avenues.

Mission Club to Meet.

"Our Church and Significant Happenings Among Presbyterain Women" will be the subject of an address by Mrs. Lincoln M. Coy at a meeting of the Mission Study club of the First Presbyterian church Thursday in the social rooms of the church, 64th street and Kimbark avenue.

POSSIBLE SITES FOR SOUTH SHORE PARK ANNOUNCED

Chamber of Commerce Prepares List.

In reply to a request of George T. Donoghue, superintendent of south parks, the South Shore chamber of commerce has prepared a list of possible sites for the location of the contemplated South Shore park and playground, which was authorized in the recent $15,000,000 bond issue.

According to Mr. Donoghue the south park commissioners require an area between five and ten acres for any park which they have under their supervision. Under the terms of the bond issue the appropriation of $400,000 is the maximum amount available for the acquisition of the park. This amount does not permit the purchasing of property which has any improvements on it.

Possible Sites Selected.

The parks and playground committee of the chamber of commerce, which is headed by George W. Arnold, held a meeting recently, at which the following sites were suggested as the most practical and most suitable for the contemplated south shore park: the block of property between Jeffery and Euclid avenues and 76th and 77th streets, which is now used for a building materials yard; the vacant property between 74th and 75th streets and from the Baltimore and Ohio tracks east, and the two blocks of property between Yates and Crandon avenues and 82d and 23d streets.

Mr. Arnold pointed out that his committee has made a survey of several large tracts of unimproved property in the district. He said that the committee had been handicapped because of the dense population.

District Is Populous.

"It is, of course, in the midst of this large population," Mr. Arnold said, "where the proposed park should be located so that it will be of maximum benefit and serve the purpose for which it was intended. However, if we cannot acquire as large a tract of land as we hope for, we will try to convince the commissioners that they should be satisfied with a slightly smaller tract."

According to Mr. Arnold, the suggestions made by his committee as to the best site for the contemplated south shore park will be taken up at the next meeting of the south park board.

South Central Lions Club Tours Canal and Locks

Fifty business men who are members of the South Central Chicago Lions club departed Tuesday from the La Salle street bridge for a sixty mile boat trip in the Robert R. down the sanitary district canal. The group left the boat at Lockport and proceeded by buses to inspect the locks at Dresden island and Brandon road. They returned to Chicago by train.

WOMEN VOTERS' LEAGUES SEEK NEW MEMBERS

After Prize Offered by State Organization.

A drive for new members is being instituted this month among all the local leagues of women voters in competition for the increased membership prize to be awarded at the November meeting of the Illinois league.

A tea at the home of Mrs. Walter Anderson, 9844 Avenue J, launched the membership drive of the Gateway league Friday afternoon. Mrs. Alfred O'Connor, education chairman, discussed the public school situation in Chicago, and interesting reports of the work of the league in Cook county were given by Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. James Mathie, both Gateway delegates to the Cook County council.

Officers of Gateway League.

Officers of the Gateway league are: Mrs. William Krick, president; Mrs. James Mathie, first vice president; Mrs. A. Koepke, second vice president; Mrs. George Hedges, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. McGorem, recording secretary; Mrs. N. Bohling, treasurer, and Mrs. William Rowan, assistant treasurer.

Chairmen of standing committees of the league are: Mrs. Flora Jenson, child welfare; Mrs. Walter Anderson, Cook county affairs; Mrs. J. Durst, living costs; Mrs. James Mathie, international coöperation to prevent war; Mrs. L. Peterson, social hygiene; Mrs. T. H. Beran, city affairs; Mrs. Emma Koepke, program and local affairs; Mrs. George Hedges, publicity; Mrs. Alfred O'Connor, education.

Flossmoor League Starts Year.

The Flossmoor league is holding its first meeting of the season next Tuesday afternoon, probably at the home of the president, Mrs. J. G. Ford, Dunsmuir Lane, Flossmoor. According to Miss Adelaide Wells, publicity chairman, heads of the various departments of the league's work will be chosen then. Officers of the league, besides Mrs. Ford, are: Mrs. Edward L. Murfey, first vice president; Mrs. W. Peasley, second vice president; Mrs. Lyle Harper, recording secretary; Mrs. F. Condon, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. P. F. Hawley, treasurer.

A luncheon and afternoon meeting Wednesday will open the season for the Sixth Ward League of Women Voters. Dr. Hazel Dale is in charge of arrangements for the luncheon, which will be held at 12:15 o'clock, and Mrs. J. Scott Matthews, vice president of the league, and Mrs. W. W. Ramsey will speak.

Other officers of the league are: Mrs. William Rothmann, president; Mrs. Henry B. Colby, vice president; Mrs. Charles Hibbard, recording secretary; Mrs. Lynn Stiles, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Whittier, treasurer, and Mrs. J. C. Brush, assistant treasurer.

South Shore League to Meet.

The South Shore league is holding the first of its regular luncheon meetings at the new headquarters in the Bryn Mawr Community church, 70th and Jeffery avenue, Thursday at 12:45 o'clock. Following the luncheon, the half hour class in citizenship, an innovation in this year's program, will be conducted by Mrs. W. A. Roberts, president of the Forum of the League of Women Voters, who will speak on "Your Advantage—My Advantage—The New Cook County League." Mrs. R. W. Treadway, state organization chairman, will then speak on the subject, "Major League Facts in a Nutshell."

Southwest League Ready to Start.

The activities of the Southwest league begin Friday with a luncheon at the Trinity Methodist church, 99th street at Winchester avenue. Mrs. W. W. Ramsey will speak on "The League in Action in the Neighboring States," folowing which Mr. Noble Lee will discuss the judicial election in November.

Officers of the league are: Mrs. William Bethke, president; Mrs. Hugo Diemer, vice president; Miss Helen Thayer, secretary, and Mrs. H. C. Newton, treasurer.

The Hyde Park league's drive to double its membership starts this week when Mrs. Samuel B. Shirk, vice president and membership chairman, sends out personal letters inviting women of the neighborhood to become members. On Oct. 14 a meeting and tea at 2 p. m. at the Hyde Park Baptist church, 5600 Woodlawn avenue, will initiate new members and old into the autumn activities of the league. Sidney Gorham, a former president of the Chicago Bar association and attorney for the citizens' committee on the traction question, and Prof. Paul Douglas of the University of Chicago, will discuss the local traction situation.

Campaign Against Crime.

The Hyde Park women are again planning to coöperate with the Chicago Crime commission, the local police department, the Hyde Park Lions, and the Fifty-fifth Street Business Men's association in the campaign against crime, by which they succeeded in routing several gangs of pickpockets and bootleggers from the district last year. In connection with the campaign August Vollmer, the famous police chief of Berkeley, Cal., now lecturing at the University of Chicago, will discuss modern police methods with reference to local crime conditions at a meeting of the league in December.

Officers of the Hyde Park league include Mrs. Eric W. Stubbs, president; Mrs. Samuel Shirk, vice preseident and membership chairman; Mrs. George G. Bogert, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Merle C. Coulter, recording secretary; Mrs. George N. Simpson, treasurer.

Directing League's Activities.

Chairmen of committees directing the league's activities are Mrs. Walter Lichtenstein, program; Mrs. Karl J. Holzinger, social; Mrs. Edgar B. Tolman Jr., finance; Mrs. Elmer Donahue, publicity.

Representatives on state departments and committees include Mrs. George W. Swain, child welfare; Mrs. Lewis Miller, education; Mrs. Douglas Waples, social hygiene; Mrs. Forrest Kingsbury, efficiency in government; Mrs. A. W. Hobson, legal status of women; Mrs. Fred Law, living costs.

Delegates of the Cook county council are Mrs. Herbert Smith, for Cook county government; Mrs. Egbert G. Jacobson, for sanitary district affairs; and Mrs. Lewis Miller, for Chicago schools.

Members of the league prominent in the Illinois league are Mrs. William E. Lewis, second vice president; Mrs. Quincy Wright, assistant to the president and editor of the Illinois league magazine; and Dr. Rachel Yarros, chairman of the committee on social hygiene.

Serving as directors of the Cook county league are Mrs. Lewis Miller, chairman of the committee on education; Miss Julia Stebbins, organization secretary, and Mrs. Eric Stubbs, chairman of the president's group. Mrs. George Curtis is fourth regional director of the National League of Women Voters.

KIMBARK NAMED FOR FOE OF LAKE FRONT GRABBERS

Honors 1st South Park Commissioner.

This article is the seventeenth of a series on the origins of the names of streets and suburbs of the south side.

One of the three original south park commissioners, who with them were responsible for locating Jackson park, Washington park and the Midway where they are now, Seneca D. Kimbark, is remembered in the name of a street in that section, Kimbark avenue, which runs from 1300 East 47th street south to 94th street.

He came to Chicago in 1853 from New York state, where he was born in 1832, and connected with the firm of E. G. Hall & Co., wholesale iron merchants, becoming junior partner, then senior partner, and finally sole owner.

Made Business Thrive.

His business acumen is testified to by the fact that the company which did a $250,000 business when he joined it thirty years later, in spite of the Chicago fire, which taxed it heavily, did a $1,500,000 business.

In Moses and Kirkland's "History of Chicago," 1895, is written in connection with his choice in 1869 of the faraway park sites: "He possessed at once the intimate knowledge of the city's needs and an abiding faith in Chicago's future. His fellow commissioners were Chauncey T. Bowen and James H. Rees. . . . Some hostile criticism was incurred from those who considered the site chosen as being entirely too far south, but Chicago's history has demonstrated the wisdom of the commissioners' action."

Grasping Policy Roused Him.

The controversy raging during his lifetime over the ownership of the lake front and the alleged grasping policy of certain corporations roused him to action, opposing every form of encroachment on the territory which he believed belonged to the people.

BOY SCOUTS PLAN CITY-WIDE DRIVE FOR MEMBERSHIPS

Plans for the citywide achievement campaign of Boy Scouts were outlined by Scout Executive E. Urner Goodman and Field Director Theodore Shearer at a recent meeting of the 46 Scoutleaders of the southwest district at the Hamilton park field house.

The campaign, which is similar to the Scout round-up of last year, is to have as objectives increase in Scout membership, improvement in uniforming and appearance, and participation in the troop rating plan. A new inducement for Scouts to advance in rank is the advancement coup button to be given all Scouts who pledge to advance during the campaign and who fulfill their pledges. A membership coup button will reward those Scouts who recruit new members, and all new tenderfoot Scouts will receive gold tenderfoot pins.

Troops as a whole will receive recognition of their participation in the campaign in the form of an Indian coup stick given by the Chicago council.

Scout executives of the southwest district who signified their intention of supporting the campaign were R. M. Bennett of the troop organization committee, Field Executive Fred B. Frizell, and Scoutmaster H. E. Palm. Mr. Palm and Mr. Frizell were among the new officers of the district Scoutleaders' association elected at the meeting. Mr. Palm is president; Mr. Frizell, secretary, and other officers are H. C. Johnson, vice president; C. G. Arnold, treasurer, and E. H. Goebel, R. S. Thomas, William Schumacher, and D. B. Smythe, directors.

SISTERHOOD OF ISAIAH TEMPLE PLANS BAZAAR

Activities of the Sisterhood of the Temple Isaiah Israel, 5035 Greenwood avenue, will be launched Wednesday afternoon at a meeting in the community house. Following a program by Michael Wilkomirski, Polish violinist, Dr. Gerson B. Levi, rabbi of the temple, will speak.

Coöperation among members of the congregation is being sought to make the bazaar which the sisterhood is planning an unqualified success. Mrs. Fred Ascher, general chairman of the affair, urges that all contributions either of personal services or of goods to be sold be made as soon as possible, since the bazaar is planned for Nov. 12 and 13. Proceeds of the bazaar, which is to be held at the Chicago Beach hotel, will be devoted to building a new temple house.

Members of the sisterhood are already enrolling in the Current Events class, which will meet in the community house under the direction of Mrs. Edward J. Fleming on the second Wednesday of each month, beginning Oct. 9. Mrs. Robert P. Frank, 5505 Everett avenue, will be in charge of the class.

Ellis, Lake Park Avenues to Be Closed to Trucks

Ellis and Lake Park avenues between 35th and 39th streets will be reserved for passenger vehicles, according to an ordinance passed recently by the city council. The ordinance, which was sponsored by Ald. Robert R. Jackson [3d] prohibits heavy trucks from using the streets.

Main Entrance to New Two Million Dollar Hyde Park-Kenwood National Bank Building

A THOUSAND is the population of a fair sized town. And yet in HYDE PARK in ONE BANK in ONE WEEK—1,000 new savings accounts were opened.

And the average initial deposit was not the usual $1.00 per account—but $25.00—a high average for so large a number.

And what does this mean? First, it shows that the savings account is still the most popular investment; second, it indicates a high level of general prosperity; third, it indicates that, in the territory it serves, the Hyde Park-Kenwood National Bank is the most popular bank.

111TH ST. Y.M.C.A. READY TO PLAY ITS OWN SERIES

Every New Member Will Count as Run.

A young world's series is announced by the 111th street Y. M. C. A. in connection with a big membership campaign for the same time the Cubs are fighting the Athletics.

Every new and renewal member brought in during the period Oct. 8 to 15 counts as a run and those paying their memberships in full count as home runs.

Three box seats at the world's series games in Wrigley park, provided the Cubs and Athletics meet for a second time in Chicago, are offered by Ald. Sheldon Govier as prizes to the local players bringing in the most "runs." Two new league baseballs autographed by Cub stars will be given the best batters each night of the series.

Nine Star Players.

Ald. Govier has accepted the place of Commissioner of Baseball Landis for the "Y" teams. Tom Waller McCarthy is manager of the Cubs team in this series, and Jim Snyder Mack is manager of the Athletics. Nicholas Wiersema Klein is umpire at home plate and A. A. Andersen Moriarity is base umpire.

Under each manager are nine "star players" for his team. Both "star pitchers" have a string of other pitchers under him. Over a hundred players will thus compete in the contest.

The player who brings in the most runs each day will, according to announcement, be crowned "home run king" and have his picture taken in uniform and put up for all to admire. The Thure Johnson loving cup will be presented to the player who brings in the most runs during the series. The championship pennant will hang over the side in the lead each night.

The games at which scores will be reported will be held Oct. 8, 9, 11, 14, and 15. Every participant in this world's series from the commissioner down to each player has signed a contract to appear and play every game scheduled. The goal is 250 new members.

Here Are "Star" Players.

Among the "star players" will be:

Athletics—Frank Johnson, 11231 Wallace street [Pitcher Groves]; Eugene Dykstra, 10610 Lafayette avenue [Pitcher Walberg]; Tunis Dekker, 10744 Lafayette avenue [Pitcher Earnshaw]; William Walsh, 252 West 112th street [Catcher Mittox]; Ralph Flattum, 110 West 112th street [Shortstop McNair]; Harry Wallin, 11218 Parnell avenue [Third Baseman Miller]; J. L. Helland, 10940 Michigan avenue; Edward Menke, 41 West 112th place [Left Fielder Simmons]; Dr. R. C. Libberton, 11431 Michigan avenue [coach]; Al Martinelli, 4 East 111th street [First Baseman Foxx]; E. Combs, 4 East 111th street [Center Fielder Lebourveau]; Ed Poole, 11245 Normal [Second Baseman Morse].

Cubs—Kenneth Selby, 11141 Union avenue [Pitcher Root]; John Dekker, 2 West 111th place [Pitcher Bush]; Karl Burg, 235 West 110th street [Pitcher Blake]; Carl J. Ryden, 12037 La Salle street [Catcher Gonzales]; Dr. Yampolsky, 9944 State street [Second Baseman Hornsby]; H. Doerr, 11519 South Irving avenue [Third Baseman McMillan]; Pops Madderom, 4 East 111th street [Center Fielder Wilson]; Fred Saurbier, 4 East 111th street [First Baseman Tolson]; R. T. Rau, 10956 Michigan avenue [Right Fielder Heathcote]; Victor Beckman, 11311 Normal avenue [Right Fielder Stephenson]; E. F. Redding, 910 West 111th street [Shortsop English].

In directing the star players recently, Commissioner Govier said: "Take a firm grip on the bat, step up to the plate, and knock the cover off the ball."

Mooseheart Legion Party.

Members of the South Side chapter, No. 110, Women of Mooseheart Legion, held a card party Monday evening at the Viking temple, 69th street and Emerald avenue.

BIG THREE OF WORLD SERIES

*Roseland is to put on a world series at the same time as the feature at Wrigley field and Shibe park. Ald. Sheldon W. Govier (9th) is playing the part of High Commissioner Landis. # BOWEN SCHOOL FRESHMEN ARE GIVEN WELCOME

The various clubs of the Bowen High school extended a welcome to freshmen and other newcomers at a recent assembly in the school auditorium. Following a program by the Bowen band, Miss Clara Swanson introduced the speakers representing the clubs.

The purpose of the Fine Arts club was set forth by Edmund Teske, who emphasized the fact that freshmen are not only permitted but urged to become members. Philip Weck, editor-in-chief of the weekly, pointed out that reading the school paper was as much a part of school spirit as buying a football ticket.

System of Awards Explained.

The system of awards and medals of the Bowen Athletic association was explained by Thomas Clark, who explained that any sport in which enough students show an active interest will be organized by the association.

Miss Edith Johnson, attired in the costume worn by students in class, explained the new home nursing class, and Miss Julia Rowell represented the Book club. Philip Doolittle, associate editor of the Bowenite, asked wholehearted support of the year book.

Discuss Tau Pi Alpha.

Miss Margaret Schnuit discussed the Tau Pi Alpha society, explaining that it was not merely an honorary organization, but actively representative of school interests. The Girls' Letter club was represented by Miss Sylvia Zabka, who introduced each member. Miss Mary Alice Sargent discussed the organizations and funds sponsored by the Go-Getters. "Little Cotton Dolly" and "Kentucky Baby" spoke eloquently for the Glee club.

Study Chairman

MRS. BERNARD R. DAVIDSON.

LINCOLN CENTER CLASS TO STUDY VITAL SUBJECTS

The Lincoln center study class has been organized to promote discussion of subjects of vital import and to have such topics discussed under the guidance and leadership of scholars. It is a study class not with the objective of making grades or getting credits but purely for the purpose of widening the scope of its members' knowledge.

The initial course this season will be a series of ten lectures on "The Conflict Between Science and Religion" by Dr. E. A. Burtt, professor of philosophy, University of Chicago. The class will meet at 8:20 o'clock Tuesday evenings at Lincoln center, 700 Oakwood boulevard. The opening session will be held Oct. 15. Enrollment is invited and discussion is encouraged.

Mrs. Bernard R. Davidson, 5312 Drexel avenue, is chairman of the group.

Catholic Daughters Give Cabaret Party

Members of McHale Englewood court of Catholic Daughters of America attended a cabaret party Thursday evening at McHale club, 150 West 69th street. Miss Ina Fosbury served as general chairman of the affair and was assisted by Mrs. William Corrigan, Mrs. W. Devery, Mrs. Thomas Gordon, Mrs. Thomas Hackett, Mrs. Ernest Lynch, Mrs. C. Kelly, Miss Loretta Dundon, Miss Loretta Gordon, Miss Elizabeth Farrell, Miss Genevieve Harney, Miss Veronica Hasty, Miss Dorothy Hoerstel, Miss Lucille Jacques, Miss Martha Reagan, Miss Elizabeth O'Brien, and Miss Genevieve Walsh.

HYDE PARK HIGH, 58 YEARS OLD, RICH IN TRADITION

Grew from Advanced Work of Grammar School.

Hyde Park High school, one of the oldest in the city, sprang into being without any of the ceremony which has marked the dedication of later, far less conspicuous institutions of learning.

The great school of today, with its 4,000 students, its faculty of more than 125 teachers, and its thirty-odd student organizations, can be traced back to a few "advanced" courses introduced haphazard into the curriculum of Kenwood grammar school and left for years to be elected or not, as the individual student saw fit.

The Hyde Park school received its first impetus, oddly enough, the year of the great fire, when young Pliny N. Haskell, late of Amherst, became principal of Kenwood school. Prompted by the New England love of learning and being also, in modern parlance, a live wire, Haskell quickly saw to it that the village fathers provided an assistant instructor, especially fitted to teach in the "classical and other departments" then thought to appertain to higher education. By 1872 a new wing was added to the grammar school building, dignifying the high school with quarters of its own. In 1873 the further distinction of an alumni body was added when the first senior class, consisting of two women, graduated.

Modernized by Second Principal.

When Haskell resigned the principalship to take up law, the high school went on slowly developing, graduating classes of fewer than ten members, until the advent of William Henry Ray in 1883. The six years during which he was principal are significant in that he added to the backbone provided by Haskell a flesh-and-blood curriculum comparing favorably with that of any institution of the time. The earlier "classical departments" now resolved themselves into the more modern English, science, political economy, civics, and psychology such as are familiar to present high school students. The faculty had expanded to four, besides Mr. Ray, and in the fall of 1886 the school made the first of its momentous moves, leaving the old Kenwood building on Lake Park avenue, with its grammar school associations, forever behind.

The move and the subsequent death of Mr. Ray ended what may be termed the rural chapter of the school's history. Up to that time the school was united in what was almost a neighborhood spirit. Old Hyde Park families were represented, brother following brother.

A brief but interesting period in Hyde Park's development was the principalship of William McAndrew, which terminated after two brief years in his resignation. At this time the annexation of Hyde Park, then the largest village in the country, took place.

Formerly in Ray Building.

In 1893, again a year significant both to Chicago and to Hyde Park High, the school moved for the second time to the building now known as Ray grammar school, 57th street and Kimbark avenue. In keeping with the growth of the neighborhood following the annexation, graduating classes soon doubled and quadrupled, and the school began to assume its present aspect under the leadership of Charles W. French, the distinguished author and editor of "Lincoln the Liberator," "Rab and His Friends," and "Black Beauty." The faculty, which already included Miss Mary B. Herrick, English instructor; Miss Agnes Elizabeth Stuart, instructor in classical languages and late dean of girls, and Miss Florence E. Bigelow, art instructor, all three until recently active on the Hyde Park staff, numbered twenty-five. The students were beginning their club activities, the Ray Literary society, the Glee club, the Decorative Art society, as well as the older Agassiz association, and the Athletic association of fifty-one members, testifying to the many interests of the time.

Baseball Trophy of '84 Survivors.

Already Hyde Park has made a reputation for itself in athletics which it was to carry on with particular brilliance through the next decade. Banners in the assembly hall of the present building commemorate a victory of the baseball team in '84 and '85 and again in '86, the indoor games won by Capt. D. Trude, now Judge Daniel P. Trude, and his team, including R. Hamill, F. Warren, and B. Ford.

The new century was ushered by the most outstanding group of athletes ever produced in Chicago schools. The national championship football team, captained by Walter Eckersall, and including such men as Thomas Hammond, now vice president of the Whiting corporation, and Bud Fisher, cartoonist, was victorious against all opponents, and members of the team brought the school similar victories in baseball, basketball, and track.

Ralph Bard, the stock broker, president of the class of 1902 and captain of the 1902 football team, was another all-around athlete at the time. The 1921 city championship football team, the first to be coached by "Butch" Scanlan, the 1924 national championship track team captained by Kaare Krogh, and the 1922 national championship swimming team with Dick Howell and Russell Ward have done their part since in upholding the Hyde Park tradition.

Noted Sons in Journalism.

In journalism, besides the creator of "Mutt and Jeff," are Paul Scott Mowrer, who edited the Spectator in 1905, and Edgar Ansell Mowrer, class secretary, and Walter A. Strong, publisher of the Daily News. The Gilbert and Sullivan of Hyde Park High and later the founders of the Blackfriars at the University of Chicago were Frank Adams and Will Hough.

Maj. Reed Landis and Amelia Earhart are also claimed as graduates of Hyde Park, and Milton Sills and Mary Philbin are, of course, explained as part of the school tradition to each arriving freshman. There is a story that Mary Garden went to Hyde Park for a time, which no one likes to repudiate since it has not so far been disproved.

Principal Hiram B. Loomis is now beginning his twenty-fifth year as head of Hyde Park High school. During his principalship the school has moved into its present quarters and has doubled its enrollment several times. If the intimacy and informality of the old school have been sacrificed to the expansion of the new, plenty of school spirit is still to be found out on the football field, and Mr. Loomis feels certain that the traditions of Hyde Park High school are safe in the hands of the coming generation of students.

MRS. BERTRAM W. SIPPY.

[De Gueldre Photo.]

Mrs. Bertram W. Sippy, 5615 Woodlawn avenue, and Mrs. George W. Hall are co-chairmen of the committee in charge of arrangements for the annual card party, which is being given for the benefit of the South Side Child Guidance center, next Thursday afternoon in the ballroom of the Cooper-Carlton hotel, 53d street and Hyde Park boulevard.

$600,000 PAVING, SEWER JOBS UP TO BOARD FRIDAY

Give Property Owners Chance to Protest.

The city council chambers will again be visited by scores of south side property owners Friday morning when the board of local improvements will seek approval of more than $600,000 of paving, sewer, and sidewalk improvements at the third large public hearing this fall. In addition to the south side projects, the board will consider $1,127,400 of improvement contracts in other parts of the city.

Residents who would be assessed to bear the cost of the improvements have been notified to appear and make themselves heard if they object to the board's plans.

Plan to Widen Damen Avenue.

The largest project to be considered will be the paving and widening of Damen avenue between 33d street and Pershing road, the portion directly south of the river over which a bridge is under construction. The cost has been placed at $143,000, part of which would be borne by the city as a public benefit. The proposed roadway is 48 feet wide while the existing street is 30 feet.

The following system of streets in Chicago Lawn would be paved at a cost of $87,000: Knox and Kilpatrick avenue, between 53d street and Archer avenues; Keating avenue, between 53d street and 253 feet south, and 53d street, between Cicero avenue and the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad.

Drexel Project Up.

Drexel avenue would be paved between 55th street and 58th street at a cost of $52,500; Western avenue, paved and widened to 70 feet between 54th and 56th streets, costing $50,500; a system in Beverly Hills including Longwood drive from Weston place to Hopkins place, and Hopkins place, Howland avenue, and Hunt avenue between Longwood drive and Pleasant avenue, costing $49,000; and Racine avenue between 113th place and 115th street, costing $22,500.

A sewer with the main line in 98th street between Avenue N and Avenue G and having short branches in the surrounding blocks would cost $56,500; a sewer for the district at 52d street and Sayre avenue would cost $45,500; sewerage in Normandy avenue between 63d street and the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad, $9,000; and a large sewer system with the main line in Rutherford avenue, between 51st street and Archer avenue, $75,000.

Sidewalks on Ashland avenue between 35th street and the south branch of the river would cost $18,297.

RECALLS 1871 FIRE FANS' DASH TO DE KOVEN ST.

Veteran Chicagoan Tells of Refugees' Panic.

Most of Chicago's historic occasions have had an interested witness in Mrs. Jane Kahnweiler, 5209 Greenwood avenue, but she carries her 81 years in this strenuous city lightly. Although she recently celebrated her 81st birthday, she is as youthful in spirit as one of her daughters, and it is difficult to believe that she can have stories to tell of the fire of 1871 and other remote events.

MRS. JANE KAHNWEILER.

The Chicago fire, it seems, has always been in the nature of a family joke among the Kahnweiler clan.

"The night of the fire we had already gone upstairs," Mrs. Kahnweiler recounted. "It was about 11 o'clock and pretty soon we heard people running past our house, calling to each other and making a great hullaballoo. A neighbor rushed in and cried, 'There's a big fire over in De Koven street. You'd better come out and see.' I begged my husband to come with me, but he was sleepy and wouldn't stir outside the house. The streets were full of people and it was only about six blocks to the fire, so I went out by myself and watched the firemen for awhile. Our house was on Blue Island avenue between 11th and 12th streets, and if there hadn't been a strong west wind it would have been among the first to burn down, and then the joke would have been on my husband."

Describes Flight of Refugees.

Mrs. Kahnweiler's share of the difficulties caused by the fire came the day she took her mother to the depot.

"Mamma had been visiting me, and after the first she concluded that she had had enough of Chicago," Mrs. Kahnweiler said. "So we went down to the temporary station the Illinois Central had erected at 22d street. We passed refugees pulling three wheeled wagons, carrying bureaus without drawers, stoves with fire still burning in them, and odd pieces of clothing. They didn't seem to know where they were going or what they were doing. Tents lined the shore along the I. C. tracks and wagons from all parts of the city came down to the lake for water. When we reached the station we were horrified to find a line of soldiers guarding the entrance. We couldn't get through without a pass, and I don't think we would ever have got one but mother was a southerner, and so the commanding officer found it difficult to refuse her request."

All of Mrs. Kahnweiler's seven children were born in the Blue Island avenue house, and the oldest went to Clark school, built in 1865 and still in use. It was a long walk in those days because the car lines stopped at Harrison and Halsted streets. The opening of a car line on Blue Island avenue was good cause for rejoicing in the neighborhood.

Tribune Reader Since 1868.

Mrs. Kahnweiler is as much interested in present day Chicago as in the past, and she has more time to read the newspapers now, although she has been reading THE TRIBUNE regularly since 1868. She spoke enthusiastically of the coming world's fair.

"My husband was a stockholder in the fair of 1893," she said. "It was certainly the making of Chicago, but this fair will be so much more wonderful that there won't be any comparison. Why, just think of the changes since that time! We didn't have radios then, or airplanes, or automobiles. This one will be like fairyland."

Several of Mrs. Kahnweiler's children live near her, and at family parties there are thirty-three present; seven children, sixteen grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Sons of Mrs. Kahnweiler are: Alexander Kahnweiler, 6143 Ingleside avenue; Abe Kahnweiler, 6214 Broadway; Gus D. Kahnweiler, Madison Park hotel; Leo H. Kahnweiler, 340 East 53d street.

Mrs. Kahnweiler's daughter's are: Mrs. J. B. Lewy, Madison Park hotel; Mrs. Alfred C. Losb, 5203 Woodlawn avenue; and Mrs. Frank J. Nudelman, 5207 Greenwood avenue.

WOMAN'S BENEFIT GROUP TO MARK 37TH BIRTHDAY

Woman's Benefit association will celebrate its thirty-seventh birthday anniversary with a banquet in the grand ballroom of the Palmer house next Thursday night.

Mrs. John Fisher, 6348 South Park avenue, is in charge of arrangements and Mrs. Frank L. Foster, 808 Montrose boulevard, of the program. Mrs. George W. Miller, supreme president of the order, will be the honored guest of the evening.

One of the speakers of the evening will be Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, collector of internal revenue. Two other national officers who will be guests at the banquet and who will appear on the program are Miss Frances D. Partridge of Port Huron, the supreme secretary, and Mrs. M. Louis Hindricks, 4033 West Congress street, supreme treasurer.

LEGION POST'S FALL FESTIVAL CLOSES TONIGHT

Swells Building Fund of Jackson Park Group.

The first fall festival and celebration given by members of Jackson Park post, No. 555, of the American Legion, which opened on Sept. 27, will close tonight. The festival is being held at the southwest corner of 63d street and Dorchester avenue, and the profits derived will go towards the post's building fund. W. W. Adams is general chairman of the festival. He is assisted by other post officers, including Charles N. May, commander; Edward Schneider, senior vice commander; William T. Sloan, junior vice commander; Henry C. Theil, finance officer; William Powell, membership; Harry M. Clark, chairman of executive committee; Dr. Walter M. Coen, medical officer; Walter Totzel Jr., judge advocate; Frank Hannema, Harold Ingve, Franklin L. Pond, Joseph Franklin, Robert McNamara, George Curran, Harold Olson, John McMahon, Earl Hanna, Louis A. Waugh, Nils A. Nadin, Gus Wolff, Robert E. Manola, Thomas Dorsey, James Toole, Harry Silberman, Orville Cost, Carl Peterson and others.

The executive committee of the 33d Division War Veterans' association, meeting recently at the Hamilton club, decided to hold the annual reunion of the association on Saturday afternoon and evening, Nov. 16. The following were appointed to handle the event: Col. Walter J. Fisher, 108th Ammunition Train, chairman; Maj. Charles Schott, 108th Sanitary Train, vice chairman; Thomas G. Burns, 108th Field Signal battalion; the Rev. N. B. Clinch, 129th Infantry; Lieut. Edward Rosengren, 129th Infantry; Maj. Ernest V. Dickson, 132d Infantry; Col. Charles Roth, 108th Engineers; John Plattner, 108th Field Signal battalion; Thomas Killoran, 108th Ammunition Trains and Military Police; Maj. Frank O. Wood, 122d Field Artillery; Lieut. Byron B. Nelson, 123d Field Artillery; George J. Miller, 108th Ammunition Train; Emmett Harrington, 108th Ordinance; Ben W. Lawless, 124 Field Artillery; Capt. Herman H. Weimer, 131st Infantry; George E. Clarke, 122d Field Artillery.

Ben Lawless was appointed chairman of the banquet committee, and Col. Charles Roth, chairman of the publicity committee for the re-union.

Arrangements have been completed by Chicago Elevated post, No. 184, for a Columbus day party and dance to be given in the grand ballroom of Hotel Sherman Saturday evening, Oct. 12, it is announced by Commander George R. Apfel. This is the second annual event of this kind for "L" post. The dance held at the Hotel Sherman last year drew such a large attendance that it was necessary to secure the grand ballroom this year. Among the features of the program next Saturday evening will be dancing to music by a well known orchestra, entertainment numbers by radio, and stage stars and drawings for prizes. Proceeds from the dance will be used in the work of the post, which was one of 31 posts in Illinois to receive the certificate of meritorious service for increased membership this year.

At the last meeting of Naval post, No. 973, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Commander, Norm C. Olsen; senior vice commander, Charles Reynolds; junior vice commander, P. F. Brautigan; finance officer, P. K. Crawford; post surgeon, Dr. M. E. Healy; sergeant-at-arms, F. J. Mitchell; adjutant, George O. Speer; directors, K. E. Carroll and Herb Klein. Included in Naval post's schedule of winter activities is bowling. The post's own league will inaugurate its 1929-30 season tomorrow night. Membership in the league is open to all Naval post members.

Charles H. Kelsey, former adjutant of the American Furniture Mart Legion post, was elected commander at a post luncheon held Tuesday in the main parlor of the Furniture Club of America. Kelsey succeeds Wilson J. Killough. George McEwen was elected vice commander to succeed Frank S. Whiting. Other officers elected were: Adjutant, William F. Sullivan; finance officer, L. W. Foulk; judge advocate, James Mills, and sergeant-at-arms, Allen Bashara.

Roseland post, No. 49, will hold its annual meeting and election of officers Tuesday night. The present officers are: Ralph De Cook, commander; A. G. Lindell, senior vice commander; R. Von Meeteren, junior vice commander; Albert Price, finance officer; Peter De Vries, sergeant-at-arms; William Frew, chaplain; Cecil Smith, judge advocate, and A. J. Lindell, adjutant. In addition to the offices as indicated by this roster of the incumbents, a third vice commander will be elected for the coming year.

IT'S GIRLS' WEEK IN PHOTO CONTEST

AMATEUR PHOTOGS, HERE'S A CHANCE TO PROVE YOUR SKILL

What does your family do on a rainy day? Say it with photographs and win a prize in The Tribune's photo contest. Perhaps the youngsters turn the attic upside down and most likely the co-ed daughter curls up in a big chair with a book and a box of caramels. Maybe mother spends the day making cookies, but Jack and Tom will be off for a hike in hip boots and slickers.

Dull day photographs are an interesting problem to any amateur camera fan and doubly so with a chance to win some prizes. The Tribune will pay $5 for the best picture taken by an amateur. It will pay $3 for the second best and $2 for the third. All pictures must be taken in the Chicago area.

Address entries to Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section of The Tribune. The name and address of the photographer should be printed plainly on the back of the print as well as the names of all persons in the picture.

The contest is open only to amateurs and the editor will be the final judge. Theme, treatment, and clearness of the print will be taken into consideration. No pictures will be returned.

FADA RADIOS HAVE VIBRA CONTROL

OVER night . . . Vibra-Control has revolutionized radio reception . . . for the critical public has discovered that Vibra-Control brings new tone realism, reproducing programs exactly as broadcast, free from distortion, interference, rumbles, rain barrel tones and roars.

It was natural that Vibra-Control would be followed by a score of imitations; but it is hardly possible that an achievement that required years to perfect will or can be successfully duplicated in a few short weeks.

For your protection let us repeat... only Fada Radios have Vibra-Control... the secret of true tone realism.

BRIDGE PAGEANT UNIFIES FOLK OF 30 NATIONALITIES

Reveals South Chicago as Melting Pot.

had anchored to lend a naval touch to the proceedings.

The gathered throng had come from one of the greatest schools of the nation for molding conglomerate races into homogenous citizens of the United States. More than twenty national groups, speaking nearly sixty dialects, were represented. That rain interfered with the parade and ceremonies was one of those happenings beyond the committees' control.

Plans for the bridge dedication worked out by the East Side Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the South Chicago Chamber of Commerce and other organizations in the community sought in the parade to emphasize the outstanding feature of the Calumet region—Americanization.

Concerning the history of the bridge, Richard Bogelsack of the East Side Chamber of Commerce, cites that for years an old pontoon did service at the point until it became so rickety that it was almost impossible to swing it open and close it when opened.

Predecessor Fell Into River.

"Although everything possible was done to have the city put up a new bridge," says Mr. Bogelsack, "the community was simply ignored until one day when the bridge was swung open it dropped into the river. Then a ferry was put into service for several years until the city finally decided it had money enough to build a bridge at 106th street.

"A steel center pier structure was then erected which had to be operated by muscle or mule power. The amount of shipping going up the Calumet river increased by leaps and bounds by reason of the various industries along the bank such as the Keystone elevator, Federal Furnace company, Valley Mould company, Wisconsin Steel company, Rock Island freight depot, and By-Products of the Coke corporation.

"From year to year this bridge became a menace rather than a means of assisting transportation along the river. On account of its type of centerpier construction one-half of the navigable channel of the Calumet river was always obstructed and the bridge, being located just at a point where the river made a direct turn, vessels going through the draw continually bumped into it, with the result not only was the bridge out of service a great part of the time, but it soon was in such a bad state of repair that whatever money the city spent on such repairs was practically wasted. Shipping interests became enraged at the delays.

Finally Becomes Reality.

"Again came the necessity of replacing the old ramshackle excuse of a bridge with a modern structure, but we were given the excuse of 'no money.' Finally, when the East Side Chamber of Commerce was organized it went after everybody in city hall circles and had the bridge included in one of the bond issues submitted to the voters. With the assistance of the South Chicago Chamber of Commerce and local labor officials, the bridge became a reality.

Nicholas J. Bohling was general chairman of the 106th street bridge celebration; Charles Hirschfield was assistant chairman; Gideon Ekendahl, secretary; Charles W. Frey, treasurer.

MRS. O'LEARY'S BOSSY RUINED HIS NIGHT OFF

Fireman Leady Recalls Great Blaze.

fire with, finally, because as the thing grew beyond control we lost our hose going from one place to another. In some ways the horse drawn engines were better than those of today, but, generally speaking, those of today are worth three of the old kind.

Picked Hazelnuts at 12th Street.

"I always thought Chicago would be a big city, but certainly it is a wonderful town that has risen from the ashes. Why, I used to pick hazelnuts at 12th street near the river. Right after the fire, though, Chicago was dead for a while.

"How do I feel? Well, I'd like to see the next World's Fair. You think I will? Well, I don't know. I was out painting the garage today. Still, at 84—This picture of Engine No. 9 taken in the old days? I can remember every one but the one seated at the far right. It's on the tip of my tongue, too. I wonder —"

"That's Matt Merschon," recognized Mrs. Leady.

"Matt, that's right."

Leady to Attend Smoker.

Mr. Leady expects to attend the smoker celebrating the 58th anniversary of the great fire to be held this afternoon at the Great Northern hotel. The event will be given by the Retired Firemen's association in honor of the nine surviving veterans of the Chicago fire department who fought in the historic blaze.

The other eight surviving veterans of the 1871 fire—"71-ers," Mr. Leady calls them—are Isaac M. Adler, 7419 Paxton avenue, 89; Thomas J. Canty, 1113 West Madison street, 83; James Duff, Leavenworth soldiers' home, 80; Frederick W. Gund, 4938 North Winchester avenue, 79; Alfred W. Pendleton, 3713 North Crawford avenue, 92; Charles Schroeder, 2144 Bissell street, 84; Lawrence Walsh, South Bend, Ind., 88, and Nicholas Weinand, 1634 Larrabee street, 84.

Joseph Grodsky Heads Englewood Chess Club

Joseph Grodsky was elected president of the Chess and Checker club of the Englewood High school, 63d street and Stewart avenue, at a recent meeting. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Sampson Andalman, and secretary-treasurer, Charles Edwards.

DR. SACHTLEBEN HEADS CHATHAM BUSINESS MEN

Dr. C. G. Sachtleben, 7859 Cottage Grove avenue, was elected president of the Chatham Chamber of Commerce at a meeting of the organization last week at 7857 Cottage Grove avenue. Dr. Sachtleben succeeds William E. Mosby.

Other officers elected are: Vice president, F. R. Hanrahan, 8143 Michigan avenue; managing vice president, L. A. Friedeman, 8209 Cottage Grove avenue, and treasurer, A. R. Eunson, 8040 Evans avenue.

The board of directors is composed of the following members: S. G. Boberg, 8035 Eberhart avenue; R. M. Grattan, 7923 South Park avenue; E. A. Miller, 753 East 79th street; W. E. Mosby, 8032 Cottage Grove avenue; W. G. Donne, 8130 Evans avenue; D. N. Meahy, William J. Hubrich, 8227 Drexel avenue; Ben Stevenson, 6955 Bennett avenue; L. D. Sexauer, 8108 Eberhart avenue; E. A. Lyden, 8227 Chappel avenue, and E. J. King.

At the meeting last week a letter from Arthur C. Lueder, postmaster, was read in regard to the plea made by the members of the Chatham chamber to obtain a postal substation. The letter said a station soon may be erected in the vicinity of 79th street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Hitch-Hikes 8,000 Miles Over Historic Trails of Old West

The open road called and Louis Rysdon answered with an 8,000 mile hitch-hike over western mountains and prairies, through deserts and forests of redwoods to the Pacific coast and back.

Rysdon, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Rysdon, 6943 Perry avenue, left Chicago July 2 with a camera in his hand and a knapsack on his back to fulfill a dream of his high school days. For seven weeks he followed the trails of Buffalo Bill, Kit Carson, and Gen. Custer, the Oregon pioneers, and California's Franciscan padres.

The first lap of his journey lay through the Black Hills and the Bad Lands of South Dakota. At Billings, Mont., he "hitched up" with one Jim, a long, lean son of the old west who knew his hosses. He was, in fact, witness to one of his new friend's shrewdly driven transactions, and confessed that the deal was clinched with something stronger than grape juice.

Bear Consumes His Food.

There was a sociable bear at Yellowstone National park that, not finding any one at home the night he visited Rysdon's camp, enjoyed himself after his own hearty fashion. He certainly wasn't on an eighteen day diet, Rysdon decided, when he saw what was left in his larder.

"From Wyoming I hit the Oregon trail to the coast," Rysdon said. "I got perhaps my longest lift from Portland to Los Angeles. It was in Los Angeles that I met a young couple who spent the whole day showing me the sights—Hollywood, Beverly Hills, and other interesting suburbs. The woman had gone gipsying the year before. She had 30,000 miles to her credit."

Rysdon followed the coast back to San Francisco, lingered for two days in the redwood forests of northern California and Oregon, saw the sun set on Salt Lake, climbed Pike's peak by moonlight and, from the summit, watched dawn break and the sun rise.

Variety of Companions.

His fellow wayfarers included a famous geologist, an ex-rum runner, a grave digger, and a missionary from India.

"Even a couple of big hearted chorus girls from Detroit let me ride on the running board of their car one day on the stretch between Salt Lake City and Denver," Rysdon related.

About five hundred miles he covered afoot; the other 7,500 were made in conveyances good, bad, and indifferent.

Not because he preferred it, but because his time was almost up, Rysdon made the home stretch from St. Louis by bus.

"The people were wonderful," he said, "and the country all I had ever imagined it would be. I'm back on the job with dad now. In a year or so I expect to take over the management of our company. It may be a long while before I'll be hitch-hiking again, but it will be a still longer while before I'll forget my experiences on this trip."

Hyde Park Dames Club Holds First Fall Session

The first fall meeting of the Hyde Park Dames club, which is composed of wives of the faculty of the Hyde Park High school, was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Worallo Whitney, 5743 Dorchester avenue. Mrs. O. E. Robinson, 7329 Ogleby avenue, president of the organization, was chairman of the meeting.

A revelation in tone quality and furniture craftsmanship

RADIO at first was just an electrical novelty. Popular demand forced its development as a musical instrument. To-day, it must be in addition, a beautiful piece of furniture—a fitting companion to the artistic furnishings which distinguish the better American homes.

A truly up-to-the-minute receiver, then, is the Peck & Hills Radio, embodying all the qualities demanded by discriminating radio buyers. Tone is assured by the master design of the chassis, the vital part of radio. The quiet elegance and distinction of the console make it a thing of beauty.

To achieve tone brilliance, the Peck & Hills Radio engineers have spared no efforts. They have eliminated nothing essential. The volume is full and clear—without distortion. The tuning is sensitive to the highest degree—a slight turn of the dial moves completely off one station and to another. For the DX fan it will bring in distant signals clearly and a turn of the volume control brings them to program strength. Extra power is well under control in the push-pull amplification using two type 245 tubes. Matched dynamic speaker completes the ensemble mechanically—and the beautiful walnut cabinets in an array of masterful designs, make the whole perfect.

QUIN RYAN SET TO BROADCAST WORLD SERIES

New Booths Are Ready at Wrigley Field.

Quin Ryan will begin the broadcast of the first Chicago world's series since the advent of radio on Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. Microphones have been installed in the new glass broadcasting booth at Wrigley field, which will be used for the first time as the series opens. The booth is situated in the most advantageous position possible and will be in constant telephone connection with the score board.

Quin Ryan has been broadcasting baseball games constantly since the city series of 1924. He and Graham McNamee were selected as the radio reporters on the national chain broadcasts to announce the Pittsburgh-Washington world's series in 1925 by Baseball Commissioner Judge K. M. Landis. Quin Ryan, and consequently W-G-N, have broadcast more baseball games than any other announcer and station on the air.

Broadcast Every Day.

For the last three seasons there has been a baseball broadcast from W-G-N every day during the season. During the last season there have been the daily play-by-play broadcasts made from the Chicago parks and, in addition, minute telegraphic reports broadcast as they were dispatched from the out of town parks.

After the first two games the scene of action will be removed to Philadelphia. The broadcast from there will be made in cooperation with the National Broadcasting company.

Football Series Near.

On Saturday, Oct. 12, W-G-N will begin its greatest series of football broadcasts. The officials at the University of Wisconsin have agreed to postpone the season opening kickoff until the fourth game of the world's series is completed. The Wisconsin-Northwestern game will be reported yard by yard by Quin Ryan.

ARCTURUS A.C. BLUE LONG LIFE TUBES

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

SWEET are the uses of the radio station. Lecturing last week in Wisconsin we heard the story of a broadcasting station in a nearby town that rented fifteen minutes per day to a radio comedian. The comic fellow sang his songs and delivered his monologue, and then announced that his program was broadcast "through the courtesy" of a certain clothing manufacturer.

He said he would be glad to meet his many friends of the radio audience and would welcome them in the studio. When the listeners flocked to the studio, they found the walls draped with all kinds of men's suits and before they got out many of them had been sold a new suit—with two pairs of pants.

ANNOUNCER Pat Barnes tells the story of the fellow who just bought his first radio set and boasted that it was so good that he could get three stations at once.

MUSICIANS are eager for jobs in the radio studios. For one thing, they do not have to dress for the performances. No more of the stiff postures in the formal attire of the symphony concert or the theater orchestra pit. No more glare of the spotlight, and no more monotony of same music night after night in the musical shows.

Many radio orchestras have pictures taken in the garb they would have the audience believe they work in. We have seen motley groups of boys posing as forest rangers, railroad conductors, gypsies and whatnot, but in reality the majority are glad to doff their coats, vests and collars and feel at ease. The only hardship imposed upon them is the rule of silence, and instructions for shortening or expanding a program are flashed to them on a blackboard.

Down east in some studios the announcers are required to wear dinner jackets!

DO YOU RADIO listeners remember 'way back when——

The late Charlie Erbstein used to chuckle—and sing "Christopher Columbo" and "The Spanish Bull Fight"—and plead for cigarets for the soldiers?

The forerunner of radio at Comiskey park was the installation of the horns all about the grandstands, through which the batteries and pinch hitters used to be announced?

Two of the finest harmony teams on the air [both since dissolved] were Tommy Malie and Jack Little, and George Little and Larry Shay? And remember both teams wrote a lot of good songs, such as the former's "Jealous" and the latter's "Too Tired"?

George Hay, "the Solemn Old Judge," came up from Memphis to do such fine and homey announcing for the new station WLS?

Everybody had a crystal set—and a "cat's whisker"—and the aerial running around the picture molding on the wall?

Monday night was designated as "silent night," when all of the Chicago stations would shut down at 7 o'clock, in order that listeners might tune distant broadcasters more clearly?

The whole town listened to the seemingly endless Democratic convention in New York, with the series of roll calls invariably starting with "Twenty-four for Underwood"?

The Loos brothers, Billy and Ernie, were heavy radio favorites in Chicago?

Cigar stores and other shops gave away "applause cards" for the listeners' use in writing comments to radio stations?

Entire theatrical productions used to be broadcast from the stage in Chicago theaters. "Blossom Time" and "White Cargo" were broadcast by the old KYW, and "The Student Prince" and DeWolf Hopper's production of "The Mikado" by W-G-N. Then the Actors' Equity started an agitation and demanded that every player in the company be paid for a whole extra performance—one-eighth of a week's salary—if any part of a show were put on the air; so the broadcaster desisted from putting microphones in theaters, even if the managers desired it for publicity's sake?

Station W-G-N broadcast its Amateur Nights, and Spelling Bees, and Old Fashioned Favorite Song contest?

The chain announcers in New York used to enumerate all of the stations through which the program was being broadcast, and conclude the show by giving their own initials?

The papers used to publish weird diagrams and "hookups" for the early listeners who made their own sets?

Most radio singers were chanting the million verses of "How do you do, Everybody, how do you do"?

The Duncan Sisters were wont to broadcast almost every night, during their long runs of "Topsy and Eva," featuring the songs, "Rememberin'," and "I Never Had a Mammy"?

The long since dispersed staff of KYW consisted of "Sen" Kaney, Sally Menkes, Herbie Mintz, Art Linick, Bobby Brown, Lee Sims, Steve Trumbull, Frank Clark, Grace Wilson and the "Harmony Girls," Edith Carpenter and Grace Ingram?

A famous oatmeal company used to sell five dollar sets made out of their cardboard oatmeal cartons?

The Edgewater Beach station was WJAZ and the Drake hotel station was WDAP?

This announcer was "Uncle Walt" and the children's period was "Skeezix Time"?

It was seriously proposed to lay a government tax on all radio receiving sets and accessories, the funds to be distributed to the radio stations for their maintenance?

Radio stations, when starting in business, tried to get call letters which were abbreviations of the owner's name—as in the case of W-G-N, "World's Greatest Newspaper," and WEBH, "W-Edgewater Beach Hotel," and KTHS, "Kum to Hot Springs," and others?

The members of the family used headphones and sat around the receiver as though it were an ouija board?

[With apologies to Harvey Woodruff, the original "Way Back Wheneer"].

DILL ACCUSES RADIO ARBITERS OF FAVORITISM

Says Chain Organizations Control Programs.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—The federal radio commission was brought to task on the senate floor recently by Senator C. C. Dill [Dem.] of Washington, who is one of the most vigorous promoters of radio legislation in congress, for its apparent favoritism for chain broadcasting systems as against the independent stations. Interrupting a debate on tariff, the western senator warned the radio commission that unless it changed its policy the public will demand that the United States government take over and control all broadcasting stations.

Senator Dill roundly criticized the commission for its continual postponement of putting into effect general order No. 43, which would prohibit the broadcasting of the same program from stations not more than 300 miles apart. This order, which was originally promulgated on Sept. 8, 1928, has been delayed several times because it would practically prohibit chain broadcasting in many localities except for an hour each night. The last postponement was made on Oct. 1, when its effective date was moved up until Dec. 31.

Control in Hands of Few.

"The radio commission has been granting wave lengths, power, and time in a manner that is tending to put the control of an effective radio service in the hands of a few great organizations," Senator Dill said. "The forty cleared channels established in this country today are fast driving out the independent use of radio in an effective manner—forty cleared channels, with thirty-eight of the forty cleared channel stations on chains. These channels were cleared for the purpose of giving the people radio service all over the country on those channels—and they have placed those channels in the very best places on the dial, in spite of the fact that they heterodyne and cause harmonics beyond the limits of their own channels.

"The commission, under the law, has specific power over these chain stations. Nearly a year ago they issued an order which, if they had carried it out, would go far to remedy this situation, but every time the date for the enforcement of the order arrives they postpone it, and they have postponed it again and again."

Hits Proposed Mergers.

"Efforts to weaken the radio law in its monopoly features are being made all over this country today in the form of propaganda," he continued. "They want to repeal sections 13 and 17 of the radio law, so that the International Telephone and Telegraph company can buy the Radio corporation's interoceanic stations, and they want to pay $40,000,000 worth of stock for them.

"Mr. Behn said they were worth $25,000,000 when he was on the stand before our committee last June. Those stocks are selling today for more than $100,000,000; and, if it is permitted, there will be $75,000,000 of water to begin with upon which cable and telephone rates must be made high enough to pay dividends."

TOM, DICK, HARRY TO SING SANDERS' NEW SONG HIT

When Quin Ryan's voice introduces the Ozite Cushioneers Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock listeners are going to hear one of the most interesting programs these newcomers have yet presented. Old and new favorites are being offered.

With Tom, Dick, and Harry vocalizing, the Cushioneers offer first that new song by Joe Sanders of the famous Coon-Sanders aggregation, "I Gotta Great Big Date." The trio, who are fast proving one of the features of these programs, are also to sing "Break Away."

Lawrence Salerno, soloist, is to sing "My Mother's Eyes."

Radio May Set Watch If You Forget About It

The experiments of the Elgin National Watch company of Elgin, Ill., in the use of radio to regulate timepieces will be continued as the application for a renewal of license has been granted by the federal radio commission. At a recent hearing it was explained that the Elgin research men expected to devise a means of setting watches by radio while they are in the owners' pockets.

ON W-G-N TUESDAY

Mario Chamlee, noted lyric tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company, who will be heard Tuesday evening, Oct. 8, at 8 p. m. over W-G-N.

Angora Deserts Pastor for W-G-N Organ Music

A clergyman in Somonauk, Ill., is fond of cats. His large Angora, Rags, sits purring and blinking contentedly at his feet as the pastor prepares the message for his flock. However, he is thinking seriously of beginning a suit for alienation of affections. As soon as Larry Larsen, organist at W-G-N, Chicago, begins to play Rags is roused. Listening, he walks leisurely to the loud speaker and curls up, again contentedly, before it.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB PROGRAM ON AIR TONIGHT

The first broadcast of the Chicago Sunday Evening club's twenty-third season goes on the air tonight with Bishop Charles P. Anderson, for thirty years bishop of the Episcopal church in the Chicago diocese, giving the principal address. R. Floyd Clinch, a trustee of the club, and Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, moderator of the Presbyterian Church of America, will take part while President Clifford W. Barnes will preside. WMAQ will carry the program.

The club already has received requests from listeners in over twenty states and Canada, asking that information regarding these weekly services be sent to them.

Bishop Anderson, who is now vice chairman of the House of Bishops, and therefore the second ranking churchman in the Episcopal denomination of America, has chosen for his subject "Chicago Day," and the general theme of the meeting will be civic in character.

Edgar Nelson, director of music, states that the choir of 125 contains more solo material than in any previous season. Music students from all parts of the country are enrolled in this choir. Tonight they will sing "Hail Bright Abode," by Wagner, "Bless Our Land," by Cherubini, "Ho Every One That Thirsteth," by Martin. A new contralto soloist, Miss Eva Horadesky, will sing "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain," by Harker. Mark Love and Mabel Sharp Herdien will have solo parts.

ACOUSTICS EXPERTS SOUGHT.

A broad knowledge of electricity and acoustics is necessary for a new side line that has sprung up in the many sided radio business. That is the installation and maintenance of large sound amplifiers and public address systems in hotels, auditoriums, theaters and schools. Experts in this sort of work are in considerable demand, according to engineers.

WHITE HOUSE STUDIO ACOUSTICS PERFECT, ENGINEERS DECLARE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It was discovered when President Hoover broadcast for the first time from the recently restored presidential studio in the east wing of the White House that the acoustics here were what is termed in the broadcasting world as "brilliant."

President Hoover never spoke with a better acoustical background than he did that night, according to radio engineers.

Nor was the natural tone of voice sacrificed, as is often the case when a voice comes through too clearly.

CHICAGO ANNUAL RADIO SHOW TO COME OCT. 21-27

Chicago's Radio show will open for its eighth annual session on Monday, Oct. 21, and continue through Sunday, Oct. 27.

So complete is this year's exhibition that the facilities of the Coliseum, where the show will be held, will be severely taxed.

In a demonstration of television citizens of the central west will be accorded the first view of the most advanced status of radio's smaller sister.

There will be a "Radio Queen," the winner of an essay contest on the subject, "What My Radio Means to Me." Thousands of letters have been received by the management of the show. The woman whose essay is judged the best exposition on the utility of her radio set will be brought to Chicago as the guest of the radio show.

Arctic Flyer Scientists to Use Radio in Search

WASHINGTON.—A license to use the radio channels between [illegible] 300 kilocycles for use in the [illegible] dollar aerial search of the [illegible] northwest near the Arctic circle [illegible] Col. C. D. McAlpine and his party of seven explorer-geologists has been granted by the federal radio commission to the Curtiss flying service of New York. The radio equipment is to be operated on the amphibian plane bearing the numbers NC-6[illegible]. The license is good for only 30 days, and the call letters are KHEB.

People who take excellence for granted naturally turn to the new all-electric screen grid

Eveready Radio
THE PRECISION INSTRUMENT

THERE ARE many fortunate people in this world to whom good taste is second nature. They live pleasantly, yet not ostentatiously. They dress well, yet without extremes of style. Every possession of theirs bespeaks an admirable and tempered attitude toward living.

And quite naturally these are the people who are buying the new Eveready Radio. For there, too, just as in their houses, their clothes, yes, even their friends, they take excellence for granted . . . a radio which brings the smartest dance-orchestra into their living-room . . . which takes them to the sidelines of the big games . . . which places them ten feet from the speaker's table . . . this is the sort of reception they expect, and get—from this remarkable radio receiver.

But such people—those who are buying the new Eveready Radio—look for something more in their material possessions. They want permanence. This radio receiver is built to last. It is precision-built. Each part is put together with as much care as if an aviator's life depended on the winding of a coil. The assumption is that Eveready Radio users want a fine instrument, as fine in its way as all their other material possessions.

Mystifying technical names, new accoutrements, devices and mechanisms bore the buyers of this radio. They know they have the best. They know that improvements will be added from time to time as the large scientific organization which makes this receiver tests and uncovers their merits. But they leave the details to the experts. That is their attitude towards radio . . . houses . . . motor-cars . . . life in general.

And so, if you are interested in effects and take the causes for granted, if you order your life according to this principle and to the point, you will want the new Eveready Radio. See it. Hear it. Note how beautiful the cabinetwork is. Ask for the explanation, if you like, of its "weather-proof" principle; but remember that the effect is this—even on muggy nights the reception is remarkably clear.

THE NEW EVEREADY contains eight tubes, including rectifier. Uses three of the new screen grid tubes. Last audio stage is push-pull, using two 245-type tubes. Power-detection and resistance-coupling preserve original tonal purity and fidelity.

Special built-in electro-dynamic speaker of Eveready design.

Insulation is used only for insulating—not to bear the weight of parts. Original fine adjustments made in laboratory are not affected by weather-changes. Unyielding metal used to preserve accurate alignment of parts.

REV. ADDIS DRAKE ELECTED RECTOR OF ST. AMBROSE'S

Succeeds Rev. F. J. Tromp in Chicago Heights.

Announcement is made by Bishop Charles P. Anderson of the appointment of the Rev. E. Addis Drake as pastor of St. Ambrose's Episcopal church, Chicago Heights. He succeeds the Rev. Francis J. Tromp, who was recently elected rector of Calvary church, Chicago.

REV. E. ADDIS DRAKE. [Wallinger Photo.]

The Rev. Mr. Drake has been for the past year curate of the Church of the Atonement, Edgewater. He came to Chicago from the Canal Zone, where he was canon of St. Luke's cathedral, Ancon, and rector of St. Alban's parish, Paraiso. He also had charge of Episcopal church work at a leper colony in the Canal Zone.

The Rev. Mr. Drake is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and the General Theological seminary, New York.

St. Ambrose's church to which the Rev. Mr. Drake goes as priest in charge is located at Fifteenth street and Chicago road, Chicago Heights. It was started on Feb. 23, 1902, in response to a petition circulated by Mr. Albert Bunting and signed by sixteen church people. The first services were conducted by the Rev. James M. Johnson, then a student of Western Theological seminary, in Palmers Hall.

Altar Improvised.

There was no church furniture available at this first service, but an altar was improvised, a Bible and several church hymnals produced and St. Ambrose church was launched on a long and profitable period of work. On the following Sunday the first finance committee was appointed, its members being: Albert Bunting, J. M. Street, San L. Lee, George Munn, and J. R. Selsam.

During the following summer services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Higbee of Momence with the help of Mr. Johnson. When fall came the Rev. W. H. Mitchell took charge of the mission.

The next year was one of hardship for the struggling church. There was no regular pastor or fixed meeting place. But in June, 1903, the Rev. J. M. Johnson took charge and brought new life to the church. The boys' choir was organized and it has continued to the present time. Among the first members of this choir were Norman Gilbert, who was killed in the world war, George Cussick, William Cussick, Herbert Bunting, and Howard Lenere. Mr. Loughborough was choirmaster during the first few years.

Organized Church School.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson also organized a church school which has continued to train the young people for more than twenty-five years. During the next three years the church in use now was built.

The Woman's Guild-Auxiliary is another organization which has been connected with the church for many years and has been a great help to it. Mrs. Albert Bunting was its first president. Other of the early members include Mrs. Clayton, Mrs. Heartwell, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Fogg, Mrs. Stowell, Mrs. Newell, and Mrs. Buckingham.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson left the church in 1906. He was succeeded in turn by the Rev. J. H. Hard, the Rev. C. A. Cummings, the Rev. Frank Wilson, the Rev. Mr. Argus, the Rev. Mr. Louis Parker, the Rev. Mr. Parkinson, and the Rev. R. H. Fairchild. All of these men worked faithfully at St. Ambrose's church and helped to develop it to the high place which it now holds among the churches of the diocese.

At the present time J. T. Gorrell is lay reader. Other officers are W. J. W. Gilbert, clerk; Leighton Yentzer, treasurer; Dr. William Cusick, W. J. W. Gilbert, Dr. J. H. T. Gorrell, Philip Hawley, Frederick Law, W. J. Mathews, R. O. Wells, Leonard Yates, and Leighton Yentzer, members of the finance committee.

Lillian Naismith Heads Bowen High French Club

Miss Lillian Naismith was elected president of the French club of Bowen High school, 88th street and Manistee avenue, at a recent meeting of the organization. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Miss Mary Elizabeth Wildey; secretary, Miss Geraldine Pierce; treasurer, Noel Davis, and program committee, Donald Way, Miss Marion Gentz, and Miss Elsie Del Favero.

NEXT YEAR . . . your friends will be enjoying Tri-toned* Radio

but* YOU can have it NOW!

Many of These Modern Features Are Exclusive With the New Grebe

Screen Grid Tubes—The use of which results in sensitivity never before attained.

New Control for New Power—But in the New Grebe this added power is controlled. Overlapping of stations is eliminated . . . strays are kept out. You get the full tone value made possible by that exclusive Grebe feature—the Equalized Band Pass Filter.

Single Audio Stage Means No Hum—Grebe reception is so strong . . . so pure in tonal characteristics . . . that only a single audio stage is needed. Hum and microphonic noises are eliminated.

Large Diameter Speaker . . . an Original Grebe Idea—Full tone range is effectively accomplished by special large diameter electrodynamic speaker . . . so successfully introduced by Grebe.

For Superb Reproduction of Phonograph Records—You can play your favorite phonograph records by a mere turn of the tuning dial. This automatically connects the phonograph pick-up with specially wound transformer.

Cabinets Designed for Lasting Beauty and Acoustic Perfection—The New Grebe is obtainable in a wide choice of selected walnut and mahogany lowboy and highboy models. Furniture of characteristic beauty and dignity, expertly designed for acoustic properties. In a word, Grebe craftsmanship.

In the New Grebe, just announced, you find something you have long sought . . . but never before discovered . . . Tri-toned* radio. Music . . . with all that the word suggests . . . comes to you in its full, natural beauty. Distant and local stations . . . stations from all points on your dial . . . now get through to your home the full measure of tonal splendor.

The secret? Screen Grid tubes, of course. Yet Screen Grid tubes alone are not enough. In this one radio . . . which is setting next year's standards of design and re-production . . . you find combined with Screen Grid that exclusive Grebe development . . . the "Equalized Band Pass Filter."

Newer than Screen Grid Tubes

This ingenious device, worked out in the Grebe laboratories, controls the remarkable power of the Screen Grid tubes . . . without in the least subduing it. Outside noise and interference never reach the detector tube. A world of power . . . kept silent.

Radio is not a side-line . . . with Grebe

The craftsmanship which is the secret of Grebe Tri-tone* performance goes back for twenty years. Long before the days of broadcasting Grebe was building fine precision radio instruments . . . many of which did valiant service, during the World War, in the radio rooms of our fleets and those of our Allies. A pioneer in the radio industry, Grebe is still pioneering.

Your Grebe dealer wants you to enjoy this musical treat in your own home. You can arrange for a 48-hour residence demonstration to test the New Grebe as you will. Telephone your dealer . . . today!

*What is Tri-toned Radio?

Every musical instrument has three distinct characteristics: 1. Pitch, by which we distinguish the note as being high or low; 2. Intensity, or loudness; and, 3. Tone, or character by which we distinguish the sound of one musical instrument from another. In Grebe Radio you have re-production that gives you perfect blending of all three characteristics without unnatural over-emphasis of any part of the scale.

HEAR ABOUT ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN MUSICLAND—5:45

Thirsty, Alice drinks a glass of serenade this afternoon before venturing into the land of musical forms. She and the conductor encounter many a notable adventure among the odd inhabitants of musicland. Sprightly classics are played by the W-G-N Symphony which Gaston du Moulin directs, and the announcements are made by Pat Barnes.

JOHNSON & JIROUSEK SPLIT HALF HOUR OF CHOICE CLASSICS

Olda Jirousek is one of the most talented and skillful 'cellists to be heard on the air. Herbert Johnson has spent years developing a phenomenally well marked talent as a pianist. Both have appeared in the largest concert halls in the United States. Both bring their fine talents and their finely developed craftsmanship to two of music's most refined instruments tonight at a joint recital. 8:45.

SNAPPY DANCE TUNES SNAPPED UP BY JEAN GOLDKETTE TONIGHT

Stomping, laughing rhythms have been alloyed with precise craftsmanship. The musicians are eager. On the last syllable of the announcement Jean Goldkette and his W-G-N Dance Orchestra leap into an exhilarating dance tune. The instruments follow the subtle drum throbs precisely and with spirit. Hear 'em today at 1:30, 2:25 and 11.

QUAINT TUNES BY JOHN STAMFORD

John Stamford, tenor, makes the popular melodies mean something. The well known feature announcer sings several pretty tunes this afternoon at 2:15.

HICKEY & JOHNSON HAWAIIAN GUITARS

The modulated melodies of the Hawaiian Guitar snake across the ether as they are plucked from the strings by Hickey and Johnson. Their act today at 1:00.

PAT BARNES & OLD TIMER

Pat Barnes' Sunday Evening Guest is that charming fellow, Old Timer. The two exchange views on current subjects most interestingly. 7:00.

TONE CASTERS BILLED TODAY

A skillful trio known as the Tonecasters appears as the first bit of music on the W-G-N bill today. They're on the air at 11:30 this morning.

D. A. R. OPENS CONFERENCE AT GARY TUESDAY

Social Events Precede Official Session.

With distinguished Daughters of the American Revolution as honor guests, a series of dinners, luncheons, teas and banquest will mark the 29th annual state D. A. R. conference which will be held this week in Hotel Gary, Gary, Ind. Some of these functions are to be a part of the conference proper while others, of an entirely social nature, will supplement the regular conference program.

Four events are scheduled for Monday and Tuesday previous to the formal opening of the conference at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. The Indiana State Officers' club banquet, at which Elsie Mae Parker Cash of Vincennes will present an artist program, will be held at 7 o'clock Monday night in the crystal ballroom of Hotel Gary. Miss Mary Alice Warren of Terre Haute, president of this group of past and present officers, will preside.

Mrs. Crankshaw Honor Guest.

At 12 o'clock Tuesday the Indiana state regent, Mrs. James B. Crankshaw of Indianapolis, will be guest of honor at a luncheon in the home of Mrs. Frank O. Hodson, a member of the Gary chapter. Covers will be laid for Mrs. Hodson's luncheon for Mrs. Harriet Vaughn Rigdon, Wabash, Ind., national treasurer of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Flora Meyers Gillentine, Nashville, Tenn., national historian; Mrs. Josiah Van Orsdel, Washington, D. C., national registrar; Mrs. James Lathrop Gavin, Indianapolis, vice president general; Mrs. H. Eugene Chubbuck, Peoria, Ill., vice president general; Mrs. Charles E. Herrick of Chicago, national chairman of patriotic education; Mrs. James T. Donahue, Cleveland, national chairman of the D. A. R. magazine; Mrs. Julian Goodhue, Evanston, Ill., national chairman of radio; Mrs. William J. Sweeney of Rock Island, Ill., ex-state regent; Mrs. James F. Trottman of Milwaukee, state regent of Wisconsin; Mrs. Walter Tobey, Hamilton, O., state regent of Ohio; Mrs. Eli Dixon of Roseville, Ill.

Other Guests.

Also the following members of the Indiana state board: Miss Laura D. Henderson, Logansport; Mrs. Thomas J. Brooks, Bedford; Mrs. M. A. Doran, Muncie; Mrs. Edgar N. Mendenhall, Fort Wayne; Mrs. Roscoe O'Byrne, Brookville; Mrs. Charles H. Mills, Rensselaer; Mrs. James M. Waugh, Crawfordsville; Mrs. Roy A. Mayse, Indianapolis; Mrs. John B. Campbell, South Bend; Mrs. John McFadden, Gary; Mrs. Truman G. Yuncker, Greencastle; Mrs. Alfred P. Poorman, West Lafayette; and the following Gary women, who throughout the conference will act as special hostesses to the national officers and out of the state guests:

Mrs. H. R. Snyder, Mrs. Oliver Starr, Mrs. Ralph Hodson, Mrs. Joe Wildermuth, Mrs. Charles Allison, Mrs. William Matthew, Mrs. William Wirt, Mrs. Robert Davis, Mrs. William Hodges, Mrs. Frank Sheehan, Mrs. John Bowers, Mrs. Leslie Combs, Mrs. John G. Sponsel, Miss Keziah Stright, Mrs. C. R. Babcock, Mrs. N. P. Richardson, Miss Mary Newlin, Mrs. Alice Cothery, Mrs. C. M. Leary, Mrs. S. Brownsten, Mrs. A. W. Wilkinson, Mrs. A. B. Keller, Mrs. C. D. Davidson, and Mrs. C. J. Musselman. Madge Romine of South Bend, reader, will be the artist.

Paintings to Be Shown.

An art tea for all delegates and guests will be given in the art salon of the memorial stadium. The members of the Gary chapter will act as special hostesses at this event. Seventy fine paintings, purchased by the children of the Gary public schools with money earned in the schools, will be on exhibit.

A dinner for the national officers and honor guests will be given at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night in the Venetian room of the hotel by the state regent and the state board.

Other social features include a tea Wednesday afternoon for all guests of the conference, in the duneland home of Mrs. Oliver Starr, member of the Gary chapter, a breakfast Thursday morning honoring the former national president of the D. A. R., Mrs. Josiah Van Orsdel.

A dinner will be given Wednesday night in the hotel for the national and state officers, and other honor guests. Mrs. M. A. Doran of Muncie, state chaplain, will be hostess for this event.

Will You Work to Make Real Money?

$25 to $100 a Day Now for Good Men
$100 a Day or More for Sixty Days Before Christmas

ALSO A FEW BIG TIME JOBS

Listen, men! Do you know that the big money salesmen are making today is in direct selling? If you know salesmanship and salesmen's earnings you knew ten salesmen selling the old way making $100 a week or more five years ago to one salesman selling the old way making $100 a week or more today. Today the big money is in direct selling. It is the new method, the modern way of merchandising. You must keep up with the times in order to make money.

We have the livest line of direct sales merchandise in America. The first few weeks we were in business we sold 100,000 units. Our merchandise has the biggest eye value, is the biggest flash of anything you have ever seen.

Only one package of our merchandise is illustrated in the full page ad in today's Chicago Tribune. We have four other packages, each twice as big a flash as this one advertised and on an average more than twice as big a box for the money. There is a long commission for the salesmen.

We do not believe any salesmen could buy this same merchandise in hundred thousand lots from any manufacturer for a price as low as we sell to salesmen in dozen lots. The fixed retail price at which this merchandise is sold to the consumer is, we believe, less than the average wholesale price for goods of similar quality.

Altho we have been in business only a few weeks hundreds of men have already made from $25 a day to as high as $150 a day in this business. Many men make $25 to $50 or more the first day they work. With The Tribune full page advertising and with the other sales helps we are utilizing and with the wonderful new packages of merchandise we are producing and with every day drawing nearer to the Christmas season, we offer a truly wonderful and marvelous opportunity in this business.

The big money in salesmanship today is in direct selling. Now, if you make your living as a salesman it is time to do some serious thinking. Don't let the rest of the world move away from you. Keep up to date. Investigate what we are doing in this business. Make a list of a dozen or twenty-five things that are the biggest sellers, articles that are sold by direct salesmen. Then make a list of twenty-five people and ask each one of the twenty-five people if they are going to buy any one of those articles during the next thirty days. See how big a field there is for each article. Then take our line and you will find that there are few people, if any, out of the twenty-five who will not buy something in our line during the next thirty days. Then remember you have the big value, the appeal, and the eye value and the high quality which every buyer wants.

We will give exclusive franchises in outside territories for the proper sales quota. We believe we are making history in direct selling. Come on in and help us. Have a lot of fun. Make a lot of money. Ride a winner! Call or write at once.

Printers, Machinists, Salesmen, Permanent Employment.

We hired two printers this week. Work in their regular line was slack. We showed them records of men formerly working as printers now making $75 a week with us, who never have a slack season. We can use two more.

We have several machinists, one in particular who was ambitious to get somewhere and who gave up his master machinist card for the larger opportunities that we offered. He is now assistant sales manager, earning more than $5,000 a year. We can use several machinists.

This is a sales job, specially adapted to mechanical men. Every possible trade is represented in our sales organization, and these men make two or three times as much as they made at their trade.

Foreman Makes $10,000 Per Year.

Mr. M. was a shop foreman. He wiped out the mortgage on his home the first year with us and made close to $10,000.

Mr. G. was an automobile shop foreman before joining us five years ago, and who has earned over $10,000 in one year.

Mr. D. was a stone cutter. He made $100 the first five days with us selling. Now with us his fourth year.

Mr. B. was a coal miner; never sold in his life; and who earned over $500 in September.

Mr. K. belonged to the milk drivers' union joining us about two years ago; now averages better than $100 a week.

Not all our men are mechanics. We have lawyers, doctors, salesmen, clerks, and business men from every walk of life, who coming to us have found a new happiness and a permanent prosperity.

We want, due to our large full page advertising campaign in the Saturday Evening Post, several more men between 25 and 40 years of age.

These men will be trained at our expense and will be ready to earn real money in two days. They can take the training without one penny invested, without any obligation, and may walk out at any time they so decide. They can use this as a fill in job while waiting for an opening in their own line. We have had men come in on that basis who never did go back to their trades.

We are an international manufacturer, rated high in the millions. Call Monday any time from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Ask for Mr. Baldwin. Entire 2d floor, 537 S. Dearborn-st.

Men living within 200 miles of Chicago, write for address of nearest branch.

AN EXCEPTIONAL MAN

A manufacturer, highly rated and established for more than twenty-five years, has opening for a man of successful selling experience. Prefer one who has met and sold chief executives although in the final analysis, personality will be the determining factor.

The openings which we have at this time are in a comparatively new division of our business and for this type of work a successful record in the sale of advertising, insurance, office equipment, services, high grade specialties or securities would constitute an admirable recommendation.

As this division of our business is expanding rapidly there are openings for men of executive ability but only after a period of actual selling in the field.

This is not stocks, bonds, real estate, club memberships, insurance or books—nor it is posters.

Do not investigate unless you feel your services are worth $7,500 a year or more.

The territories we are interested in filling at this time are: Detroit, Western Michigan, Cleveland, Central Ohio, Pittsburgh, Kansas City, and there is an opening for one man in Chicago.

We will grant you a personal interview if you are able to interest us over the telephone. You may call Mr. C. C. Below on Monday for an appointment, Randolph 4745, or if you prefer, address H S 316, Tribune.

A SELLING SALES MANAGER

is offered an unusual opportunity to make money, with a real future, by an old established security house.

A good clientele, plus the ability to select and train others to work under his supervision is essential. An attractive agreement, very liberal in scope, may be had.

It is suggested that you write us fully, frankly, and in confidence, and an interview will be arranged.

SEASONED IN SPECIALTY SELLING.

If you are qualified to negotiate with large business concerns for the purpose of appointing them as exclusive distributors for an asbestos specialty, have no objection to traveling, then we have a permanent and profitable vacancy. Our sales plan has proven successful and our products are guaranteed, which makes this an extremely attractive dealers' proposition. This connection requires man capable of convincing others on first interview and presents unusual possibilities for large earnings as individual contracts run into steady amounts. Unless you possess the above qualifications please do not waste your time and ours. Will advance drawing account against commission. Suite 601, 10 N. Clark-st.

SALESMEN.

Actual experience in interviewing salesmen who are seeking better positions has proven to us that many of them would like the life insurance business. Lack of money keeps them from it. This has led us to adopt a definite program of financing men who need and deserve help. Please remember you are considering a business, not a job, a lifework worth while, and we will want to investigate before we make an investment in you. If you are interested, write and between 30 and 40 years old and have had the advantage of a reasonably good education, call at Room 985, 222 W. Adams-st.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

The condition of the money market has not affected our ability to amply meet the requirements of Chicago home owners who might desire second mortgage loans.
Money rates have been high, and the charges against second mortgage loans are up. It may be that our rates are too low, but so long as we enjoy the favorable circumstances as we have in the past it has not been found necessary to raise them.
We are interested not in excess of 6½% and a commission of 3½% for a one year loan, 6½% for a two year loan and 6% for a three year loan. These commissions are applied regardless of whether the borrower chooses to liquidate his loan in instalments of 2% a month or more.
We believe that we offer to home owners of Chicago and suburbs not only a unique plan of second mortgage financing, but one which is saving them a tremendous amount of financing charge.

AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE.

STUDEBAKER

EVERY CAR MUST GO REGARDLESS OF ORIGINAL COST

By Tuesday we will be moved out of our present quarters, but we want to move our used cars before we leave. That's your opportunity to make a sensational saving. Investigate this sale at once!

DE SOTO SEDAN. This $929-model was driven so little that today it is the last word for sparkling performance and beautiful appearance. Because of business reasons the former owner told us he wanted a bigger car, and that's the only reason he traded in this De Soto. If you examine it carefully you'll be forced to admit that it's brand new in every respect. Has 4 whl. brakes and very full equipment. Removal price $785.

CHRYSLER COUPE. A recent "62" with rumble seat. "I only used this car to drive me to the golf links and back," said the retired Elmhurst business man who formerly owned this car. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. The upholstery has not a worn spot and the finish is beautiful. Removal price, $825.

BUICK SEDAN. A stock broker who recently cleaned up on the market decided he wanted two new Studebakers, so he traded in this 1929 model even though he had given it so little use that it looks and runs like new today. It's a model 29-51, with 129 in. wilbase. The upholstery is luxurious and there's not a mar on the handsome lacquered finish. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, spare tire, bumpers, driving light, trunk, etc. Removal price, $1,385.

NASH BROUGHAM. Try to duplicate this Nash any place else at anywhere near our price. It simply can't be done! Every feature is in dandy condition and the equipment includes 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire, etc. The removal price of this Adv. 6 four dr. model is $545.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. This is probably the best Studebaker value in Chicago. It's a 1928 Dictator finished a beautiful blue. The mileage is very low as this car was in storage for almost a year. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire, and other extras. The motor is excellent. This car will not remain long at our removal price of $745.

ESSEX SEDAN. 1929 De Luxe model with 4 whl. brakes, seat covers, driving light, shock absorbers, etc. This car is a beauty and it has a sweet running motor. Removal price $595.

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN, 1927 Model 80 that is exceptionally clean throughout. Motor is A-1; 4 wheel brakes and many extras. Removal price $850.

HUDSON ROADSTER. One of the most recent models with rumble seat. It's de luxe in every respect. Finished a smart two-tone combination of light green and tan. Unusually well equipped. Very low mileage. Removal price $885.

PAIGE SEDAN, 1928 7 pass. Finished a beautiful tan. Has several hundred dollars worth of extra equipment. Removal price $950.

PACKARD SEDAN, 7 pass. Six equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, driving light, spotlight, bumpers, etc. Was traded in by a wealthy polo player who gave it exceptional care, performance and the appearance is unusually attractive. Will not remain long at our removal sale price of $685.

STUDEBAKER PRESIDENT. A recent 5 pass. str. 8 with wire wheels, fender wells, and hundreds of dollars' worth of extra equipment. Motor is smooth and powerful, and the upholstery, finish, carpets and tires are practically 100%. Removal price $1,285.

LOCOMOBILE SPORT SEDAN. This str. 8 never left the Chicago Blvds., and the result is it's in magnificent condition today. Originally cost over $2,000 and now it appears in the same condition as when it first left the factory. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, etc. You can make a big saving at our removal price of $885.

OAKLAND SEDAN. This 1928 was driven so little that today it is the last word for sparkling performance and beautiful appearance. Because of business reasons the former owner told us he wanted a bigger car and that's why he traded in this car. If you examine it carefully you'll be forced to admit that it's topnotch in every respect. Has 4 whl. brakes, and very full equipment. Our removal price is $625.

PEERLESS SEDAN, 1927 5 pass. The upholstery, tires and finish are in splendid condition. Motor has been carefully checked over, 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $595.

FRANKLIN ROADSTER. Now in new car condition. Extras are driving light, bumpers, spare tire, front, rear. The finish is like bright and shiny, and upholstery appears unused. Tires have little mileage. $595.

BUICK PHAETON. Late model Master 6 that is unusually clean throughout. Has spirited performance. Very classy two-tone paint job, and expensive upholstery. Many extras. Special for $575.

ESSEX SEDAN, 1929 that was actually used only 5 weeks. Has a beautiful lacquered finish, 4-whl. brakes, bumpers, snubbers, spare tire, etc. Motor is 100%. This car is absolutely brand new today. Can be had at about one-third saving.

CHEVROLET SEDAN, 1929; very low mileage; chance to make tremendous saving.

LIBERAL TERMS.
Open Evenings and Sundays.

PIERCE-ARROW OFFERS BETTER USED CARS FOR LESS MONEY

Used cars turned in to us in trade on Pierce-Arrows were originally owned by wealthy people in conjunction with many other cars. Each of these automobiles, therefore, received comparatively little mileage and was given expert attention. Result is when you buy from us, you receive a car with most of its mileage remaining—ready to give you new car satisfaction today.

CADILLAC SEDAN.
7 pass. De Luxe model 341, with special Fleetwood body. Unusually low mileage. Finish, upholstery and tires appear absolutely brand new. Wire wheels, disc wells, and many expensive extras. $2,450.

PIERCE-ARROW BROUGHAM.
1927 model 80. 5 pass. Actually used only 18 mos. 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. It's in wonderful all-around condition and really must be seen to be appreciated. $785. Also a PIERCE-ARROW 1927 model 80. 4 dr. Sedan at $885.

PACKARD SEDAN.
7 pass. Six, with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, etc. Was oiled and greased every 500 miles, so that it will satisfy the most discriminating buyer $750.

STUTZ 8 SEDAN.
Late model that is one of the most attractive cars we ever had in our stock. Driven so little that it's like new today. Has standard body and equipment includes 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, trunk, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $850. Also a recent Stutz 8 Sedan with Weymann body—fender wells, etc., for $1,250.

LINCOLN LIMOUSINE.
Was stored away while the former owner was in Europe on extended stay. Now at 100% throughout. Has Deitrich body, Houdaille shock absorbers, 6 practically new tires, trunk rack, bumpers, etc. $1,185. Also 1927 Lincoln Sedan with Dietrich body, like new, for $1,900.

CADILLAC PHAETON.
Model 314 Sport Phaeton with smooth performance and snappy appearance. It's a beauty. Unusually well equipped. $685.

OAKLAND COACH.
1928 that was traded in at a very favorable price, so we'll pass this saving on to you. Sweet running motor, 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $585.

MARMON 8 CONV. COUPE.
Any mechanic will tell you the motor is exceptionally good. A close examination will convince you the appearance is unusually smart and attractive. $795.

LA SALLE SEDAN.
1928. Has luxurious upholstery and wire wheels. Equipment includes 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Will not remain long at our special price.

LIBERAL PAYMENT PLAN.

START YOUR PHONE RINGING!

"HELLO! I saw your ad in the paper this morning—and I'd like to take a look at your apartment some time today. You'll be there all evening? I'll be out!"

That's the gratifying message that thousands of Chicago landlords hear every year in answer to their advertising. No need to ask what paper the prospect saw. Everybody looking for an apartment to rent turns to the Tribune's Want Ad section, the guide to new living-quarters from one end of the city to the other.

And they look to the Tribune because landlords give the Tribune the greater part of their advertising. They can find more space devoted to apartments to rent in the Tribune than in all the other Chicago newspapers combined—over 58% of the total—and by turning to the Tribune they can save themselves time and effort.

Get an early start on the rental market. Reach almost every tenant possibility in the city and suburbs! Place your apartment before the people who are looking for it! Bring them—start your own phone ringing by calling
